The date refers to a solar eclipse (the 15th day of the dark half of Vaiśākha of Gupta-Valabhī Samvat 257) when there was sūryoparāga . It is doubtful if the date has been correctly read, because in the month of Vaiśākha there was no solar eclipse from 574 to 591 A. D. See Bh. List , p. 189, fn. 2.

The inscription seems interesting as it proves the accession of Kharagraha I on the Valabhī throne before his brother Śilāditya (I) Dharmāditya whose first known date is 286 of Gupta-Valabhī era. From Viridi Copper Plate (infra , No. 189), Kharagraha I seems to have ruled as a full fledged king in 297 (G.-Val. Sam- vat). If this is a new and genuine grant, it indicates some political disturbances regarding the succession of Valabhi throne after Dharasena II. Perhaps Khara-graha I was de-throned by his brother (Śilāditya I) and again came to throne only after him. The conjecture is supported by the inscriptions of Śilāditya I. In his early grants the dūtaka (heir-apparent) is Bhaṭṭādityayasāsa. Khara-graha (I) comes as dūtaka in his records only in G.-Val. Sam. 290 and there-after.
