

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

ARCHÆOLOGICAL SURVEY OF INDIA

CENTRAL ARCHÆOLOGICAL LIBRARY

ACCESSION NO. 57452
CALL No. 704.940954J
BHA

D.G.A. 79.

MUNSHIRAM MANOHARLAL

PUBLISHERS PVT. LTD.

Oriental & Foreign Book Sellers,

P.B. 5715, 54, Rani Jhansi Road,

NEW DELHI-110055

THE JAINA ICONOGRAPHY

Frontispiece

Caturvīṃśati-paṭṭa of R̥ṣabhanātha gifted by Śaraṇikā, Caulukya, 860 A.D., Akoṭā. Gujarat, Baroda Museum.

THE JAINA ICONOGRAPHY

57/53

B.C. BHATTACHARYA

Foreword by

B.N. SHARMA, M.A., PH.D., D. LITT.,
Keeper, National Museum, New D

704.940 9543

Bha

MOTILAL BANARSIDASS

Delhi

::

Varanasi

::

Patna

©MOTILAL BANARSIDASS

Indological Publishers & Booksellers
Head Office : BUNGALOW ROAD, JAWAHARNAGAR, DELHI-7
Branches : 1. CHOWK, VARANASI-1 (U.P.)
2. ASHOK RAJPATH, PATNA-4 (BIHAR)

ISBN 0-8426-0663-1

First Edition : Lahore, 1939
Second Revised Edition : Delhi 1974
Price : Rs. 70.00

NAL ARCHAEOLOGICAL LIBRARY, NEW DELHI.

..... 57/52.....
Date 3-4-1975.....
Call No..... 704.940.954J.....
Bha

Printed in India

BY BHANTILAL JAIN, AT SHRI JAINENDRA PRESS, BUNGALOW ROAD, JAWAHAR
NAGAR, DELHI-7 AND PUBLISHED BY SUNDARLAL JAIN, FOR MOTILAL
BANARSIDASS, BUNGALOW ROAD, JAWAHAR NAGAR, DELHI-7

To Colonel

*Sir Kailashnarain Haksar kt., C.I.E.,
The Great Exempla'r of Education,
Enlightenment and Character,
This Book is respectfully Dedicated*

CONTENTS

Foreword	ix
Preface	xxx
Bibliography of Printed and Ms. Texts	xxxii
List of Illustrations	xxxv
Introduction	1-25

Fundamentals of Jaina Religion; The Digambaras and the Śvetāmbaras. Who are the Tirthaṅkaras ?; Origin of Jaina Images; Jaina Temple-worship; Classes of Jaina Gods and Goddesses; The Main characteristics of Jaina Images; Centres of Jaina pilgrimage; Age of Image worship.

CHAPTERS

I. THE TIRTHAṅKARAS 26-64

The Twenty-four Jinas; Jina Quadruple; Ādinātha or Ṛṣabhanātha; Ajitanātha; Sambhavanātha; Abhinandanātha; Sumatinātha; Padmaprabha; Supārśvanātha; Chandraprabha; Suvidhinātha; Śītalānātha; Śreyāṃśanātha; Vāsupūjya; Vimalanātha; Anantanātha; Dharmanātha; Śāntinātha; Kunthanātha; Aranātha; Mallinātha; Munisurvata; Naminātha; Neminātha; Pārśvanātha; Mahāvīra.

II. THE YAKṢAS AND ŚĀSANADEVATĀS 65-85

General remarks; Gomukha; Mahāyakṣa; Trimukha; Yakṣeśvara; Tumbara; Kusuma or Puṣpa Yakṣa; Mātāṅga or Varanandi; Vijaya or Śyāma Yakṣa; Ajita; Brahmā Yakṣa; Iśvara Yakṣa; Kumāra Caturmukha or Ṣaṇmukha Yakṣa; Pātāla Yakṣa; Kinnara Yakṣa; Garuḍa Yakṣa of Śāntinātha; Gandharva Yakṣa; Khendra or Yakṣendra; Kubera; Varuṇa; Bhṛkuṭi; Gomedha or Gomeda; Pārīva or Dharapendra; Mātāṅga Yakṣa.

III. THE YAKṢINIS 86-107

General remarks; Cakrevarī; Ajitā or Rohiṇī; Duritārī or Prajñapti; Vajra-Śṛṅghalā or Kālī;

Recd. from Mr. Manoharlal Poojari, P. W. Ltd. New Delhi for Rs. 76/2

	Mahākālī or Puruṣadattā; Acyutā or Śyāmā or Manovegā; Śāntā or Kālī; Bhṛkuṭī or Jvālāmālīnī; Sutārā Mahākālī; Aśokā or Mānavī; Gaurī or Mānavī; Caṇḍā or Gāndhārī; Vīditā or Vijayā or Vairoṭī; Amkuṣā or Anantamatī; Kandarapā (Paṇṇagādevī) or Mānavī; Nirvāṇī or Mahāmānasī; Balā (Acyutā) or Vijayā; Dhāraṇī or Tārā; Vairoṭī or Aparājitā; Naraḍattā or Bahurūpiṇī; Gāndhārī; Cāmuṇḍā; Ambikā (Kuṣmāṇḍī) or Āmrā; Padmāvati; Siddhāyikā.	108-116
IV.	THE DIKPĀLAS	108-116
	General remarks; Indra; Agni; Nairṭa; Varuṇa; Vāyu; Kubera; Iṣāna; Brahmā; and Nāga.
V.	THE NĀVAGRAHAS	117-121
	The Nine Planets; Sūrya; Chandra; Maṅgala; Budha; Bṛhaspati; Śukra; Śani; Rāhu; Ketu.
VI.	ŚRUTADEVĪS AND VIDYĀDEVĪS	122-132
	General remarks; Sarasvatī and Śrutadevī; Rohiṇī the Vidyādevī; Prajñapti; Vajra-Śṛṅghalā; Vajrāmkuṣā; Apraticakrā or Jāmbunadā; Puruṣadattā; Kālī; Mahākālī; Gaurī; Gāndhārī; Mahājvālā or Jvālāmālīnī; Mānavī; Vairoṭī; Acyutā; Mānasī; Mahāmānasī.
VII.	MISCELLANEOUS JAINA DIVINITIES	133-137
	Harinegameṣī or Naigameṣa; Kṣetrapāla; Śrī or Lakṣmī; Śāntidevī; Yoginīs.
VIII.	THE ĀSANAS AND MUDRĀS	138-141
	General remarks; Paryāṃkāsana or Samparyāṃkāsana ; Ardhahaparyāṃkāsana ; Khaḍgāsana ; Vajrāsana ; Vīrāsana ; Mudrās ; Jina-mudrā ; Yoga-mudrā ; Vīra-mudrā .
	NOTES ON JAINA SYMBOLS AND TECHNICAL TERMS	142-143
	APPENDIX B	144
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	145-165
	INDEX	165
	PLATES Frontispiece and I-LIII

FOREWORD

I

Hinduism, Jainism and Buddhism are the three main streams of religious faiths that have nurtured and influenced Indian life and thought through the ages. The origin of Jainism goes back to hoary past. It is recognised as older than Buddhism. The Jainas believe that right faith, right knowledge, right conduct and chastity lead the wayfarer along the path of salvation. Ultimate release from matter is, according to the Jainas, the ideal state of existence for the soul. As even the minutest being is believed to have life, the Jainas are very careful not to destroy it.

II

The antiquity of Jainism is shrouded in obscurity.¹ According to the Jaina Purāṇas and the caritas, their first twenty-two Tirthaṅkaras flourished several thousand years before Christ. P. C. Roy Choudhury thinks that, "Not much research is possible in the pre-historical age as to the role Bihar played in the story of Jainism. But some of the ancient Jaina scriptures mention that Jainism had been preached in Magadha (Bihar) by Lord Ṛṣabha at the end of the Stone Age and the beginning of the Agricultural Age. At that remote period Magadha was separated from the rest of India by Gaṅgā-sigara. The ancient history of Nepal bears this also."²

The discovery of a few seals and a nude male torso led some scholars to believe that they are the representations of

Dr. R.P. Tewari, Delhi University, has prepared the bibliography and the index and Śrī C. M. Srivastava, Archaeological Survey of India, has helped in the selection of the photographs.

1. It has been remarked that, "It is impossible to find a beginning for Jainism.....Jainism thus appears an earliest faith of India."—Furlong, J.R., Studies in Science of Comparative Religions, pp. 13-15.
2. Roy Choudhury, P.C., Jainism in Bihar, p. 7.

See also Thakur, Upendra, A Historical Survey of Jainism in North Bihar, JBRs, XXXV, 1-4, pp. 186 ff; Bajpai, K. D., Evolution of Jaina Art in Madhya Pradesh, Bulletin of the Department of Ancient Indian History & Archaeology, Saugar, No. 3, pp. 75-79.

their Tirthaṅkaras and were as such objects of worship during the Harappan age.¹ But this view has not been accepted by several present-day art historians.²

To begin with, Jainism was an atheist religion. Hence, like the Buddha, the Jaina Masters were also silent about the existence of god. But when the Jainas became idol-worshippers in later periods, they also started worshipping Tirthaṅkaras as gods. The Jainas believe in the existence of twenty-four Tirthaṅkaras, among whom Ṛṣabhanātha was the earliest. The last two, namely, Pārśvanātha and Mahāvīra, were historical figures. Mahāvīra was a contemporary of the Buddha. Another important Tirthaṅkara is Mallinātha, but there is doubt among the Jainas whether he was a male or a female.

Most of the Tirthaṅkaras were Kṣatriyas and belonged to royal families. They attained enlightenment by performing austerities and practised the law of piety which they preached for the spiritual benefit of human beings.

The Jainas regard their Tirthaṅkaras, 'law-givers', as Supreme Deities, superior even to the Hindu gods, i. e., Devadeva or Devādi-deva. They are free from the circle of transmigration as they have attained emancipation. The Jainas do not have faith in other gods, but regard their Tirthaṅkaras as fit objects of worship. They believe that the images of the Tirthaṅkaras should be installed in the temples for worship, their life-story should be remembered by the devout, the important events of their lives should be narrated and translated into stone, bronze or paṭṭas, so that people may see and follow them and thus free themselves from the cycle of birth and rebirth.

III

Ṛṣabhanātha or Ādinātha,³ the first Tirthaṅkara, is the propounder of the Jaina religion. In one of the verses of the

1. Cf. Modern Review, Calcutta, August 1932, pp. 152 ff.

2. See Shah, U. P., Studies in Jaina Art, pp. 3-4. See also Agrawala, V. S., Indian Art, Varanasi, 1965, pp. 21-22.

3. The reasons for Ṛṣabhadeva's birth are vividly described in the Mahā-purāṇa (III, 190-91); Ādi Purāṇa (XVI, 179-90), etc.

Rgveda, R̥ṣabhadeva¹ has been mentioned as a king, the bestower of wealth to his subjects, while Indra is described as the lord of the agriculturists:

आ चरणिप्रा वृषभो जनानां राजा कृष्टीनां पुरुहूत इन्द्रः ।

स्तुतः श्रवस्थन्नवसोप मद्रिग् युक्त्वा हरी वृषणा याह्यवर्हि ॥

—Rv., 1, 23, 177.

The *Bhāgavata Purāṇa*² has given interesting details about the birth of R̥ṣabhanātha :

इति निशामयन्त्या मेरुदेव्याः पतिमभिघायान्तर्दधे भगवान् । बहिषि तस्मिन्नेव विष्णुदत्त भगवान् परमपिभिः प्रसादितो नाभेः प्रियश्चिकीर्षया तद्वरोघायने मेरुदेव्यां घर्मान्दर्शयितुकामो वातरशनानां श्रमणानामूषीणामूर्ध्वमन्थिनां शुक्तया तनुवावततार । अथ ह तमुत्पत्यैवाभिव्यज्यमानभगवत्सक्षणं साम्यो-पशमवैराग्यैश्वर्यमहाविभूतिभिरनुदिनमेधमानानुभावं प्रकृतयः प्रजा ब्राह्मणा देवताश्चावन्तिलसमवनायातितरां जगृधुः । तस्य ह वा इत्थंवर्ष्मणा वरीयसा बृहच्छूलोकेन चीजसा वलेन श्रिया यशसा वीर्यशौर्याभ्यां च पिता ऋषभ इतीदं नाम चकार ।

—Bhāgavata Purāṇa, V, 3, 20; 4, 2.

In the Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa, he has been described as the progenitor of the Kṣatriyas on earth. He had one hundred sons, among whom Bharata was the eldest:

ऋपभं पाथिवश्रेष्ठं सर्वक्षत्रस्य पूर्वजम् ।

ऋपभाद् भरतो जज्ञे वीरः पुत्रशताग्रजः ॥

—Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa, Pūrva, II, 14.

and this country got the name of Bhāratavarṣa due to him :³

येषां खलु महायोगी भरतो ज्येष्ठः श्रेष्ठगुण आसीद्येनेदं वर्षं भारतमिति व्यपदिशन्ति ॥

—Bhāgavata Purāṇa, V, 4, 9.

1. Cf. also:

त्वं रथं प्रमरो योधमृष्वमावो मुञ्चन्तं वृषभं दशधुम् ।

त्वं तुभ्यं वेतसये सचाहन्त्वं तुजि गृणन्तमिन्द्र ! तूतोः ॥

Rv., 4, 6, 26, 4.

2. For details see the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, V, Chs. 4-6; XI, 14-26, etc.

3. This Purāṇic story of naming this country Bhāratavarṣa after the name of Bharata, the eldest son of R̥ṣabhanātha has also been mentioned in some other Purāṇas:

हिमाह्वयं तु वे वर्षं नाभेरासीन्महात्मनः ।

तस्यैवंभोजभवत्पुत्रो मेरुदेव्यां महाद्युतिः ॥

In the Śiva Purāṇa, he is referred to as one of the Yogāvatāras of Lord Śiva:

दधिवाहश्च ऋषभो मुनिरुग्रोऽत्रिरेव च ।

—Śiva Purāṇa, VII, 9, 3.

At another place in the same Purāṇa, his oneness with Śiva has been described in a remarkable manner:

इत्थंभ्रभाव ऋषभोज्वतारः शंकरस्य मे ।

सतां गतिर्दीनबन्धुर्नवमः कथितस्तु नः ॥

—Śiva Purāṇa, 1, 47.

ऋषभाङ्कुरतो जज्ञे ज्येष्ठः पुत्रशतस्य सः ।

कृत्वा राज्यं स्वधर्मेण तथेष्ट्वा विविधान्मखान् ॥

अभिपिच्य सुतं वीरं भरतं पृथिवीपतिः ।

तपसे स महाभागः पुलहस्याश्रमं ययौ ॥

वानप्रस्थविधानेन तत्रापि कृतनिश्चयः ।

तपस्तेपे यथान्यायमियाज स महीपतिः ॥

तपसा कथितोऽत्यर्थं कृशो धमनिसन्ततः ।

नग्नो वीटां मुञ्चे कृत्वा वीराध्वानं ततो गतः ॥

ततश्च भारतं वर्षमेतस्लोकेषु गीयते ।

भरताय यतः पित्रा दत्तं प्रातिष्ठता वनम् ॥

—Viṣṇu Purāṇa, II, 1, 27-32.

ऋषभाङ्कुरतो जज्ञे वीरः पुत्रशताद्वरः ।

सोऽभिपिच्यर्थभः पुत्रं महाप्राप्राज्यमास्थितः ॥

तपस्तेपे महाभागः पुलहाश्रमसंश्रयः ।

हिमाह्वं दक्षिणं वर्षं भरताय पिता ददौ ॥

तस्मात्तु भारतं वर्षं तस्य नाम्ना महात्मनः ।

—Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa, 50, 39-41.

नाभिस्त्वजनयत् पुत्रं मेरुदेव्यां महाद्युतिः ।

ऋषभं पाषिवश्रेष्ठं सर्वक्षत्रस्य पूर्वजम् ॥

ऋषभाङ्कुरतो जज्ञे वीरः पुत्रशताग्रजः ।

सोऽभिपिच्यार्थं भरतः पुत्रं प्राप्राज्यमास्थितः ॥

हिमाह्वं दक्षिणं वर्षं भरताय न्यवेदयत् ।

तस्मात्तद् भारतं वर्षं तस्य नाम्ना विदुर्बुधाः ॥ and also

—Vāyu Purāṇa, 31, 50-52.

ऋषभाद् भरतो भरतेन चिरकालं धर्मेण पालितत्वादियं भारतं वर्षमभूत् ।

—Nrīṅkha Purāṇa, 30, 7.

All these attest to the effect that in ancient times he was equally adored by the Hindus.

Rṣabhadeva also finds mention in Buddhist literature and in one of the works he is referred to as Vratapālaka :

प्रजापतेः सुतो नाभिः तस्यापि ऊर्णमुच्यते ।
लाभिनो ऋषभपुत्रः सिद्धकर्मा दुडवतः ॥
तस्य मणिचरो यक्षः सिद्धो हैमवते गिरी ।
ऋषभस्य भरतः पुत्रः सोऽपि मन्वान् तदा जपेत् ॥

—Āryamañjuśrīmālākāṣa, 53, 363-64.

Neminātha or Ariṣṭanemi also finds a mention in the Rgveda :

स्वस्ति न इन्द्रो वृद्धश्रवाः स्वस्ति नः पूषा विश्वदेवाः ।
स्वस्ति नस्तार्क्ष्यो अरिष्टनेमिः स्वस्ति नो बृहस्पतिर्दधातु ॥

—Rv. 1, 1, 16.

Pārśvanātha, the 23rd Tīrthaṅkara was a historical figure. According to Professor Rhys Davids,¹ he was the real founder of Jainism. He prescribed four vows for the people to follow, viz., not to injure life; to speak the truth; not to steal and non-attachment. Lord Mahāvīra, the 24th and the last Tīrthaṅkara added 'chastity' as the fifth.

Mahāvīra was a friend of Bimbisāra and his son Ajātaśatru, the king of Magadha, and hence, he commanded great influence in their courts. According to the Jaina canons, Udayana, the son and successor of Ajātaśatru, was also a Jaina, who is credited with having built a Jaina temple at Pāṭali-putra.

The Nandas also had some leanings towards the Jaina faith. The Hāthīgumphā inscription records that a Nanda king had taken away an image of a Jina as a trophy from Kaliṅga to Magadha.

From the Jaina traditions we learn that a great famine, lasting for twelve years, occurred during the time of Candragupta Maurya, the founder of the Maurya dynasty. The king, following his Jaina preceptor, Bhadrabāhu, retired into the region of Mysore and starved himself to death.

1. Davids, Rhys, Encyclopaedia Britannica, 9th ed. XII, p. 543.

Some scholars feel that emperor Aśoka, before embracing Buddhism, was a devout Jaina.¹ In his Pillar Edict VII, the emperor mentions Nirgranthas along with the Brāhmaṇic Ājīvikas. They have been taken to denote the followers of the Jaina faith.² His grandson, Samprati, was a great patron of Jainism and, according to Hemacandra, he had built many Jaina temples all over Jambūdvīpa.

A torso of a naked male figure was found at Lohanipur, near Patna, and is now preserved in the Patna Museum.³ It has an excellent polish preserved throughout. According to some scholars this sculpture reveals the existence of Jina images in the Maurya period. Another similar statue from the same site, but without polish, suggests the existence of Jina worship during the Śuṅga period.

King Khāravela of Kalinga (2nd-1st century B.C.), who was a devout Jaina, styles himself as Bhikṣu-rāja, i.e., 'the monk king' in his Hāthīgumphā inscription.⁴ The great king in the twelfth year of his reign, after defeating the king of Magadha, took back the Jina image which was originally carried away by a Nanda king from Kalinga. Later he excavated a number of caves in the Kumārī-parvata (Khaṇḍagiri hill) near Bhubaneshwar and built a monastery at Pābhāra, not far from these caves.

During the Kuṣāṇa period, Jainism was flourishing in northern India. Numerous stone sculptures fashioned during this period are now preserved in the Mathura Museum.⁵ Besides these, some exquisitely carved Jaina bronze images unearched at Chausā in Bihar are displayed in the Patna Museum.⁶

Jaina āyāgapattas (tablets of homage) have been discovered at Mathurā and Kauśāmbī. These are tastefully carved and

-
1. Thomas, E., The Early Faith of Aśoka, Jour. of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, London, (N. S.), IX. pp. 155-234.
 2. Banerjee, P., Early History of Jainism, Indo-Arian Culture, New Delhi. XIX. p. 7.
 3. Lee, S. E., Ancient Sculptures from India, Cleveland, 1964, fig. 14.
 4. Epigraphia Indica XX, pp. 72 ff.
 5. Agrawala, V. S., Catalogue of the Sculptures in the Mathura Museum, Jour. U. P. Historical Society, Lucknow, XXIII, pp. 36 ff.
 6. Gupta, P. L., Patna Museum Catalogue of Antiquities, pp. 116-17 and plates.

most of them bear inscriptions. On a few of these dyāgapattas, the figure of Tīrthaṅkara is shown in the centre. These stone tablets are assignable to a period between the 1st century B.C. and the 2nd century A.D.

The Jūnāgarh inscription of the grandson of Jayadāman datable to the middle of the 2nd century A.D., contains an important reference to Jaina monks who had attained perfect knowledge.

The wide popularity of Jainism during the reign of the Guptas is borne out by the discovery of several epigraphs and images. The Udaigiri cave inscription of the reign of Kumāragupta I refers to the construction of an image of Jineśvara Pārśvanātha. The Kahaum stone pillar inscription of the time of Skandagupta mentions an endowment in favour of Jainism, and the installation of five sculptures of the Tīrthaṅkaras in the niches of a pillar of stone. Several images of the Jaina divinities fashioned during the Gupta rule, are displayed in the State Museum, Lucknow, Mathura Museum and other museums of the country.

In the seventh century, Jainism was prevalent all over India as a fully developed religion. Bāṇabhaṭṭa mentions the Jainas along with Ārhatas, Maskarīs, Varṇīs, Bhāgavatas, Pañcarātrikas, Lokāyatikas, Paurāṇikas, adepts in grammar, ascetics who shaved their hair, ascetics who studied dhātuvāda, law books and sacrificial lore and ascetics who followed the tenets of Kapila, Kapāda, Upaniṣads and Nyāya.¹ Yuan Chwang had seen the followers of both Digambara and Śvetāmbara sects of Jainism at Taxilā in the west and at Vipula in the east.

An excellent image of Lord Pārśvanātha originally enshrined in a Jaina temple at Gyāraspur near Bhilsā is now displayed in the Victoria & Albert Museum, London. The image shows the great master seated beneath the Dhātaki tree practising the 'exposure to all weathers' austerity when Meghakumāra (Cloud Prince) attacked him with a great storm. The serpent king, the Nāga Dharaṇendra, spreads his hoods above Pārśvanātha's head and his consort, the Nāgaṇī Padmāvatī, holds an umbrella over him. The image can be dated to the Vardhana period, 7th century A.D.¹

1. Harsacharita, VIII, pp. 236-37.

By the beginning of the 8th century A.D., Jainism came to bear the brunt of those factors, which were at that time undermining Buddhism. Discipline became lax; a rich laity made the monk's life easy; desire for wealth, property and earthly honour guided most of the spiritual leaders of Jainism. Several great spiritual leaders, like Haribhadra Sūri and later Uddyotana Sūri and Siddharṣi Sūri, however, rescued Jainism from this insidious rot, through the message conveyed by their disciples. These followers of the gaccha, later on known as Kharatara, did not pay mere lip service to Haribhadra's anti-corruption campaign, on the other hand, they popularised the teachings of their preceptor by their preachings, writings, discussions, debates and practice. Jinavallabha founded and restored the old temples at Marwar, Chittor, Marot and Nagor in Rajasthan. His disciple Jinadatta composed works to get rid of the evils that had crept into the Jaina church. So also Jinapati, a contemporary of the Cauhan king Pṛthvirāja III of Delhi and Ajmer carried the message of his teachers almost to all parts of Rajasthan.

Kumārapāla Caulukya of Gujarat, acting under the influence of his great teacher Hemacandra, also popularised Jainism in his dominions.

The Bhaṭṭāraka Sampradāya contributed a lot to the development of the true spirit of Jainism in the early mediaeval period. This is attested by the numerous art relics at Deogarh and the region around.

Jainism continued to flourish during the Muslim rule also. Several Jainas held responsible posts in the courts of the Muslim and Mughal rulers. Due to their good financial condition and influence, Jaina yātrās in the mediaeval period were no less frequent than before.²

IV

According to Jaina legends, Bharata, the son of Rṣabha-

1. See my paper, Videśi Saṅgrahālayon men Jaina Pratimāyen, Mahāvira Jayanti Sūchikā, Jaipur, 1972, fig. 1 on p. 126.
2. Sharma, B. N., Social & Cultural History of Northern India (c. 1000-1200 A. D.), p. 115.

nātha, had built temples on the Kailāsa mountain for enshrining the images of Jina in them. And from that time onwards the people also followed the same tradition:

श्रुत्वा सकाशाद् भरतेश्वरोऽपि कैलासभूध्रे मणिरत्नचूर्णे ।
द्वास्तपसि जैनपमदिराणां निर्माप्य चक्रे जिनविद्यसंस्थाम् ॥
ततः प्रभृत्येव महाधर्मैः स्वं प्रतिष्ठया धन्यतमं विधाय ।
संरक्षयतेऽनादिजिनेन्द्रचन्द्रमुखोद्गतं स्वापनसद्विधानम् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāpāṭha, 62, 63.

Vasunandi states that all such places, where the Tirth-anṅkaras were born, initiated, enlightened and attained nirvāṇa, as well as the bank of rivers, mountains, villages, and seashore are suitable for sites for Jaina temples:

जन्मनिष्क्रमणस्थानज्ञाननिर्वाणभूमिषु ।
अन्येषु पुण्यदेशेषु नदीकूलनगेषु च ॥
ग्रामादिसन्निवेशेषु समुद्रपुलिनेषु च ।
अन्येषु वा मनीशेषु कारयेज्जिनमंदिरम् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha, 3, 3-4.

The same idea has also been expressed by Jayasena :

शुद्धे प्रदेशे नगरेऽप्यटव्यां नदीसमीपे शुचितीर्थभूम्याम् ।
विस्तीर्णशुभोन्नतकेतुमालाविराजितं जैनगृहं प्रशस्तम् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāpāṭha, 125.

Bhuvanadeva also remarks that the Jaina temples should be built inside the towns :

तीर्थकरोद्भवाः सर्वे सर्वशान्तिप्रदायकाः ।
जिनेन्द्रस्य प्रकर्तव्याः पुरमध्येषु शान्तिदाः ॥

—Aparājitaṭṭya, 179, 14.

The place for building a Jaina temple was carefully selected and had to be good in all respects :

रम्यां स्निग्धां सुगन्धादिद्रव्याद्याद्यां ततः शुचिम् ।
जिनजन्मादिनावास्थे स्वीकुर्याद् भूमिमुत्तमाम् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra, 1, 18.

As far as the material of a Jina image is concerned, it can be made of maṇi, ratna, gold, silver, brass, muktāphala and stone :

मणि-कणय-रयण-रूपय-पित्तल-मुताहलोवलाईहि ।
पडिमासकक्षणविहिणा जिणाइपडिमा धडाविज्जा ।

—Śrāvakācāra, 390.

Images can also be made of sphaṭika, but the use of clay, wood and plaster has been ruled out for preparing the images :

स्वर्णरत्नमणिरोप्यनिमित्तं स्फाटिकामलशिलाभवं तथा ।
उत्पित्तांबुजमहासनागितं जैनबिम्बमिह शस्यते बुधैः ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāpāṭha, 69.

Vardhamāna Sūri in his Ācāradinakara has restricted the use of bronze and lead in making the icons, but allows the use of ivory and wood :

स्वर्णरूप्यताम्रमयं वाच्यं धातुमयं परम् ।
कांस्यसीसवज्रमयं कदाचिन्नैव कारयेत् ॥

The Jaina texts relate that after the completion of a Jaina temple, one should go along with the artist on an auspicious day and time to select proper type of stone for fashioning the images:¹

घाम्नि सिध्यति सिद्धे वा सेत्स्यत्यर्चाकृते शिलाम् ।
अन्वेष्टुं सेष्टशिल्पीन्द्रः सुलग्न-शकुने व्रजेत् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra, 1, 49.

The authorities have discussed various types of stone suitable for the purpose.² Vasunandi states that white, red,

1. Cf. ग्राह्यां शिलां दिने गत्वा शोभने स्नपयेद् बुधः ।

— Viṣṇudharmottara Purāṇa, 90, 25.

and

उत्तरायणमासे तु शुक्लपक्षे शुभोदये ॥
प्रशस्तपक्षनक्षत्रे मुहूर्ते करणान्विते ।
गच्छेत्सिद्धिं समुद्दिश्य वन चौपवनं गिरिम् ॥

— Mayamata, 33, 19-20.

2. श्वेतश्च पद्मवर्णश्च कुसुमोपरसन्निभम् ।
पाण्डुरो मुद्गवर्णश्च कापोतो भृङ्गसन्निभः ॥
जेषाः प्रशस्ताः पाषाणाः अष्टावैते न संशयः ।
कृष्णवर्णा शिला या तु शुक्ला हीरकसंयुता ।

— Viṣṇudharmottara Purāṇa, III. 90, 21-22.

and

black and green coloured stones are the best for making the image of Jina :

श्वेता रक्ताऽसिता मित्रा पारावतसमप्रभा ।

मुद्गकपोतपद्माभा मांजिष्ठा हरितप्रभा ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha, 3, 77.

V

The images of Tīrthaṅkaras are purely human in form. They do not exhibit any unusual number of head, eyes, arms or legs. They are shown only in two postures, i.e., seated cross-legged, in dhyāna-mudrā or standing erect in kāyotsarga-pose. Both the dhyāna and the kāyotsarga mudrās are yogic, as the Jainism believes in penance (tapasyā).¹ They are unlike the images of Viṣṇu (Śeṣaśāyin) and Buddha (parinirvāṇa) and are never shown in the reclining pose. The images of a Tīrthaṅkara and the Buddha seated in dhyāna-mudrā are quite similar, but from the Śrīvatsa mark executed on the chest of a Tīrthaṅkara, one can easily distinguish it from that of the Buddha. In the Tīrthaṅkara images from South India, this particular symbol is, however, conspicuous by its absence.²

The idea of carving Sarvatobhadra (four-fold) Tīrthaṅkara images started during the late Kuṣāṇa period. This feature continued till the late medieval period. Some of the Sarvatobhadra images of the four chief Jinas (Ādinātha, Neminātha, Pārśvanātha and Mahāvīra) found in Mathurā, Kauśāmbī or elsewhere are remarkable works of art.

Several ancient and medieval works mention the characteristic features of the Jina images. The oft-quoted description has been given by Varāhamihira in his famous work Byahatsaṅkhitā in the following words: "the god of the Arhats" (the Jinas, i. e.,

कपोतभृङ्गकुमुदमाधमुद्गासितोपमा ।

पाण्डुरा घृतपद्माभा सर्वाचक्षुः शुभा शिला ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, I, 5.

1. Cf. Haribhadra Sūri's statement :

आम्यंतीति श्रमणाः तपस्यंतीत्यर्थः ।

—Daśavaikālika Sūtra, I, 3.

2. Sivaramamurti, C., Geographical and Chronological Factors in Indian Iconography, Ancient India, No. 6, (Jan. 1954), pp. 44-46.

any of the 24 Tīrthaṅkaras) should be shown nude, young and beautiful in appearance, with a tranquil expression and arms reaching down to the knees; his breast should have the (auspicious) Śrīvatsa mark."¹ The Mānasāra states that the distinguishing features of a Jina icon are nudity, Śrīvatsa symbol, long hanging arms, the meditative pose, etc. :

द्विभुजं च द्विनेत्रं च मुण्डतारं च शीर्षकम् ।
 ऋशुस्वानकसंयुक्तं तथा चासनमेव च ।
 समाङ्घ्रि ऋज्वाकारं स्यात्सम्बहुस्तद्वयं तथा ।
 आसनं च द्विपादौ च पद्मासनं तु संयुतम् ।
 ऋजुके च ऋजुभावं योगं तत्परमात्मकम् ।
 निराभरणसर्वाङ्गं निर्वस्त्राङ्गं मनोहरम् ।
 सर्ववक्षःस्थले हेमवर्णं श्रीवत्सलाञ्छनम् ॥

The Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra mentions that a Tīrthaṅkara should have a calm and serene face:

शान्तप्रसन्नमध्यस्थनासाग्रस्याविकारदृक् ।
 संपूर्णभावारूढानुविद्धाङ्गं लक्षणान्वितम् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra, 1, 62.

In the Pratiṣṭhāpāda, it is stated that a Tīrthaṅkara should not be depicted as an old man or as a boy, but as a youth. He should bear Śrīvatsa mark on the chest and should not have nails or hair. The image should be made either of good metal or stone and should display all the virtues of an ascetic or a vairāgi:

वृद्धत्वबाल्यरहितांगमुपेतशान्ति
 श्रीवृक्षभूषिहृदयं नखकेशहीनम् ।
 सद्भातुचित्रद्वयदां समसूत्रभागं
 वैराग्यभूषितगुणं तपसि प्रशस्तम् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāpāda, 151-52.

The Vivekavilāsa relates that a Tīrthaṅkara having Śrīvatsa on the chest and uṣṇīṣa on the head should be seated in padmāsana pose on a beautiful pedestal shaded by an umbrella :

उपविष्टस्य देवस्योर्ध्वस्य वा प्रतिमा भवेत् ।
 द्विविधापि युवावस्था पर्यङ्कासनगाऽऽदिमा ॥

1. S. 27. n. 2; Banerjee, J.N., Development of Hindu Iconography, p. 588.

देवस्योर्ध्वस्य चार्चा स्याज्जानुलम्बिभुजद्वया ,

श्रीवत्सोष्णीषयुक्तं द्वे छत्रादिपरिवारिते ॥

—Vivekavildsa, 1, 128-30.

The Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha gives some more details about the icon (bimba) of Jinendra (i.e., Tirthaṅkara). After mentioning his seat, etc., it states that he should be young (taruṇa), nude (digambara) and decorated in chest (bhūṣita) with a Śrīvatsa symbol. The height of the image should be 108 aṅgulas. There should be no hair in the arm-pit or on any other part of his body and no line for the moustache :

अथ बिम्बं जिनेन्द्रस्य कर्तव्यं लक्षणान्वितम् ।

ऋज्वायुतसू संस्थानं तरुणाङ्गं दिगम्बरम् ॥

श्रीवृक्षभूषितोरस्कं जानुप्राप्तकराग्रजम् ।

निजाङ्गुलप्रमाणेन साष्टाङ्गुलशतायुतम् ॥

कक्षादिरोमहीनाङ्गं समश्रुललाविवर्जितम् ।

ऊर्ध्वं प्रलम्बकं दत्त्वा समाप्यन्तं च धारयेत् ॥

—Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha, 4, 1, 2, 4.

The Rūpamaṇḍana,¹ an important iconographic text by Sūtradhāra Maṇḍana, devotes its sixth chapter to Jaina iconography. After mentioning the names of the 24 Tirthaṅkaras, it specifies their colour, symbols, Yakṣas and Yakṣīs and the tree under which each one of them had attained the supreme knowledge. It also describes the following features of a Jina image :

छत्रत्रयं जिनस्यैव रथिकाभिस्त्रिभिर्यता (—युतम्) ॥

अशोकद्रुमपत्रैश्च देवदुन्दुभिवादकैः ।

सिंहासनमसुराद्योगजसिंहा (सिंहासनेनासुरार्धगजसिंहैः) विभूषिताः ॥

मध्ये च कर्मवक्रं च तत्पाद्वर्षयोश्च यक्षिणी ।

द्वितालविस्तराः कार्या बहिः परिकरस्य तु ॥

दध्यै तु प्रतिमा तुल्या तयोर्ध्वं तु तोरणम् ।

बाहिका बाह्यपक्षे तु गोसिंहरत्नकृताः (गोसिंहैः समलंकृताः) ॥

कर्तव्या द्वारशाखा च तत्तन्मूर्तिगसंयुता ।

तोरणं पञ्चधा प्रोक्तं रथिकार्यं (रथिकायां) च देवताः ॥

1. Srivastava, B. (ed.) Rūpamaṇḍana, Varanasi, 1964. See also Jain. B.C., Jaina Pratimā Lakṣaṇa, Anekānta, Delhi, XIX. 3, pp. 204-13.

ललितं चेतिकाकारं त्रिरथं वलितोदरम् ।
 श्रीपुञ्जं पञ्चरयिकं साप्तावा (सप्तमा-) नन्दवर्धनम् ॥
 रयिकायां भवेद्ब्रह्मा विष्णुरीशश्च चण्डिका ।
 जिनो गौरी गणेशश्च स्वे स्वे स्थाने सुखावहाः ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 33-39.

According to the Rūpamaṇḍana, Padmaprabha and Vasupūjya are of red colour, Candraprabha and Puṣpadanta (?) (white); Nemi and Muni black, Malli and Pārśva blue, while the rest of them are of golden hue :

रक्तो (रक्ती) च पद्मप्रभुः ... भवासंपूज्यो (प्रभवासंपूज्यो) ।
 शुक्लं (शुक्लो) च चन्द्रप्रभपुष्पदन्तो ॥
 कृष्णो पुनर्नेमिः पुण्डरीकवर्णः (मुनी च नीलो) ।
 श्रीमल्लिः पार्श्वो (श्रीमल्लिपार्श्वो) कनकत्वचोऽप्ये ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 4.

The Aparājitapīcchā also gives some details of the colours of the Tirthaṅkaras :

चन्द्रप्रभः पुष्पदन्तः श्वेतो वं क्रीञ्चसम्भवो ।
 पद्मप्रभो धर्मनाथो रक्तोत्पलनिभो मतौ ॥
 सुपार्श्वः पार्श्वनाथश्च हृदिर्धो प्रकीर्तितौ ।
 नेमिश्च द्यामवर्णः स्यान्नीलो मल्लिः प्रकीर्तितः ।
 शेषाः षोडश सम्प्रोक्तास्तत्प्लकाञ्चनसम्प्रभाः ॥

—Aparājitapīcchā, 221, 5-7.

The Rūpamaṇḍana states that there are a number of Jina images and these should be adored as they are the bestower of happiness. Nevertheless it regards Śrī Ādinātha, Nemi, Pārśva and Vīra (Mahāvīra) and Cakreśvarī, Ambikā, Padmāvatī and Siddhāyikā as more venerable.

जिनस्य मूर्तयोऽनन्ताः पूजिताः सौख्यसर्वदा — (सर्वसौख्यदाः) ।
 चतस्रोऽतिशयैर्भुक्तास्तासां पूज्या विशेषतः ॥
 श्रीवादिनाथो नेमिश्च पर्वो वीरचतुर्धकः (पार्श्वो वीरश्चतुर्धकः) ।
 चक्रे चर्याम्बिका (चक्रेश्चर्याम्बिका) पद्मावती सिद्धायकेति च ॥
 कैलाशं सोमशरणं सिद्धिदातुं सदाशिवम् ।
 सिंहासनं धर्मचक्रमुपरीन्द्रातपत्रकम् ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 25-27.

A list of the 24 Tirthaṅkaras along with their emblems and Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī figures as found in the *Rūpamaṇḍana*¹ is given below in a tabular form :

No.	Tirthaṅkara	Cognisance	Yakṣa	Yakṣiṇī
1.	Rṣabha	Vṛṣa	Gomukha	Cakreśvarī
2.	Ajita	Gaḥa	Mahāyakṣa	Ajītabalā
3.	Sambhava	Aśva	Trimukha	Duritārī
4.	Abhinandana	Kapī ²	Yakṣeśvara	Kālikā
5.	Sumati	Krauñca	Tumburu	Mahākālī
6.	Padmaprabha	Raktabīja	Kusuma	Śyāmā
7.	Supārśva	Svastika	Mātanga	Śāntā or Śānti
8.	Candraprabha	Śaśi	Vijaya	Bhṛkuṭī
9.	Suvidha	Makara	Jaya ³	Sutārikā
10.	Śīṭala	Śrīvatsa	Brahmā	Aśokā
11.	Śreyāṁśa	Gaṇḍaka ⁴	Yakṣeṣ ⁵	Mānavī
12.	Vāsupūjya	Mahiṣa	Kumāra	Caṇḍī
13.	Vimala	Śūkara	Ṣaṇmukha	Viditā
14.	Ananta	Śyena	Pātāla	Aṅkuṣī
15.	Dharma	Vajra	Kinnara	Kandarpī
16.	Śānti	Mṛga	Garuḍa	Nirvāṇī
17.	Kuntha	Chāga	Gandharva	Balā
18.	Ara	Nandyāvarta	Yakṣeṣ ⁶	Dhāriṇī
19.	Mallī	Ghaṭa	Kubera	Dharaṇapriyā
20.	Munī	Kūrma	Varuṇa	Nādaraktā or Naradattā
21.	Suvrata	Nilotpala	Bhṛkuṭī	Gandharvā ⁷
22.	Nemī	Śaṅkha	Gomedha	Ambikā
23.	Pārśva	Phaṇī	Pārśva ⁸	Padmāvatī
24.	Mahāvīra	Simha	Mātanga	Siddhāyikā

1. Rūpamaṇḍana, pp. 98-99.

In the Aparāḍītapreśā (III, 221, 8), the word Kapayaḥ has been used for Kapī.

3. Ajita has been referred to in other texts.

4. The Rūpamaṇḍana wrongly mentions Khaggīśa for Gaṇḍaka, i. e., rhinoceros.

5. Iśvara according to other literary works.

6. Kṣendra or Yakṣendra according to other Jaina texts.

7. In other works, she has been referred to as Gāndhārī.

8. He is popularly known as Dharaṇendra.

It is evident from the above table that Maṇḍana has followed the Śvetāmbara traditions in describing the symbols and Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī figures of the Tīrthaṅkaras.¹ According to the Digambaras, Vṛścika (crab), aśvattha (Ficus religiosa), and ṛkṣa (crab) are the symbols of Suvidha, Śītalā and Ananta, respectively. The Digambara texts also record that Śupārśva, Śreyāṁśa, Vāsupājya, Vimala, Ananta, Dharma, Śānti, Kunthā, Malli and Neminātha have Kālī, Gaurī, Gāndhārī, Vairoṭī, Anantamatī, Mānasī, Mahāmānasī, Vijayā, Brahmarūpiṇī, Cāmuṇḍī and Kuṣmāṇḍinī as their Yakṣiṇīs. Similarly, Śreyāṁśa and Śāntinātha have Iśvara and Kimpuruṣa as their Yakṣas instead of Yakṣeṭ and Garuḍa as referred to in the Rūpamaṇḍana.

VI

The Rūpamaṇḍana mentions seven Śāsana-devatās in the following order :

Firstly, it describes Gomukha, the Yakṣa of Rṣabhanātha as of golden colour and riding on an elephant. He holds a vara, a rosary, a noose and a citron :

रिषभो (ऋषभे) गोमुखो यशो हेमवर्णो गजानना
(हेमवर्णो गजाननः) ।

वराक्षसूत्रपाशाश्च उभबीजपूरेषु च ॥
(वरोऽक्षसूत्रं पाशाश्च बीजपूरं करेषु च) ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 17.

The Aparājitapṛcchā refers to a bull instead of an elephant as his mount :

वराक्षसूत्रे पाशश्च नातुलिङ्गं चतुर्भुजः ।
स्वैतवर्णो बृषमुखो बृषभासनसंस्थितः ॥

—Aparājitapṛcchā, 221, 43.

Cakreśvarī is one of the most important divinities in the Jaina pantheon. She has been described of golden colour and riding on the Garuḍa. The deity has eight arms; her one hand is held in gift-bestowing attitude, while others carry a bow, a noose and disc, etc.

1. Srivastava, B., op. cit., p. 100. See also Banerjea, J. N., Jaina Icons, The Age of Imperial Unity, Bombay, 1960, pp. 425-31; Shah, U. P., Jaina Iconography—A Brief Study, Muni Jina Vijaya Abhinandana Grantha, Jaipur, 1971, pp. 190-218.

चक्रेश्वरी हेमवर्णा ताक्ष्णीरुडाऽष्टबाहुका ।

वरं दानं चक्रं (शक्तिशूलमनाकुलम् ?) ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 18.

The Mālādevī temple at Gyārasapur¹ has an interesting image, where she is shown riding on Garuḍa and carrying a noose, a thunderbolt and disc, etc., in her hands.

The Rūpamaṇḍana also describes a twelve-armed image of the goddess holding discs in her eight hands, and thunderbolts and citron in the remaining two each :

द्वादशभुजाष्टचक्राणि वज्रयोर्द्वयमेव च ।

मातुलिङ्गाभये चैव पद्मस्था गरुडोपरि ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 24.

The *Aparājitaṭṭra*² and the *Devatāmūrtiprakaraṇa*³ also refer to twelve-armed images of the devī. Dr. U. P. Shah⁴ has discussed the iconography of Cakreśvarī with the help of several photographs of the images from different parts of India.

1. Deva, K., Mālādevī temple at Gyārasapur, Śrī Mahāvīra Jaina Viśvālaya Golden Jubilee Volume, Bombay, 1968, pp. 262 ff.

2. Cf. वटपादा द्वादशभुजा चक्राण्यष्टौ द्विवज्रकम् ।

मातुलिङ्गाभये चैव तथा पद्मासनाऽपि च ॥

गरुडोपरिस्तस्या च चक्रेश्वरी हेमवर्णिका ।

—Aparājitaṭṭra, 221, 15-16.

3. Cf. अथ द्वितीयभेदेन चक्रे (स्वरी) ।

द्वादशभुजाष्टचक्रे वज्रयोर्द्वयमेव च ।

मातुलिङ्गाभयं चैव पद्मस्था ग (रुडो) परि ॥

—Devatāmūrtiprakaraṇa, 7, 66.

4. Shah, U. P., Iconography of Cakreśvarī, the Yakṣī of Ṛṣabhanātha, Jour. of the Oriental Institute, Baroda, XX, 3, pp. 280-313 and plates; Settā, S., Cakreśvarī in Kārṇāṭak Literature and Art, Oriental Art, (N. S.) London, XVII, 1, pp. 63-69 and figures; Sharma, B. N., Unpublished Jaina Bronzes in the National Museum, New Delhi, Jour. of the Oriental Institute, Baroda, XIX, 3, p. 276, fig 2; Some Interesting Temple Sculptures at Osīā, Rospa-Lekhā, New Delhi, XL, 1 & 2, pp. 100-101, fig VII; Gandhāvala Kī Jaina Mūrtiyān, Anekānta, Delhi, XIX, 1-2, pp. 129 ff, fig. 4.

Ambikā is of yellow colour and rides the lion. She holds a bunch of mangoes, a serpent-noose, a goad and a child :

सिंहासनाम्बिका पीता मलुं वि ? (त्वाग्रकं ?) नागपाशकम् ।

अङ्कुशञ्च तथा पुत्रं तथा हस्तेष्वनुक्रमात् ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 19.

From the above description it appears that the text refers to a four-armed image. The Aparājitapṛcchā mentions a two-armed image of the goddess carrying a fruit and a child in her hands :

हरिद्वर्णा सिंहसंस्था द्विभुजा च फलं वरम् ।

पुत्रेणोपास्यमाना च सुतोत्सङ्गा तथाम्बिका ॥

—Aparājitapṛcchā, 221, 36.

Several varieties of the images of Ambikā are known from various parts of India.¹

Pārśva, the Yakṣa of Pārśvanātha has been described as of black colour. He holds in his hands a citron, cobras, and a mongoose :

पार्श्वः स्यात् पार्श्वनाथस्य कूर्मारुडो गजाननः ।

बीजपुरोरगं नागं नकुलं श्यामवर्णकैः ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 20.

The Aparājitapṛcchā, on the other hand, states that he should carry a bow, an arrow, a bhṛṅgā and a mudgara :

पार्श्वो धनुर्बाणभृण्डमुद्गरश्च फलं वरः ।

संरूपः श्यामवर्णः कर्तव्यः शान्तिमिच्छता ॥

—Aparājitapṛcchā, 221, 55.

Padmāvati has red complexion and she rides on a cock. In her four hands, she holds a lotus, a noose, a goad and a citron :

रक्तायसवती पूर्णा (पद्मा) कुकुटोरग

(कुकुटस्था) चतुर्भुजा ।

पद्मपाशोशी (पद्मपाशाङ्कुशी) बीज-

पूरं हस्तेषु कारयेत् (धारयेत्) ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 21.

1. Shah, U. P., Iconography of the Jaina Goddess Ambikā, Jour. of the University of Bombay, x, 2, pp. 195-218; Muni Jayantavijayaṇi, Holy Ābā, Bhavanagar, 1954, fig. 29.

The Aparājitaprecchā also describes a four-armed image of the goddess as follows :

पाशाङ्कुशौ पद्मवरे रक्तवर्णा चतुर्भुजा ।
पद्मासना कुक्कुटस्था स्वाता पद्मावतीति च ॥

—Aparājitaprecchā, 221, 37.

Several images of Padmāvati have been discovered in Gujarat, Rajasthan and Madhya Pradesh. Of these, the finest sculpture can be seen in the Śāntinātha temple at Khajurāho, where she is shown seated at ease with her consort Dharapendra.¹

Mātāṅga, the Yakṣa of Mahāvīra, has been described as riding on an elephant and holding a mongoose in his right hand and a citron in the left :

महावीरस्य मातङ्गो गजाखंडो (गजाखंडः) मितो भवेत् ।
दक्षिणे नकुलं हस्ते वामे स्याद् बीजपूरकम् ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 22.

In the Aparājitaprecchā, he has been mentioned in the following words :

फलं वरोऽथ द्विभुजो मातङ्गो हस्तिसंस्थितः ।
यक्षाश्चतुर्विंशतिकास्तवर्षभादितः क्रमात् ॥

—Aparājitaprecchā, 221, 56.

Another important Jaina goddess described in the Rūpamaṇḍana is Siddhāyikā.² The four-armed devī having blue complexion rides on a lion. She holds a manuscript, an arrow and a citron, while her remaining hand displays abhaya-mudrā:

सिद्धायिका (सिद्धायिका) नीलवर्णा
सिद्धा —(सिद्धा—) खंडा चतुर्भुजा ।
पुस्तकं चाभयं दत्ते (घत्ते)
वाणं वै मातुलिङ्गकम् ॥

—Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 23.

1. Bhattacharyya, A. K., An Introduction to the Iconography of the Jaina Goddess Padmāvati, Muni Jinavijaya Abhinandana Grantha, Jaipur, 1971, pp 219-29; Jain, Niraj, Khajurāho Ke Jaina Mandira, Satna 1970, pl. II.
2. Shah, U. P., Yakṣi of the twenty-fourth Jina Mahāvīra, Jour. of the Oriental Institute, Baroda, XXII, 1-2, pp. 78 and plates. A medieval seated image of the devī is also preserved in the State Museum, Lucknow. See the Mahāvīra Jevanti Smṛtikā, Jaipur, 1973, plate facing page 4.

The Aparājitapṛechā mentions a two-armed image of Siddhāyikā as below :

द्विभुजा कनकाभा च पुस्तकं चाभयं तथा ।

सिद्धायिका तु कर्तव्या भद्रासनसमन्विता ॥

—Aparājitapṛechā, 221, 38.

VII

The Jaina literature classifies the subsidiary divinities into four classes, namely, Jyotiṣī, Vimānavāsī, Bhavanapati and Vyantara, based on their natural and individual affiliations. The Rūpamaṇḍana mentions the names of twenty-four *Nakṣatras*¹ and twelve Rāśis,² but does not give their iconographic features. It also narrates the eight Pratihāryas,³ viz., Indra, Indrajaya, Mahendra, Vijaya, Dharaṇendra, Padmaka, Sunābha, Suradundubhi and furnishes details about each of them. The description appears to be based on the Aparājitapṛechā.⁴

The developed iconometry of the Jaina pantheon and the profuse number of Jaina images during the medieval period tend to indicate the growing Tāntric influence which had gained ground during this period. It also shows that the Hindu Purāṇic religion had its inter-action on the medieval Indian culture including the field of plastic art.

Besides a few iconographic texts referred to above, there are several other literary works like the Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi,

1. Rūpamaṇḍana, VI, 7-8.

2. Ibid., 10-11.

3. Ibid., 28-32.

4. Cf. फलं वज्राक्षकुशी दण्ड इन्द्रोऽस्रव्ये इन्द्रजयः ।

द्वौ वज्रो फलदण्डौ च महेंद्रोऽस्रव्ये विजयः ? ॥

तदायुधयोगोद्भववास्त्रपञ्चाश्वफणा (ग्रहा) मताः ।

धरणेन्द्रः पद्मकश्च सर्वे शान्तिकराः स्मृताः ॥

यक्षरूपाधिकाराश्च निधिहस्ताः शुभोदराः ।

सर्वशान्तिप्रदावेवं सुनाभः सुरदुन्दुभिः ॥

इत्यष्टौ च जिनेन्द्रस्य प्रतिहाराश्च शान्तिदाः ।

नगरादौ पुरे ग्रामे सर्वविघ्नप्रणाशनाः ॥

—Aparājitapṛechā, 220, 35-38.

Dīpāṇava, Samarāṅga-Sūtradhāra, Prasādamāṇḍana, Rājavallabha, Devatāmūrtiprakaraṇa, Kāśyapa-Saṁhitā, Rāya-Paseṇī-Jīvābhigama, Tilopaṇṇatti, Vāstusāraprakaraṇa, etc., which provide a mine of information to a student of Jaina art and iconography.

VIII

Professor B. C. Bhattacharya, the celebrated author of the Jaina Iconography, was a distinguished scholar of Indology deeply interested in the study of Indian iconography, literature and culture. His researches in the field of Jaina iconography were not only pioneering works of their times but still form the basis of research in Jainology. Obviously the book has always been in great demand. It is a matter of regret that Professor Bhattacharya did not live to revise and see the second edition of his book. The publication of the present edition by M/s. Motilal Banarsidass, the leading Indological Publishers of India, at the time of the 2500th Nirvāṇotsava of Lord Mahāvīra is a fitting tribute to the great contribution made by Professor Bhattacharya and a great service to the students of Jainology.

National Museum,
New Delhi.
Mahāvīra Jayanti, 1974.

B. N. SHARMA KEEPER

PREFACE

Following my Brāhmaṇic Iconography, "Indian Images" Part I, published in 1921, I present to the public the Jaina Iconography now after a lapse of nearly two decades. The delay has been long but unavoidable on account of several family mishaps even though the MS. had almost been completed by the end of 1926. An additional difficulty in my way was that of a suitable publisher for undertaking the printing and publishing of a book which by its very nature calls for illustrative plates. I make my apology to those scholars, both in this country and the west, who by their frequent enquiries about this volume have kept alive in me the desire for presenting it to the public, a desire which might otherwise have been killed in the midst of my many trials and misfortunes. I offer my thanks also to the enterprising proprietors of the Punjab Sanskrit Series who, of all Oriental publishers, have placed me in their debt by readily undertaking to bring out this first book on Jaina Iconography.

The study of iconography and that of sculptures are inseparable. To all students of arts and culture, therefore, I hope, this book will present a new interest.

To rescue the hitherto hidden materials of Jaina Iconography from their hiding places, I turned my attention in the first place to the published and unpublished literature of Jaina School. To be justly enlightened on the subject, I freely sought the guidance of orthodox Jaina scholars who, though deeply learned in Jaina philosophy, were unable to adequately indicate the various texts relating to the Jaina images, scattered over in their ritualistic literature. In order to find these, I took to exploring the different MS. collections preserved in far distant places of our country. This involved me in visits to Arrah, Agra, Bikaner, Baroda, Ahmadabad, Rajkot and several other places where such literature was to be found. Everywhere I was received with great kindness by the reverend monks of the sect, who placed at my disposal their MSS. and allowed me to copy out such of them as, I thought, would be useful. I acknowledge my profound debt of gratitude to those monks whose memory even at this day is my cherished possession. At the same time as I visited the monasteries, I renewed my visits to all the Museums of Northern India and also personally explored many old sites of Jaina ruins in search of images properly illustrative of the iconographic texts. Within about three years, I was able to collect a vast store of materials for my purpose. The present book is the product of all my humble researches on the subject.

In the ever expanding field of Indology some intolerance and unfriendliness still hold sway. This is to be regretted. In the field of Indological research more, I believe, could be achieved by mutual sympathy and understanding and less, very much less by the lack of them. Criticism of a constructive character is always extremely helpful ; and no one need grudge it, I mean, no one who has the interest of truth nearest to his heart. I am no judge of my own work. Having put the first furrow in the hitherto fallow field of Jaina Iconography, I place with considerable diffidence this humble work of mine in the hands of Orientalists for their criticism and suggestion which, I doubt not, will be of great help to me in seeing much that I may not have seen at first.

To my general readers my request is that they may be pleased to read the introduction and the introductory paragraphs of each chapter and then relate and compare them to the illustrations at the end of the book.

In conclusion, I desire to record my cordial thanks to Kumar Probodhendu Nath Tagore B.L. for same financial help and to Khan Bahadur Maqsud Ali Khan (C.S. ret.), Chief Secretary to H.H. the Maharaja of Benaras, for his benevolent encouragement and ready sympathy. I have also to express my indebtedness to my esteemed friend, Professor U.C. Nag M.A. Ph.D. for many useful suggestions and to my old student, Mr. T.N. Sarkar B.A. (U.P. Police), for preparing under my instruction the index of this volume.

Durgakund Road,
Banares, U.P.
January 20, 1939

B C.B.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PRINTED AND MS. TEXTS

I. ORIGINAL BOOKS CONSULTED

1. Tattvārthādhigama Sūtra (Asiatic Society of Bengal).
2. Dravya-Saṃgraha (Sacred Books of the Jains) by Nemi Chandra, about 10th Century A.D.
3. Pañcāstikāya.
4. Pañcāstikāya Samayasāra, by Kundakundācārya, (S.B.I.) Dated 50 B.C.
5. Adhyātma Tattvālokā (Tran. by M.J. Mehta).
6. Jaina Sūtra (Tran. by H. Jacobi, Sacred Books of East).
7. Syādvādamāñjari, by Malliṣeṇa.
8. Tattvārtha-rāja-Vārttika, by Umāsvāti (Sānātana Jaina Granthamālā, Benares). Circa 3rd cent A.D.
9. Sāmāyika-Pāṭha.
10. Samantabhadra-cārya's Bṛhat Svayambhu Stotra.
11. Uttarādhyayana-Sūtra.
12. Pravacana-sāra, by Kunda-Kundācārya, (Bhandarkar's Report on the search for Sanskrit MSS, 1883-89).
13. Hemachandra's Abhidhāna Cintāmaṇi (Ed. by Otto Boehtlingk, St. Petersburg).
14. The Antagaḍa-Ḍasāo (Oriental Tran. Fund).
15. Hemachandra's Triṣaṣṭi-Śālākā Puruṣa-Caritra which is based (10 vols., Published at Bhavnagar 1906-09 by Jaina Dharma Prakāśaka Sabhā) upon older sources. The author's floruit is 1089, p. 117.
16. Uttarapurāṇa by Jinasena composed about the 8th. century A.D.
17. Kalpa-Sūtra (Ed. by Jacobi and Rev. Stevenson, 1848), by Bhadrabāhu.
18. Pārśvanātha-Carita, by Bhavadeva Suri, Dated A.D. 1356
19. Ācārāṅga Sūtra (S.B.E.)
20. Āśādhara's Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra. A.D. 1200-50.
21. Guṇa Vijaya Sūri's Neminātha-Carita (Prose) Nirṇaya Sagar Press, about Śamvat 16.
22. Jñānārṇava, Nirṇaya Sagar Press.
23. Sattva-Sāroddhāra.

II. MSS. and TEXTS.

1. Ācāra-dinakara (Rāmghaṭ Jaina Collection) by Vardhamāna Sūri Pūjāvidhi Chapter and द्वितीय बिभाग called the Pratiṣṭhāvidhi treats of Iconography. MSS. No. 26 74 19 36. Cf. pp. no. 12500 Patan Bhāṇḍāra 2, 3-4, 14th century A.D.
2. Vāstusāra and Pratiṣṭhāsāra-Saṃgraha, MSS. No. 68 Jaina Collection, Jñāna Mandir, Baroda.
3. Vasunandi's Pratiṣṭhā-sāra Saṃgraha, (Jaina Siddhānta-bhavan, Arrah) :

Beginning : विज्ञानवादसंस्मृताद्वाग्देवीकरूपतस्तथा ।

चन्द्रप्रज्ञप्तिस्तथाच्च सूर्यप्रज्ञप्तिप्रत्यतः ॥

तथा महापुराणार्थाच्छ्रावकाध्ययनश्रुतात् ।

सारं संगृह्य वक्ष्येऽहं प्रतिष्ठासारसंग्रहम् ।

तत्र तावत् प्रवक्ष्यामि प्रतिष्ठासारलक्षणम् ।

तस्योदयान्तो (?) दसमाद्विंशकर्मप्रवर्तनम् ॥

4. Prayacana-Sāroddhāra, Ch. 26 and 27.
 - (a) Ramghaṭ Collection, Benares.
 - (b) MSS. Chhani Jaina Bhandara, Baroda.
Tīkā by Siddhasena Suri, 1142 Samvat, (Jaina Bhandara, Limdi, Kathiawad).
 - (c) Colophon—तेषां गुणिवु गुरुणां शिष्यः श्रीसिद्धसेनसूरिरिमां प्रवचनसारोद्धारस्य वृत्तिमकरोदतिस्पष्टाम् । करिस्तापररविसंज्ञो श्रीविक्रमनूपतिवत्सरे चैत्रपुष्पाकदिने शुक्लाष्टम्यां वृत्तिः समाप्तासी ॥
5. Tirtha Kalpa or Rājaprasāda by Jinaprabha, (Probably of 14th Century A.D.).
6. Sūtradhāra Maṇḍana's Vāstu Śāstra (A) MSS. 1351, Jñāna collection Jñāna Mandir, Baroda.
(B) Sūtravṛt Maṇḍana's Vāstusāstra Sri Vijayadharma, Jaina Mandir, Agra. Folio 5, No. 3178 Folio 14. 11" × 5½".
(C) Vāstu-śāstra by Maṇḍana, No. 3177 Folio 14. 7½" × 5".
7. Mandira-Pratiṣṭhā Vidhāna MSS. No. 6 Jaina S. Bhavan, Arrah.
8. MSS, No. 1351, Haṃsavijaya, Jaina Collection, Jñāna Mandir, Baroda. Vāstu-Śāstra, Bimba parimāṇa-Guṇa doṣalakṣaṇa caturvīmśati Jina Yakṣa Yakṣiṇī vicāra by Vidyādharma.

9. Nirvāṇa Kalikā, MSS. Jñāna Mandir, Agra folio, No. 2141, 11" × 5½".

Beginning:—ओं नमो वीतरागाय । वर्द्धमानं जिनं नत्वा समुद्धृत्य
जिनागमात् नित्यकर्म तथा दीक्षां प्रतिष्ठां च प्रचक्ष्महे । प्रतिष्ठापद्धति-
श्चेषां श्रीमत्पादलिप्तसूरीणां भव्यानामुपकाराय स्पष्टार्था व्याख्यातेऽधुना ।

Colophon:—अथ प्रशस्तिः । श्रीविद्याधरवंशभूषणमणिः प्रख्यातनामा
भुवि श्रीमस्तंगमसिह इत्यधिपतिः श्वेताम्बराणामभूत् शिष्यस्तस्य
बभूव मण्डनगणितो वाचनायां चयिः ।

10. Devapūjā MSS. Jaina Siddhāntabhāvana, Arrah.
11. Catuṣṣaṣṭī Yoginī Nāmānī, MSS. Ramghaṭ Jaina Collection.
12. (Catuṣṣaṣṭhī Yoginī) MSS. No. 396 Harṇsa Vijaya Collection, Jñāna Mandir, Baroda.

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

FRONTISPIECE		Caturvīṃśatipatta of Ṛṣabhanātha gifted by Śāraṇikā, Caulukya, c. 860. A.D., Ākoṭā, Gujarāt, Baroda Museum.
Plate	I	Torso of a naked Jaina Tīrthaṅkara, Maurya, 3rd century B.C., Lohanipur, Patna, Bihar, Patna Museum.
Plate	II	Āyāgapatta, Kuṣāṇa, 1st century A.D., Kaṅkāli Tīlā, Mathurā, U.P., State Museum, Lucknow.
Plate	III	Āyāgapatta, Kuṣāṇa, 2nd century A.D., Mathura, U.P., State Museum, Lucknow.
Plate	IV	Ṛṣabhanātha, Gāhaḍavāla, 12th century A.D., Mahet, Gonda, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	V	Ṛṣabhanātha, Cedi, 11th century A.D., Tripuri, Mādhyā Pradesh, Indian Museum, Calcutta.
Plate	VI	Ajitanātha, Cedi, 10th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh, Nagpur Museum.
Plate	VII	Sambhavanātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	VIII	Abhinandanātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	IX	Sumatinātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

Plate	X	Padmaprabha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XI	Supārśvanātha, Cedi, 10th-11th century A.D., Tripuri, Madhya Pradesh.
Plate	XII	Supārśvanātha, Rāṣṭrakūṭa, 9th-10th century A.D., Kaṭoli, Cāndā, Maharashtra, Nagpur Museum.
Plate	XIII	Candraprabha, Candella, 12th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	XIV	Suvidhinātha (or Puṣpadanta), 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XV	Śīṭalanātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XVI	Śreyāṁśanātha, Cedi, 10th-11th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh, Nagpur Museum.
Plate	XVII	Vāsupūjya, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XVIII	Vimalanātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XIX	Anantanātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XX	Dharmanātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XXI	Śāntinātha, 10th century A.D., Rajnapur-Kinkini, Akola, Maharashtra.

Plate	XXII	Kunthanātha, Tomara, 15th-16th century A.D., Gwalior Fort, Madhya Pradesh.
Plate	XXIII	Aranātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XXIV	Mallinātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XXV	Munisuvrata, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XXVI	Naminātha, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XXVII	Neminātha, Cauhān, 12th century A.D., Narhaḍ, Pilani, Rajasthan, National Museum, New Delhi.
Plate	XXVIII	Pārśvanātha attacked by Kamaṭha, Vardhana, 7th century A.D., Bihar, Indian Museum, Calcutta
Plate	XXIX	Mahāvira, Cedi, 10th-11th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh, Nagpur Museum.
Plate	XXX	Īśvara Yakṣa, Candella, c. 10th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh, (Author's collection).
Plate	XXXI	Kubera, Pratihāra, 8th century A.D., Bansi, Rajasthan, Udaipur Museum.
Plate	XXXII	Kṣetrapāla, Pratihāra, 10th century A.D., Candapur, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.

Plate	XXXIII	Cakreśvari, Candella, 12th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	XXXIV	Mahāmānasī, Candella, 12th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	XXXV	Rohiṇī, Candella, 12th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	XXXVI	Ambikā, Candella, c. 11th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	XXXVII	Gomedha and Ambikā, Candella, 12th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	XXXVIII	Dharmendra and Padmāvatī, Candella, 10th-11th century A.D., Śāntinātha temple, Khajurāho, Madhya Pradesh.
Plate	XXXIX	Nirvāṇīdevī, Candella, c. 10th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh, (Author's collection).
Plate	XL	Sarasvatī, Kuṣāṇa, 2nd century A.D., Mathura, Uttar Pradesh, State Museum, Lucknow.
Plate	XLI	Śrutadevī (Sarasvatī), Candella, c. 12th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	XLII	Sarasvatī, Cauhān, 12th century A.D., Pallu, Bikaner, Rajasthan, National Museum, New Delhi.
Plate	XLIII	Sarvatobhadra-pratimā (Caumulha sculpture), Pratihāra, c. 10th century A.D., Jaghina, Rajasthan, State Museum, Bharatpur.

Plate	XLIV	1. Ajitanātha 2. Ajitādevī 3. Sambhavanātha 4. Duritārī or Prajñāpti, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri Caves, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XLV	1. Abhinandana 2. Śreyāṁśanātha 3. Not identifiable 4. Gaurī or Mānavī 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri Caves, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XLVI	1. Pāśvanātha, 2. Neminātha, 3. Padmāvatī, 4. Ambikā, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri Caves, Puri, Orissa.
Plate	XLVII	Bāhubali, Cedi, 9th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh.
Plate	XLVIII	Jīvantasvāmī, Cauhān, 12th century A.D., Khinvasar, Rajasthan, Sardar Museum, Jodhpur.
Plate	XLIX	Cakravartī Bharata, Candella, c. 11th cent. A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	L	Navagrahas, Candella, 10th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttar Pradesh.
Plate	LI	Nandīśvara-dvīpa, c. 14th century A.D., Rāṇākapur, Rajasthan.
Plate	LII	Samavasaraṇa, c. 19th century A.D. Pataudī Kā Mandir, Jaipur, Rajasthan.
Plate	LIII	The Weapons of Jaina Deities.

The Photographs have been published through the courtesy of the following :

Plate I—Dr. B. N. Sharma, New Delhi; XXIV, XXXVIII, XLIX—LII—Śrī Niraj Jaina, Satna; XXX, XXXIX and LIII—author; XXVII and XLII—National Museum, New Delhi and Frontispiece and remaining Plates—Archaeological Survey of India.

COVER

Lord Mahāvīra,
Kuṣāṇa, c. 2nd century A.D.,
Mathurā, Uttar Pradesh.
Courtesy : Śrī Niraj Jain, Satna.

INTRODUCTION

In the vast domain of Indian art, the Jaina Iconography, unfortunately, signalizes a great blank. Except a few useful contributions by the late Dr. Burgess and Prof. D.R. Bhandarkar, the subject, as a whole, is left practically unexplored. There is as much truth in the fact that the great majority of the Brāhmaṇic sculptures of ancient dates are unrecognised by the ordinary Hindu Public as there is in the case of old Jaina images, which defy accurate identification even by an orthodox Jaina. The cause is, however, not far to seek. Time and evolution of custom have cut short the elaborate Jaina Pantheon, economising immensely the details of its ancient statuary. In consequence, in no Jaina temple of modern times, one can easily notice, the important entourage of the Tīrtharṅkaras, less probably, one would expect there to meet with all the canonically fashioned deities of Jainism. On the contrary side, however, upto-date exploration at the ancient Jaina sites has rendered abundant possibilities to students of history and the Jaina world to see with a new vision nearly a full number of representative Jaina images. Hence, the need arises to collect informations, literary and archaeological, which would systematise our present knowledge of the Jaina Iconography. As we, thus, proceed with the same subject in hand, we would, at the outset, offer a preliminary treatment of the Jaina religion and philosophy in its most characteristic form.

Fundamentals of Jaina Religion

This Religion may be described, in its very elemental features, as an Ārya or Indian Sectarian Religion.¹ Contentions arise and develop, when only it asserts its heresy against the orthodox Brāhmaṇic Religion by rejecting the authority of the Vedas as apocryphal and corrupt. The Jainas substitute, however, the Vedic Scripture by their own Āṅgas and Sūtras. They, in their difference, never accept the Hindu Śrāddha or funeral rites nor do they venerate Hindu sacred places which they replace by their own having rites specially attached to them. A further point of their protest against Āryan orthodoxy is the exclusion of all but the twiceborn (Dvija) from the monastic fraternities, an attitude which ultimately brought into world this independent sect with an established rank of its own. Mainly, the two characteristic features, which should clearly mark out Jainism from all other religious systems are firstly, the extremity of tenderness shown towards all animal life, the tenet being called Ahiṃsā and secondly, the Saint-worship in which they assign to the Tīrthaṅkaras, a station even superior to that of the gods.

1. "The Jaina Religion like Buddhism is held to have been originally an off-shoot from Hinduism, and many Jainas still continue to consider themselves as members of the Hindu Community, will intermarry with Hindus and take part in their festivals." Census of India Vol. 1. Part I Report (Government Printing, 1924). Their total population is 1178, 596.

In certain respects, on the other hand, the Jainas meet the orthodox Hindus on a common ground. For instance, they admit the institution of caste, observe the essential ceremonies, called the Samśkāras and instal amidst their pantheon, a number of male and female deities of Brāhmanism. Further, the Jainas, in many cases, employ the Brāhmaṇa Pūjaks (Religious officiants) in their sanctuaries and some of their class freely intermarry with the Hindu Vaiśyas.

In points of heterodoxy against Brāhmanism, Jainism and Buddhism probably stand on a common platform. But despite their outward similarity, which led the late Mr. Hunter to remark on Jainism as "a religion allied in doctrine to ancient Buddhism but humanised by Saint-worship", both religions have certain doctrinal distinctions of leading importance. The conception of Nirvāṇa in Buddhism differs essentially from the Mokṣa view of the Jainas. With the Buddhists, to be clearer, its proposed meaning is extinction whereas with the Jainas it has a positive significance implying absolute purity and freedom from the snares of Karma.¹ In Metaphysics, Jainism recognises a pluralistic realism and is more akin to the Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika theory than to the Sāṃkhya system,¹ while Buddhism with its doctrine of Universal void inclines naturally to the monism of Śaṅkarācārya. In the idea of Ahiṃsā (non-killing, non-injury), too, both the religious systems do not appear to be in perfect accord. The Buddhist idea of Ahiṃsā is rather positive and humble as consisting in showing mercy (Mettā) to all living creatures of the world. The Jainas on the other hand, have carried the idea of Ahiṃsā to probably an excessive limit, for instance, in the utter abstention from hurting a living molecule and in the refusal to take as food even a dead creature's body. A further point of difference between the two religions is the fact that Jainism lays special stress on the rigour of asceticism which, Buddhism, however, has sternly avoided as an extreme (Antā).

1. कर्मपाशविनिर्मुक्तिः also कृत्स्नकर्मशयो मोक्षः Tattvārthasūtrādhigama Sūtra (Asiatic Society, Bengal), p. 10.3.

Like all religions, Jainism has three main sides, philosophical, ethical and ritualistic. In philosophy, it is partially atheistic (deistic?) denying the existence of a supreme Being as creator but essentially pluralistic as mentioned before. The Jainas hold the theory that the world exists from eternity. It consists of Loka and Aloka.² There are two ultimate substances (Dravyas)³ in this world,—Jīva (Alive) and Ajīva (Not Alive). An inhabitant even of the highest heaven cannot obtain Mokṣa (liberation) in the ordinary course. For becoming a Jīna or Arhat, he needs to be born as a man. The Ajīva Dravyas are of five kinds: Pudgala (matter or the physical basis of the world), Dharma (the principle of motion), Adharma (the fulcrum of rest), Ākāśa (space), Kāla (Time).⁴ With Jīva, these make up the six first categories of Jaina Philosophy.

1. Colebrooke's hypothesis of the identity of Jainism and Sāṃkhya has been ably refuted by Dr. S. Rādhākrishnan in his Indian Philosophy Vol. I, pp. 202-293 (London : George Allen & Unwin Ltd.).

2. "Lokākāśa is that in which Dharma, Adharma, Kāla, Pudgala and Jīva exist. That which is beyond is called Alokākāśa—Dravya Saṃgraha, p. 58 (Sacred Books of the Jainas).

3. Substance may be defined as that which persists in and through its own qualities and changes having the characteristics of creation, destruction and permanence (cf. द्रव्याधिकनय and पर्यायाधिकनय).

4. द्रव्याणि (V.1.) अजीवकायधर्माधर्माकाशपुद्गलाः (V.1.) जीवाश्च (V.3.) कालश्च ।

Tattvārthadhigama Sūtra.

Cr. अजीवो पुण रोओ पुग्गलधम्मो अधम्म आयासं ।

कालो पुग्गलमुत्तो ह्वादिगुणो अमुत्तिसेसादु ॥

Dravya Saṃgraha 15 (S.B.J.).

The remark by Prof. Jacobi as follows in general review of the Jaina Metaphysics is worth consideration. (i) The animistic belief of the Jainas, (ii) the absence of the category of quality in their enumeration of the principal constituent elements of the universe, (iii) the inclusion of Dharma and Adharma in the class of substances. The Jainas hold, moreover, that the body, Manas and speech are constituted of Pudgala, which they regard as existing in atomic and aggregate form.

One of the central features of Jaina Metaphysics is their group of seven Tattvas or Principles underlying which stand their doctrines of Karma and Saṃsāra. The principles are (1) Jīva (soul), (2) Ajīva (non-soul), (3) Āsrava (influx of karmic matter into soul), (4) Bandha (Bondage), (5) Samvara (stoppage of the inflow of fresh matter), (6) Nirjarā (removal of any past Karma), (7) Mokṣa (absolute liberation).¹ If, to this series two more principles of Punya or merit and Pāpa or demerit are added, the collection is to be known as the nine Padārthas.²

This aspect of Metaphysics describes the stages upon the way to salvation. Mokṣa is in fact the liberation of Jīva from Ajīva. Jīva is entangled by Karmas and Karmic matter throughout all his births and evermore fresh Karmas are pouring in. It is Karma, which brings on the Āsrava,³ which for the first time taints the pure soul. Thus, with the inflow of matter, there is a kind of fusion of soul and matter.

This binding of the soul to the body is Bandha, which is not to the advantage of the former. Hence accrue Pāpa (demerit) and Punya (merit) in consequence of which, the Jīva revolves in the circle of births and deaths (Saṃsāra). The only step towards Mokṣa or final release can be attained by stopping the "influx" (Samvara)⁴ and by ridding the soul of matter (Nirjarā). This is, however, affected by practising the thirty-five ordinary

1. जीवाजीवास्यवन्धवर्जनज्जराभाक्षास्तत्त्वम् । Tattvārtha Sūtra I.4.

2. जीवाजीवाभावा पुण्यं पापं च आसवं तैसि ।

संवरजिज्जरबन्धो मोक्षो य ह्वन्ति ते अहा ॥ Pañcāstikāya 103.

Of. Dravya-saṃgraha (Ed. by S. Ghosal) 28 Śloka.

3. कायवाज्जमनःकर्मयोगः ॥

Tattvārthādhigama Sūtra, 6. 1. (Asiatic Society's Edition, p. 139).

4. आलवनिरोधः संवरः ॥ Ibid. (Asiatic Society's Edition).

rules of conduct, self-control, twelve special rules of conduct and concentration. Thus, when the soul is completely purged of all impurities of Karma past and new, the Jīva in all his real refulgence, power, bliss and knowledge, obtains Mokṣa.¹

The Jains have certain original theories of knowledge, which form an important element of their philosophy and religion. According to them, Philosophy consists in the voluntary and consistent striving, intellectual and moral, manifest in the removal of Karmic impediments (1), on the way to samyak Jñāna (i.e. Right knowledge of the doctrine), (2) Samyak Darśana (i.e. Right faith in the true doctrine)² (3) Samyak Caritra (i.e. strict observance of Jaina precepts).³ These are called Triratna or three Jewels, as means to attaining Mokṣa. Of these knowledge is divided into five kinds (1) Matī—Perceptual and inferential knowledge, (2) Śruta—knowledge derived from the reading and hearing of the scriptural books, (3) Avadhi—direct knowledge of things even at a distance of time and space, (4) Manahpariyaya—direct knowledge of the thoughts of other people, (5) Kevala—Perfect, limitless knowledge or omniscience.⁴

The Jaina Philosophy is again original in the doctrine of Syādvāda or the seven modes of predication (Saptabhaṅgi naya). "It is the doctrine of the non-isolation of the parts, elements, properties or aspects of things; it is the method of knowing or speaking of a thing synthetically".⁵ We can affirm the existence

1. बन्धहेत्वभावनिर्जराभ्यां कृत्स्नकर्मविप्रमोक्षो मोक्षः ॥

Tattvārtha Sūtra X 2.

Or. जो संवरेण जुतो निज्जरमाणोय सन्धकम्माणि ।

ववगदखेदाउस्सो मुयदि भवं तेण सो मोक्खो ॥

Pañcāstikāya-samayasūtra Verse 158.

2. Adhyātma-Tattvōloka (tr. by M.J. Mehta), p. xxi.

3. Caritra has two kinds—one which is unaccompanied by desire (वीतराग), and the other accompanied by desire (सराग). The first leads to Mokṣa, the second to sovereign dignity.

4. Uttarādhyayana Sūtra (Jaina Sūtras tr. by H. Jacobi—S.B.E.)

Or. मत्तिश्रुतावधिमनःपर्ययकेवलानि ज्ञानम् ।

Tattvārthadhigama Sūtra (Sūtra 9; ch. 1.)

5. Jainism by H. Warren, p. 20.

of a thing from one point of view—that of its material, place, time and nature¹ (Syād asti) and deny it from these attributes of another thing (Syād nāsti). All affirmations are true as well as false in some sense (Syād asti nāsti). A thing is unpredicable when we should affirm both existence and non-existence at the same time from the same point of view (Syād avaktavya). From the point of view of its own quaternary and at the same time from the joint quaternary of itself and nothing, a thing is and is unpredicable (Syād asti avaktavya). Similarly a thing is not and unpredicable (Syād asti nāsti avaktavya).² Every proposition starts with a 'perhaps', a maybe or a Syād and suggests the absolute affirmation or denial as impossible. What is meant in short by these seven modes are but different stand-points (Naya) of the position, form etc, from which the existence of every object can be regarded in order to have a full view of it.

On the ethical side, certain scriptural injunctions bind the Monks and the Laity to a moral system of a specialised character. The most important of them is the five-fold vow of the Jainas—viz. (i) non-injury, (ii) renunciation of lying, (iii) abstinence from theft, (iv) chastity, (v) detachment from all external and internal temptations.³ No religion, as mentioned before, has carried Ahimsā further i.e. respect for and abstinence from everything that has life. The most orthodox among the Jainas drink only carefully strained water, and their ascetics before they sit brush the ground before them with a broom of peacock's feather or a cloth-brush lest any visible animalcule be crushed. It is enjoined in their canonical books that a man should practise certain resignations of mind by thinking that nothing in the world really belongs to him, should abstain from all intoxicants, from gambling, from adultery, from hunting, from taking food at

1. स्वरूप, स्वद्रव्य, स्वक्षेत्र and स्वकाल ।

2. See Malliṣeṇa's Syādvādamāñjarī, p. 169 ff.; for a clear exposition of the doctrine Vide Prof. S. Rādhākṛishnan's Indian Philosophy Vol. 1, pp. 302-304.

3. हिंसानृत्स्तेयाब्रह्मचर्यपरिग्रहेभ्यो विरतिव्रतम् ।

Tattvārtha-rāja-Vārttika, Ch. VII. I.

(Sanātana Jaina Series).

Cf. अहिंसासत्यास्तेयब्रह्मचर्यपरिग्रहा योगः ॥ night, etc. All these summarise the very norms of Jaina Ethics of which the details may be found in certain vows and the eleven Pratimās.¹ Most of them share in character with the orthodox Hindu and Buddhist rules of life except probably the duties which prescribe a Śrāvaka to have faith in his own religion, to do Sāmāyika (meditation during one Muhūrta) and to keep certain fasts, to limit his indispensable necessities of life and to abandon part by part worldly occupations as a preparatory to the monk's life.

Yoga Sūtras

Another characteristic of the Jaina Religion is its constituent division of the Śrāvakas "hearers" or lay disciples and Yatis or Monks, who should hold no property and never quit their dwelling except to beg for food. The Yati's life is one of utter abstinence, taciturnity and continence. He has to sweep the ground before sitting, remain silent and steady at one place at night and not to ride any vehicle for travelling. He is allowed, in turn, to dispense with all acts of worship, whilst the Śrāvaka has to add to the observance of the religious and moral duties the worship of the Tīrthaṅkaras and a profound reverence to be shown to his more pious brethren. The secular Jain like the ascetic must practise the four virtues,—liberality, gentleness, piety and penance² : he should govern his mind, tongue and acts; abstain, at certain seasons, from salt, flower, green fruits, honey, grapes, tobacco; drink water thrice strained, and never leave a liquid uncovered lest an insect should be drowned in it; it is his duty also to visit daily a temple, where some of the images

1. दर्शन—व्रत—सामायिक—प्रोषधोपवास—सञ्चितत्याग—निशाभोजनपरिहार—ब्रह्मचर्य—आरम्भत्याग—परिग्रहत्याग—अनुमोदन व्रत—उद्दिष्टव्रत प्रतिमा ।

(1) दर्शन (Faith). (2) Vow. (3) Sāmāyika (one मुहूर्त). (4) Fortnightly fast. (5) Abstinence from the flesh of conscious creatures. (6) Abstinence from eating at night. (7) Abstinence. (8) Abandonment of nearly all worldly engagements & occupations. (9-11). परिग्रहत्याग, अनुमोदित्याग, उद्दिष्टत्याग—(a gradual giving up of the world and retirement).

2. सत्त्वेषु मंत्रां गुणिषु प्रमोदं विलष्टेषु जीवेषु कृपापरत्नम् ।

माध्यस्थ्यभावं विपरीतवृत्ती सदा ममात्मा विदधानु देवः ॥

Sāmāyika-Pāṭha No. 1 by Amitagati.

of the Jaina saints are placed, walk round it three times, make an obeisance to the image, and make some offerings of fruits and flowers.¹ Rituals and pure ethical duties have been mixed up here in describing the religious life of a Jaina, who, indeed, does not keep them in water-tight compartment.

The Jaina rituals are not half so elaborate as those of the Hindus but certainly surpass those of Buddhism both in extent and variety. The customs peculiar to them and those which seem to be more emphasised among them than in Hinduism may only be touched here. The Jainas give all free access to their temples of gods and saints of whose images they worship with certain special rites and ceremonies.

They have what are known as Jala-pūjā (washing of the images), Candana Pūjā (worship with sandals) and Akṣaṭa Pūjā (offering of unboiled rice) and Naivedya Pūjā (worship with food). All this is followed by Āratī after the sunset. Another custom belonging to the Jainas is the Sāṃvāyika reading. They, like the Hindus, believe in and practise Prāyaścitta or expiation of sins but unlike them have the custom by confessing sins before the Guru. In regard to the observance of religious suicide the Jainas differ, yet a writer on Jainism calls it the highest, noblest and the most dignified form of Ahimsā. Great importance is attached to pilgrimages, especially undertaken on the full-moon days that fall in October-November (Kārttikī Pūrṇimā) or in April-May. Four months in the year are more specially given to fastings, the reading of sacred books and spiritual meditations. They observe the most important fast on the last day of the Jaina Year and of Pajjūsana Sāvatsarī and ordinary fast on the full-moon days, which fall in Spring and Summer. Some of the Brāhmanic festivals have been mysteriously adopted by them among which may be mentioned the Divālī, Dhanaterasa, Śārada Pūjā, Lakṣmī Pūjā, Jñāna pañcamī, Śitalā Pūjā, the Dafaharā and the Makara-saṃkrāntī.² Besides, the image-worship of the Tīrthaṅkaras

1. Chamber's Encyclopaedia "Jainism" Śvetāmbaras.

2. Divālī, Dhanaterasa, ज्ञानपञ्चमी are probably adscitious to Hinduism. Jaina festivals have originated mostly from the anniversaries of the births and deaths of Tīrthaṅkaras. The greatest festivals of the Jainas are : पञ्चुदन in the month of भाद्र (August-Sept), चातुर्मास्य—full and some subordinate deities, the worship of the Siddha-cakra, which is kept in a Jaina temple has found a firm hold on the Jaina devotee.

The Digambaras and the Śvetāmbaras

The followers of Mahāvīra were originally called Nirgranthas (without a bond)¹ who latterly received the designation of "Jaina". Tradition and historical records assign to the well-known division among them into the Śvetāmbaras 'putting on white clothes' and the Digambaras "Sky-robed" or wearing no garment, the date of 79 A. D. This almost synchronizes with the time of the similar sectarian division among the Buddhists into the Mahāyāna and the Hīnayāna. The real origin of this division is to be looked for in the specific acceptance, which some people accorded to some of the doctrines of Mahāvīra or his predecessors while others followed the rest of his or their doctrines. The schism began as early as the time of the First Council of Pāṭaliputra at the end of the fourth century B. C. The visitation of a terrible famine in Magadha led some Jainas to migrate to the south under their leader Bhadrabāhu about 315 B. C. They are said to have planted Jainism for the first time in the Deccan.² Those who remained in the famine-stricken land found a leader in Sthūlabhadra, who being anxious to preserve the Jaina scriptures summoned a Council at Pāṭaliputra, which collected the Eleventh Aṅga and renewed the 12th moon of आषाढ—15th of कार्तिक । पञ्जुमना means परि सामस्सेन उसना सेवना i.e. serving with a whole-hearted devotion. This is the religious session during the rains. मिदचक्रपूजा—celebrated in आश्विन and चैत्र देवालि—day of Mahāvīra's Nirvāṇa. ज्ञानपञ्चमी (कार्तिक शुक्ल 5), चातुर्मास्य ends with this day.

1. हेमेव वामनेसु आजीविकेसु पि मे कटे...निर्गठेसु पि मे...

Aloka's Pillar Edict vii. Lexicographers like Hemacandra and the author of the Medinī make निर्गन्ध synonymous with नग्नक(naked) दिगम्बर (sky-clad).

2. According to orthodox Digambara Jain tradition Bhadrabāhu and his followers must have chosen such a place where there had been the Jaina laity to dwell with. Thus, the Deccan was an earlier seat of Jainism when we follow this view.

Aṅga. At the end of the famine, Bhadrabāhu returned with his followers. They refused to accept the work of the Council and sternly disapproved the custom of wearing clothes, which the followers of Sthūlabhadra had already adopted. Thus, according to the Śvetāmbaras, the Jaina Canon was fixed by the Council of Pāṭaliputra towards the end of the 4th Cent. B. C., whereas the Digambara books as available so far prove that their age cannot go back further than Vikrama Year 49 or B. C. 8. Regarding the origin of the Digambaras as a sect the Śvetāmbaras ascribe it to Śivabhūti,¹ who started the heretical sect of the 'Bhotikas' in A. D. 83.

The diverging doctrines of the two sects are in the main as follows:—

(a) The Śvetāmbaras decorate the image of the Tīrthaṅkaras with earrings, necklaces, armlets, and tiaras of gold and jewels, the Digambaras leave their images naked and unadorned.

(b) The Śvetāmbaras assert that there are 12 heavens and 64 Indras; the Digambaras maintain that there are 16 heavens, and 100 olympian monarchs.

(c) The Śvetāmbaras allow their gurus to eat out of vessels, the Digambaras receive the food in their open hands from their disciples.

(d) The Śvetāmbaras consider the accompaniments of the wooden pots for bringing food etc. as alms etc., as essential to the character of an ascetic, the Digambaras do not admit their importance.

(e) The Śvetāmbaras credit the Aṅgas or Scriptures to be the work of the immediate disciples of the Tīrthaṅkaras, the Digambaras, on the other hand, maintain that the leading authorities of the Jaina Religion are the composition of subsequent teachers or Ācāryas, their original Aṅgas being lost.

(f) The Digambaras hold that salvation is not possible for a woman, although they have the order of nuns as well. The Śvetāmbaras have not, however, such a view.

(g) The Omniscient Being or a Kevalajñānī lives without food according to the Digambaras, who strongly maintain that a monk should not have anything, even clothes. The

1. The story of Śivabhūti is given in Mrs. Stevenson's Heart of Jainism p. 79

Śvetāmbaras hold contrary opinions on these points. In Pūjā, the Śvetāmbaras use flowers, sweets etc., the Digambaras substitute them for dry rice, spices etc. The former in contradistinction to the latter regard Mallinātha as a female Tīrthaṅkara.

In comparatively modern times during the Mahommedan rule, new sects such as the Lunkās (452 A. D.) and Sthānakavāsīs or Dhūṇḍīās (1653 A. D.) arose. The chief distinction resting with them is their absolute opposition to image worship.

Who are the Tīrthaṅkaras?

Several definitions of a Tīrthaṅkara or Tīrthakara are to be met with in both Śvetāmbara and Digambara literatures, but they all converge upon the same purport that a Tīrthaṅkara means a prophet. Let us look into some of the literary definitions as found in their books. "A Tīrthaṅkara is he by whom was shown the broad fording-place of virtue, the best of all reaching which men overcome sorrow."¹ "Tīrtha" means here Dharma or religious system, "one who expounds Dharma"² or according to another version, "Tīrthaṅ" or "Dharma" by which this Ocean of Samsāra or transmigration can be crossed.³ According to Śvetāmbara view, "Tīrtham" means a "Saṅgha" or 'Church' and a Tīrthakara is one who founds the Church or Community. This 'Tīrtha' or 'order' is not one but four in number—viz, (i) Sādhu or Monk, (ii) Sādhvī or nun, (iii), Śrāvaka or lay brother and (iv) Śrāvikā or lay-sister. Thus, everything analogises to what we know by an advent of God or Prophet or deified saint. As in all religions, the Jaina Tīrthaṅkaras were no more than deified heroes, born of human parents,

1. येन प्रणीतं पृथुधर्मतीर्थं ज्येष्ठं जनाः प्राप्य जयन्ति दुःखम् ।

Bṛhatśaṅgamaḥbhū-stotra 9, by Samantabhadra.

2. तीर्थं धर्मं करोति प्रकटयति इति तीर्थंकरः । स्वतीर्थानामादिकर्तारः तीर्थंकराः ।

आ० च० adhyāya II

3. तीर्थंते अनेन । Cf. तरन्ति येन संसारसागरमिति तीर्थं प्रवचनं तदव्यतिरेका- देव सङ्घस्तीर्थं तत्करणशीलत्वात्तीर्थंकराः ।

Bhagavāntī Sūtra, I. 1 30.

raised to the position of God by their renunciation and great services to religion for the deliverance of mankind.¹

Another name of the Tirthamkara is Jina or conqueror from which the religion has been named as 'Jaina'. The word "Jina" has the technical sense of "one who conquers the enemies such as, lust, anger, etc".² These "Jinas" are four-fold—viz, (i) Nāma Jīnā or those who were Jinas by name, e.g. Rṣabha and others, (ii) Sthāpanā Jīnā or images which are installed and are made of gold, stone, etc., (iii) Dravya-Jīnā or those beings who are endowed with a Jina's quality, e. g. Śreṇika, (iv) Bhāva Jīnā or those who have attained the Samavasaraṇa.³ The Jaina literatures of both the sects furnish the names and detailed history relating to 24 Tirthamkaras. From the early references to the name of Rṣabhanātha, the doctrine of Arhat, Nirgrantha and the Syādvāda in the Hindu and Buddhist books, there is nothing seemingly very incredible about the early authenticity of the Jaina incarnations. It is also a curious coincidence that the number 24 resembles exactly the number of 24 Brāhmanic Incarnations of Viṣṇu according to some accounts. In all likelihood, the early Hindu number of 10 Avatāras might have been also numerically strengthened under the Jaina or the Buddhist influence in later times. Of the 24 Tirthamkaras, the most favourite ones among the Jainas are the first and the three last ones but temples as well as images of the remaining ones are also met with in many parts of India.

Almost all the Tirthamkaras have been the subjects of many Carita books and Purāṇa books in Jaina Literature either in an associated account or in a separate account. For instance, we have the Adipurāṇa about the life of Rṣabha, Uttarapurāṇa about the lives of the other Jainas, Bhavadeva Sūri's Pārśvanāthacarita, Sakalakīrti's Sāntinātha Caritra, Vijayagaṇi's Ariṣṭa-

1. लोयस्सुज्जोयये सुवम्मतिथकरे जिणे वन्दे ।

अरहन्ते कित्तइसे चउवीसं चेव केवलियो ॥

Sāmāyika-Pāṭha.

2. जयति निराकरोति रागद्वेषादिरूपानरातीनिति जिनः । सं २ सम०

3. नामजिणा जिणनामा ठवणजिणा पुण जिणिदपडिमाओ ।

दव्वजिणा जिणजीवा भावजिणा समवसरणत्था ।

Cf. Prasocanastoredhāra, 42 द्वार.

nemicarita, Kṛṣṇadāsa's Vimalānātha Purāṇa, Brahmanemidatta's Neminātha Purāṇa.

No body can believe that such a number of books written with the avowed object of giving truth to the believers may have related only unhistorical fictitious beings! Making reasonable allowance for the glorification and exaggeration which each religion attaches to its heroes, we have reason to place our credence in the historical authenticity of the 24 Tīrthaṅkaras. According to the Jaina notion, Tīrthaṅkaras are superior to gods inasmuch as a Tīrthaṅkara is approaching salvation whereas a God is merely a heavenly being subject to births and deaths. This relative position is made more conspicuous in the Jaina sculptures as we shall see later on, where the main figures of Tīrthaṅkaras are worshipped or served by some surrounding gods, goddesses, and other heavenly beings as only their subordinates.

Origin of Jaina Images.

It is a time-honoured custom of India to instal images for the purposes of private and public worship. Neither the Buddhists nor the Jains disregarded it and in fact, by assimilation completely developed a system of their own with a multitude of images with canonical and mythic details which we utilise today in our iconographical studies. With the Jains, the images no doubt originated from their Tīrthaṅkaras. The governing idea of an image seems to be that it reminds a believer of the condition through which a Tīrthaṅkara passed to attain salvation and that affords him a strong incentive to follow the noble example of the Tīrthaṅkara in life. This applies to all image or relic worship. The influence left behind by the Jinas after their deaths lingered on for sometime. And soon, devotees found it necessary to preserve the glorious memory of their prophets by setting up their statues principally in the sacred places associated with their lives. The literature belonging to them also supplies a clue to this point. Jacobi writes, "Lives of the Jinas were probably not intended for biographical treatises, but served a liturgical purpose, for when the images of the Tīrthaṅkaras are worshipped in the temples they are addressed with hymns, one of which sums up the Kalyāṇakas or auspicious moments. It is with these Kalyāṇakas that the lives of the Jinas are chiefly concerned, and this fact seems to prove that the custom of mentioning the Kalyāṇakas in the worship of the Tīrtharīkaras is a very old one; for otherwise it would be impossible to conceive what could have induced an author to treat so largely of so barren a subject as has been done in the Kalpa-sūtra.¹ Besides the images of Tīrtharīkaras, the images of other gods and goddesses, though subordinate in type, play not a small part in Jaina Iconography. A closer study of the subject discloses the unmistakable fact how many of the Brāhmanic divinities were silently assimilated into the Jaina Pantheon. Undoubtedly, there was a need for them. Human mind ever seeks ideals realised into forms. Ideas of auspiciousness, prosperity, wealth, kingly splendour or so on found a direct outlet in the sculptor's art—in the images of Gaṇeśa, Śrī, Kubera, Indra. The long-standing traditions and well-established images of these gods in Brāhmanism directly appealed to the Jaines as they might have appealed to the Buddhists. Thus, they unconventionally welcomed them and admitted into their worship many of them as they connected with the tales of their saints.

Jaina Temple-worship

The integral part of the Jaina worship is performed in their temples. In this way, their temple may be said to be their repository of Dharma. In Brāhmanic religion, though temple is visited on occasions and pilgrimages, most injunctions of religion, however, such as the Trisandhyā or the 3 prayers, the Gurupūjā, Śiva-Pūjā, Śrāddha, Tarpaṇa, Vrata-Pūjā, the Devī-Pūjās and the Yajñas are followed in practice in individual homes. In this respect, the Jaina Religion marks a great contrast to Brāhmanic religion. The Jaines in optional cases keep an image in their houses, do not undergo the special ritualistic formalism in their private worship. The temples are their churches, where besides the daily worship of the images by the religious officiants, religious books are kept, the Āratīs or waving rites are attended largely by men, women and boys with sincere faith and devotion. There are occasions

1. Jaina Sūtras (S.B.E.) by Jacobi, Part I. Introduction LII.

when the images are specially decorated, the Samavasaraṇa is arranged, readings from the scriptures are given by Brahma-cāris, Yatis and Sūris. In many other respects, the Jaina temple worship bears a close resemblance to Brāhmanic customs. The images go through the same process of canonical installation, daily worship, ceremonious worship, occasional processions, decorations and Ārati. Almost in the same way as that of the Brahmans, the Deities are offered rice, water and Naivedya. There are bells, drums, chowries and no foreigner, unless he is told, will find any appreciable distinction between a strictly Brāhmanic temple and a Jaina one. In temple worship, the Digambaras and the Śvetāmbaras differ in some important heiratic points. For instance, "The Digambaras bathe the images with abundance of water but Śvetāmbaras use very little. The Digambaras may bathe and worship their images during the night, but the Śvetāmbaras do not even light lamps in their temples, much less do they bathe or worship the images lest in so doing they might thereby kill, or indirectly cause the death of any living thing, for to do so during the night they regard as a great sin. The Digambaras wash their images with Pañcāmṛta but the others do not".¹

Classes of Jaina Gods and Goddesses

Classification arose among the Jaina divinities as soon as their number grew enormously, partly to systematise their pantheon and partly to lend facilities to the sacerdotal worship. The deities have been looked at from specific view-points and this has led to various classifications. Some of the gods and goddesses have been worshipped by Śvetāmbaras, which have not been acknowledged by the Digambaras and similarly, some of the Digambara deities are nearly unknown to the Śvetāmbaras. There are variants in certain names in both the sects. In an early text of Jaina Religion called the Ācāra Dinakara, we find, goddesses have been divided into three classes—viz. (1) Prāsāda Devīs or installed images (2) Kuladevīs or Tāntrik Goddesses worshipped according to mantras from preceptors. (3) Samṣṭra-

1. Burgess. Ind. Ant. 1903, p. 459 ff.

dāya Devis or class-goddesses.¹ The author describes the goddesses as on dais, on field, installed in a cave or in a palatial temple, either as a symbol as self-created or created by man, sectarian goddesses such as Ambā, Sarasvatī, Tripurā, Tārā etc., Kuladevis such as Chaṇḍī, Kaṇṭheśvarī, Vyāghrarājī etc. This, indeed, is a more exhaustive classification of gods and goddesses. From this as well as from other references to Jaina books, it is clear that a great many Tāntric goddesses have found a room in the Jaina Pantheon. We come across the names of Goddesses of clearly Tāntrik nature such as Kaṅkāli, Kālī, Māhākālī, Cāmūṇḍā, Jvālāmukhī, Kāmākhyā, Kapālinī, Bhadrakālī, Durgā, Lalitā, Gaurī, Sumaṅgalā, Rohiṇī, Śūlakatā, Tripurā Kurukullā, Candrāvatī, Yamaghāṇṭā, Krāntimukhā etc.² In a Mss. of the Jaina collection of Jñāna Mandir in Baroda, I found a passage which gives a further list of Tāntric Goddesses—such as—Gaṇeśvarī, Pretākṣī, Śaṁkhinī, Kālī, Kālarātrī, Vaitālī, Bhūtaḍāmārī, Mahākālī, Virūpākṣī, Caṇḍī, Vārāhī, Kaṅkāli, Bhuvaneśvarī, Yamadūtī, etc. called Catuṣṣaṣṭi Yoginīs or 64 Yoginīs.³ This predominant Tāntrik element in Iconography seems to be represented by the Śvetāmbara sect, who like the Mahāyāna Buddhists, developed by assimilation and invention,

1. ...तत्र देव्यस्त्रिधा—प्रासाददेव्यः संप्रदायदेव्यः कुलदेव्यश्च । प्रासाददेव्यः पीठोपपीठेषु क्षेत्रोपक्षेत्रेषु गुहास्थिता भूमिस्थिताः प्रासादस्थिता लिङ्गरूपा वा स्वयम्भूतरूपा वा मनुष्यनिर्मितरूपा वा । सम्प्रदायदेव्यः अम्बासरस्वती-त्रिपुराताराप्रभृतयो गुरुपदिष्टमन्त्रोपासनीयाः । कुलदेव्यः चण्डी चामुण्डा कण्ठेश्वरी सरीसत्थिका (?) मुशमना व्याघ्रराजीप्रभृतयः ।

Pratiṣṭhā-Vidhi.

Ācārādīnaka.

2. ...कङ्काल्यै नमः । कराल्यै नमः । काल्यै नमः । महाकाल्यै नमः । चामुण्डायै नमः । भद्रकाल्यै नमः । दुर्गायै नमः । अम्बिकायै नमः । ललितायै नमः । कुरुकुल्लायै नमः । Ibid.

The first name Kaṅkāli opens the clue how a great number of Jaina sculptures were exposed to view from the same named Kaṅkāli Tīlā at Mathura.

3. पद्मावत्यै नमः । दिव्ययोगी महायोगी सिद्धयोगी गणेश्वरी । प्रेताक्षी शङ्खिनी काली कालरात्री निशाचरी ॥ ओङ्कारी सिद्धदेताली...चतुःपष्टिः समाख्याता योगिन्यो हि वरप्रदाः ॥

a t̃āntrik system of their own. The earlier classification divides the gods into 4 classes viz. Jyotiṣī, Vimānavāsi, Bhavanapati and Vyantara of the Bhavanavāsi class, there are 10 subdivisions—the Asura-, Nāga-, Vidyut-, Suparṇa-, Agni-, Dvīpa-, Udadhi-, Dikvāta and Ghaṇika-Kumāras. Of the 4th named division, there are 8 kinds—Piśācas, Bhūtas, Rākṣasas, Yakṣas, Kinnaris, Kimpuruṣas, Mahoragas, and Gandharvas. The 9 planets, the Nakṣatras, the Stars belong to the region of the Jyotiṣkas. The Vaimānika gods are of 2 kinds : those born in the Kalpas and those born above the Kalpas. The former category of divinities falls into twelve classes, who live in the Kalpas after which they are named : Sudharma, Iśāna, Sanat Kumāra, Mahendra, Brahmā, Lāntaka, Śukra (or Mahā Śukra) Sahasāra, Ānata, Prāpata, Āraṇa and Acyuta.¹ In the Anuttaravimāna, there are 5 places, each with a god called Indra to rule over it, viz. Vijaya, Vijayanta, Jayanta, Aparājita and Sarvārtha Siddha.² There is a class of gods called Navavidhāna gods such as, Naisarpa, Pāṇḍuka, Piṅgala, Sarvaratna, Mahāpadma, Kāla, Mahākāla, Mānava, and Śaṁkha. The Viradevas may be enumerated as Mānabhadra, Pūrṇabhadra, Kāpila and Piṅgala. Out of this long list of divinities, those who actually appear in iconography seem to be the 9 planets under the category of Jyotiṣi-gods, the Dikpālas or guardians of the quarters under the head of a Bhavanavāsi Yakṣas or attendants of the Tirthamkaras under the class of Vyantara-gods, Iśāna, Brahmā under the class of Vimānavāsi Gods. Besides these, there are divinities recognised and worshipped by the Jainas, who would not come under any of the above-mentioned categories. For instance, we may mention, the name of the 16 Śruta or Vidyādevīs, the Aṣṭamā-tṛkās such as Brahmāṇī,³ Maheśvarī etc., the mothers of the

1. Uttarādhyayana Sūtra Ch., 36. Keith: Indian Mythology, the Mythology of the Jainas.

Cf. classification and description of gods. Jaina Sūtras (S.B.E.), pp. 225-9, 381.

2. Mrs. Stevenson: Heart of Jainism, p. 270. These last but four names are identical with the gods mentioned in the Arthadāstra. Cf. p. 61. (Mysore Oriental Series).

3. रोहिणी प्रज्ञप्तिर्वज्रकुला कुलिशाङ्कुशा ।

चक्रेश्वरी नरदत्ता काल्ययासी महापरा ॥

Tirthamkaras such as Marudevī, Vijayā etc., Kṣetrapāla, the Bhairavas, the Śrī or Lakṣmī Devī. And if we cannot establish the correspondence between the so-called "Kumāras" and the Dikpālas or as they are further called Vāstu-Devas, they may come outside the category of the deities as dealt with before. It is to be noted here that most of these Gods and Goddesses borrowed right from the Brāhmanic Pantheon are regarded by the Jainas as devoted adherents of the Tirthamkaras and thus they consider them to be deities of their system and accordingly perform certain Pūjās in honour of them profusely referred to in their ritualistic literature.

The main characteristics of Jaina Images

The sculpture devoted to religion follows the art tradition of a particular sect. That art-tradition specially in India known for its symbolism, has a mixed growth of ritualism and art forms. The artist was under the religious necessity of carrying out the canonical injunctions in art but his duty was not over there, for he had to make a compromise between symbolism and beauty, the latter element being demanded from him by the same formalism of religion. Hence, we find, in most images of India, a number of mystical symbols now calling for explanation, side by side with the representation of a true art, exquisite in quality and impressive in form. Such an art had a religious mission to serve: an ugly figure could never gratify a devotee's mind and his thirst for the infinite through a visible form. Hence, all native books on art declare unanimously that the form must be excellent:¹ But this decree was fully satisfied when sculptors of genius were close to hand. Contrarily, ugly figures came out

गौरी गान्धारी सर्वास्त्रमहाज्वाला च मानवी ।
 वैरोदयच्युता मानसी महामानसिकेति ताः ॥
 वाग् ब्राह्मी भारती गौरीर्वाणी भाषा सरस्वती ।
 श्रुतदेवी वचनं तु व्याहारो भाषितं वचः ॥

Hemacandra's Abhidhānacintāmaṇi
 (Ed. by Otto Boetlingk, ST. Petersburg)

1. भावरूपानुविद्धाङ्गं कारयेद् विम्बमर्हतः ।

—Vāstusāra & Pratigṛhāsāra-Saṃgraha
 (MSS. N. 68. Jain collection, Jñāna Mandir, Baroda)

as we some times find, mixed with good images, when the sculptor available happened to be a bad artist. Specific rules are given in Silpa or art manuals for making an image artistically perfect. Commonsense assures us that the authors of these manuals who made much minute rules of art-technique were not mere priests of temples or clerks of religion but were well-versed in the science of sculptural art.¹ We are, however, more concerned here with symbolism and iconography than with art-techniques. How are we to distinguish Jaina images generally from other images of India? As prominence is given to imagery of Tirthankaras or pontiffs in Jaina Iconography, we must find the chief characteristic of a Jina figure to settle this point. The distinguishing features of a Jaina figure are its long hanging arms, the Śrīvatsa symbol, the mild form, youthful body and nudity.² Other characteristics of such images seem to be the main figure being attended on his right side by a Yakṣa and on his left side by a Yakṣiṇī,³ the presence of the Aśoka or the particular tree under which the Tirthankaras attained the supreme knowledge, one of the eight Prātihāryas which consist of (i) heavenly tree, (ii) a throne-

1. शेषस्थानविकल्पेषु यथाशोभं विकल्पयेत् । पर्यङ्कमपि तावत्तु तिर्यगा-
यामसंस्थितम् ॥ बाहुयुग्मान्तरं देशे ह्लासयेच्चतुरङ्गुलम् । प्रकोष्ठा-
त्कूर्परं यावद्द्व्यङ्गुलं वर्धयेत्सदा ॥ कायोत्सर्गस्थितस्यैतल्लक्षणं भाषितं
बुधैः । पर्यङ्कस्थपराण्येवम् . . .

उर्ध्वस्थितस्य मानार्द्धमुत्सेधं परिकल्पयेत् ॥ Ibid.

Such passages indicate the author's expert knowledge of the techniques of art.

2. आजानुलम्बबाहुः श्रीवत्साङ्कः प्रशान्तमूर्तिश्च ।
दिग्वासास्तरुणो रूपवांश्च कार्योर्ज्जुतां देवः ॥

(Varāhamihira's Bṛhatsaṃhitā 58 Adhyāya, 45 Śloka)

Cf. अथ विम्बं जिनेन्द्रस्य कर्तव्यं लक्षणान्वितम् । ऋग्वायतसुसंस्थानं
तरुनाङ्गुलिगन्धर्वम् । श्रीवत्सभूपितोरस्कं जानुप्राप्तकराग्रजम् । निजाङ्गुलं
प्रमाणेन साष्टाङ्गुलशतायतम् । कक्षादिरोमहीनाङ्गं श्मश्रुशेषविवाजितम् ।
ऊर्ध्वप्रलम्बकं दत्त्वा समाप्त्यन्तं च धारयेत् ॥

Vasunandi's Pratigṛhā-sāra-saṃgraha (Jaina Sidd. Library 9 ff).

3. प्रगृहीतसितविमलवरचामराग्रहस्तोभयपार्श्वस्यविविधमणि . . . विकृताभ-
रणांलङ्कृत-यक्ष-नाग-मिथुनाः ।

Akalarākhadeva's Tattvārtha-Rājavārttika

seat, (iii) Trilinear umbrella and a lion throne, (iv) Aura of a beautiful radiance, (v) Drum (Divya-dhvani), (vi) showers of celestial blossoms, (vii) 2 chowries, (viii) Heavenly music.¹ All these symbols are seen in a complete image of a Tirthankara. The Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī or Śāśana devatās (Lit. 'governing deities') are to be noticed in the lowest corner of the whole statue. When they appear in individual sculpture, the keynote to recognise is the presence of a small Jina figure either at their head or at the top of the statue. Each Tirthankara is recognisable by a cognizance or cihna usually placed below his image. Besides these, certain symbolic ornaments mark out a Jaina representation distinctly from others. These are (i) Svastika (ii) mirror, (iii) urn, (iv) cane-seat shaped like an hour-glass (v) & (vi) 2 small fish, (vii) flower garland, (viii) book. To an untrained eye, the image of a seated Tirthankara may be easily mistaken for that of the Buddha. The symbolic marks as stated above may safe-guard one from such mishmash or misinterpretation. Among the Jinas, Rṣabha, Nemi and Mahāvīra agree in the fact that they attain release when seated on the lotus-throne, while other Tirthankaras pass away in the Kāyotsarga posture (that of a man standing with his arms hanging stiff with the body).

Centres of Jaina pilgrimage

Tīrthas or Holy shrines sprang up on the sites associated with the lives of the great Jaina Prophets. In fact, the Tirthankaras made their Tīrthas. The phenomenal incidents in Jaina Litt. are known as (a) Garbha or conception, (b) Janma or Birth, (c) Tapas or acc. to others Pariniṣkramaṇa, (d) Jñāna or Enlighten-

1. दिव्यतरुः सुरपुष्पमुवृष्टिदुन्दुभिरासनयोजनबोधो ।

आतपवारणचामरमुमे यस्य विभाति च मण्डलतेजः ॥

Jaina-sāntipāṭha:

Cf. असोकवृक्षः सुरपुष्पवृष्टिदिव्यध्वनिश्चामरमासनञ्च ।

भामण्डलं दुन्दुभिरासपत्रं सत्प्रातिहायिणि जिनेश्वराणाम् ॥

A verse quoted in D.R. Bhandarkar's Jaina Iconography.

(Ind. Ant. 1911).

The Heavenly Dandubhis consist of 5 musical instruments.

See Appendix.

ment, (e) Nirvāṇa or Death or collectively Five-Kalyāṇas. Besides these, free choice was given to build Jaina temples in sacred places, on the sea-side or at any fine place or locality.¹ As a consequence, we actually find Jaina temples under a Jaina community scattered over all parts of India. Vimala sheh Tejapala and Vastupala on Mt. Abu in Rajputana and temples on the Mt. called Parasnath in S. Bihar are noteworthy in Jaina architecture. The caves in the rock, on which the fort of Gwalior is built, contain many interesting Jaina sculptures. Other sites of temples and sacred places of the Jainas are:—Mathura, Satrunjaya Hill in the Palitana State, Girnar in the Junagarh State in Kathiawar, the Indra and Jagannatha Sabhā caves, Ellora, Khajuraho in C. I., Deogarh, Gadag, Lakkundi in Dharwar, Śravaṇa Belgola. At Śravaṇa Belgola, there is a gigantic statue of Gomatesvar. Other Jaina cossii are found in Karkala and Venur in South Kanara.

Nearly all the Tirthankaras obtained consecration and perfect knowledge at their native places, though Ṛṣabha is said to have been a Kevalin i.e., one possessed of the highest knowledge, at Parimatāla, Neminātha at Gīrnār, and Mahāvīra (the last) on the Rjupālikā river. Twenty of them attained final release on Sammetaśikhara or Mt. Pārśvanātha but Neminātha enjoyed this bliss of Gīrnār, Vāsupūjya at Campāpurī in East Bihar, Mahāvīra at Pāvāpurī and Ṛṣabha himself at Aṣṭāpada, which is identified with the famous Śatruñjaya in Guzerat.² The wide distribution of Jaina images and temples in India may be gathered from a chapter of a Jaina book called Tirthakalpa, some of which, I enumerate here.

Eighty-four images of the Jainas are known to have been installed in different places of Jainism. We cite here some of the Tīrthas with the recorded installations of deities. In Śatruñ-

1. जन्म-निष्क्रमणस्वान्ताननिर्वाणभूमिषु ।

अन्येषु पुण्यदेशेषु नदीकूले नगेषु च ॥

ग्रामादिसन्निवेशेषु समुद्रपुलिनेषु च ।

अन्येषु वा मनोज्ञेषु कारयेज्जिनमन्दिरम् ॥

Mss. (Jaina S. Library, Arrah)

Bhāmibhāga, Pratipphā-Sāra-Saṅgraha.

2. "Jaina Mythology," Indian Mythology—A. B. Keith.

jaya, Ādinātha image was installed by Virasvāmī. In Sudhūkuṇḍa, there was the image of Śāntinātha. In Ujjain, the figure of Neminātha was set up. In Kāñcana-valānaka, Ariṣṭanemi image was set up. Similarly, we find mention of installations thus: In Pāpāmata, Nemīśvara. In Sopāraka, Ṛṣabhadeva.
In Nagara-mahāsthāna, Nandivardhana (Yugādideva). In the Deccan, Gomaṭadeva and Śrī Bāhubali. In North India, in the country of Kalinga, Gomaṭa Śrī Ṛṣabhadeva. In Khangāra an image of Ādinātha worshipped by Ugrasena. In the Ud-daṇḍa-vihāra of Mahānagara, the figure of Ādinātha. In Takṣaśilā, Dharma-cakra made by Bāhubali. Tāraṇa and Aṅgadhikā, Ajitanath. In Chanderi vasti, Sambhavadēva. In Segā-matigrāma, Abhinandanadeva from whose feet the river Nārada takes its rise. In Kauśāmbī, Padmaprabha. In Mathura, the stupa of Supārśva built by Mahālakṣmī. In Daśapura (Manda-sor), Śāntādevī. In Prabhāsa the image of Jvālāmālīnī. In Nasik, Candrāvati and in Vārānaśī, Candraprabha. In Koyā-dvāra, figure of Suvidhinātha. In Prayāga, Śitalanātha. In Vindhya and Malayagiri image of Śreyāṁśanātha. In Campā, Vāsupūjya. In Kāmpil, Vimalanātha. In Dvārakā, on the sea, Anantanātha. In Ratnavāhapur, near Ayodhyā, Dharmā-nātha. In Kiṣkindhā in Laṅkā, on the Trikūṭa Hill, Śāntinātha.
In Prayāga, Kunthanātha and Aranātha. On the Śrī-parvata, Mallinātha. In Bhṛṅgupattana, Munisuvrat. Again, in Pratiṣṭhāna, Ayodhyā, Vindhyaśāla, Mānikyadaṇḍaka, Munisuvrata. In Sauryyapura, Pāṭaliputra, Mathurā, Dvārakā, Sindhapura, Stambha-tīrtha, Neminātha. In Ajāgrha, Pārśvanātha. In Ahichhatra, Kunthanātha. In Nāgaloka, Kukkuṭeśvara, on the Mahendra Hill, Pārśvanātha hooded by thousand cobras. On the Śrī Hill, Śrīmālapattana, Kuṇṭagrāma, Campā, on the Vaiḥbhāra hill, in Kailāśa, image of Mahāvīra. In Aṣṭapada, twentyfour Tīrthaṅkaras, on the Sammata Śikhara, figures of twenty Jinas.¹

1. Tīrtha-kalpa—Jinaprabha, 45th kalpa (quoted in the Abhidhānarā-jendra: the Tīrthakalpa Ms. from Śivapuri has kalpas describing mainly the different places, such as Campā-kalpa, Vārāṇasī-kalpa, but does not aggregate the number 45. A modern book named Tīrthavārtā Darśaka
(by B. Gaivilāi) divides Tīrthas chiefly into Siddha-kṣetra, Śrīkṣetra, Pañca-kalyāṇaka-kṣetra and Atilaya kṣetra groups.

Age of Image worship

Orthodox Jains seem to give very great antiquity to their religion,¹ but actual historical records do not go very far back beyond the age of Mahāvīra or utmost the age of Pārśva-nātha. Their early pontiffs may not be totally unhistorical beings; in fact, they lived, had a prominent career and left much of the greatness in early Jaina Literature but so far as tangible archaeological documents are concerned, their lives only supply an unbroken chain of which the last two or three Tīrthamkaras came into the historical period. The age of the whole body of the Jaina Litt. in the present form does not recede much further than the time of Mahāvīra, of the 6th century B.C. When did image-worship come into Jainism is rather difficult to say precisely but not impossible to determine in broad lines. Should we believe in recorded tradition of an inscription, we get an actual evidence to prove that images existed among the Jains as early as the time of the Śiśunāga or the Nanda kings i.e., some years after the birth of Mahāvīra. Mention is made in the Hāthigumphā Inscription of King Khāravela of the recovery and reinstallation of an image of Śrī Rṣabha-Deva removed from the country about 300 years previously.² It may not be quite discreditable for subsequent to the death of Pārśva, his statues evidently began to be made and adored. Otherwise, how was it possible to preserve the tradition of his association with Dharaṇendra and Snakes except in art. By the time, Pārśva, and Mahāvīra flourished, Brāhmanic art was in full swing and had a much earlier history of Iconolatry. In all likelihood, this was immediately taken up by the new founders and adherents of Jainism, who necessitated the aid of image-worship in their ritualistic phase of religion. Kauṭilya, the author of Arthasāstra mentions the image of Jaina Gods viz., Jayanta, Vaijayanta, Aparājita etc., the existence would naturally go

1. अरिष्टनेमिः स्वस्ति नः (यजुर्वेदे वैश्वदेवऋचौ); रक्षारिष्टनेमि स्वाहा (बृहदारण्यके); ऋषभ एव भगवान्गृह्या (आरण्यके); स नेमिराजा (यजुः सं० १०, १, २५) etc. are Vedic references.
2. Hāthigumphā Inscription, Vol. III., Pt. IV. pp. 461-467 from the Journal of the Bihar Orissa Society, I. 12. The Khaṇḍagiri and Udaigiri caves are full of Jaina Images of very early date.

to the 4th century B.C. Image is referred to in a passage in the Antagaḍa Dasāo thus, "there dwelt in those days.... a gentleman named Nage in the city of Bhaddila pure, rich.... This gentleman Nage had a wife named Sulasā. Of the lady Sulasā it was prophesied in her childhood by a soothsayer that she should bear dead babes. Now Sulasā was from childhood a worshipper of the God Harinegameṣi. She caused to be made an image of Harinegameṣi and every morning she bathed....¹ Other references to images in Jaina Literature are : worship of prophets as gods by Jainas and Buddhas,² each Tīrthamkara has his Vimāna,³ temples and statues created to their prophets by Buddhists and Jainas.⁴ Concrete archaeological finds have been discovered at Mathura, which prove beyond all doubts that temples of images were made as early as 600 B.C. We have images of Aryāvati, dated in the 42nd year of the Satrap Soḍāsa,⁵ and "Āyāgapata" with an inscription of which the character is in form anterior to the alphabet used by the Kushan Kings and may be considerably earlier than the Christian era.⁶ The Mathura inscriptions dealt with by Dr. Fuhrer show that there are dedications and offerings of a very ancient date made to Rṣabhanātha. Lastly, we may mention the stūpas erected in honour of the 7th Jina Supārivanātha, built about the 7th century B.C. Let me quote the late Mr. V.A. Smith, the most scrupulous historian on the point : "Assuming the ordinarily received date B.C. 527 for the death of Mahāvira to be correct, the attainment of perfection by that saint may be placed about B.C. 550. The restoration of the stūpa may be dated about 1300 years later or A.D. 750. Its original erection in brick in the time of Pār-

1. The Antagaḍa-Dasāo (Oriental Tran. Fund), p. 67. Further references to images—(a) "There he had a temple of the Jina made and image of the holy Lord Śānti set up in it"—Kathākośa, Royal Asiatic Society's publication p. 210. (b) "Then the prince saw that Caitya, and an image of the eminent Rṣabha". Ibid, p. 100. (c) "On the top of this mountain, there is.....an image of the lord Nemi made out of a sapphire, Ibid p. 75.

2. Vide Jaina Sūtras (S.B.E.) 22.xxi.

3. Ibid. pp. 190, 218, 195. 276.

4. 2. xxi.

5. Pl. xiv. The Jaina Stūpa and other antiquities by V.A. Smith.

6. Ibid, Pl. xii.

śvanātha, the predecessor of Mahāvīra would fall at a date not later than B.C. 600. Considering the significance of the phrase in the inscription "built by the Gods" as indicating that the building at about the beginning of the Christian era was believed to date from a period of mythical antiquity, the date B.C. 600 for its first erection is not too early. Probably therefore, this stūpa of which Dr. Führer exposed the foundations, is the oldest known building in India".¹

1. Ibid, Chapter II.

CHAPTER I

THE TIRTHAMKARAS

The traditional number the Jainas give for their Tirthamkaras is 24. The historicity of all these 24 Tirthamkaras cannot be proved for many reasons. First of all, the number is not an original one, it is canonically the same as given by the Buddhists and the Hindus for their respective incarnations. Either we must believe that the Hindu number is older copied by the Jainas and Buddhists for the sake of form or the number is purely conjectural and stereotyped which the three religions adopted in order to keep some identity. The second objection to accrediting the number is the mythically high age, which the Jainas attribute to their Tirthamkaras. The period assigned, if we believe it, would cover many milleniums and exceed all anterior limits of the Vedic age in India. Nor can we prove the authenticity of all the early Tirthamkaras from literary records of second millenium B. C., which do not belong to the Jainas. Some Jaina scholars quote from the Vedas some identical names of the Jinas, which to Vedic scholar would positively prove none but those of Vedic Ṛṣis. Under the circumstances, it would be a scientific error to suppose that the 24 Tirthamkaras lived and preached as the Jainas religiously believe and as their books written in the Buddhistic age record. It would be far more correct to say if we all have to put some belief in all the 24, that some of them had flourished side by side and others flourished in succession to one another. The first Tirthamkara Ṛṣabhanātha about whom recorded traditions are so varied and old images (say of the Kushān age) are so many that one finds it rather difficult to disavow his historical existence. The intervening ages of the Jainas are, of course, appalling and cannot be accepted as true.

Whether real or fictitious, one fact is certain that these Tirthamkaras represent truly Jaina elements and their origin is not due to any extraneous influences. In this connection, it is to be noted that while Buddhism formally admitting a number of Buddhas makes singularly prominent the Buddha or Gautama Buddha, the Jains on the contrary render many of their Tīrthaṅkaras appear in the forefront. A modern temple of the Jains would show a gallery of images of many of their Tīrthaṅkaras to whom equal respect is offered in their daily worship.

In the Jaina pantheon, the Tīrthaṅkaras have been given the highest position. Even the gods and goddesses many of whom are borrowed beings from Hinduism come in subordinate order and have been regarded as ministering hands to the Jinas. In Hemacandra's, Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi, the divinities have been classified under two classes:—The Devādideva or the higher gods and the Devas or ordinary gods. To the former class, he has assigned the Tīrthaṅkaras and the subordinate deities, who are almost purely of Jaina origin. In the minor class, we find other gods, who share their existence equally with the Hindu pantheon. In Iconography, also, this idea of the relative superiority of the Jains has manifested itself. In the earliest sculptures of Jainism, the Tīrthaṅkaras prominently occupy about the whole relief of the stone.

Jainism is a living religion in India and the temples of the Jains preserving the old tradition of image-worship to a considerable extent should give us many materials for Iconography. The images in a Jaina temple are arranged in order of precedence. There is one Mūla-nāyaka, he may be either Ṛṣabha-nātha, Supārśvanātha, Pārśvanātha or Mahāvīra surrounded by other Jinas, who hold a less dignified position according as the temple-cult is associated with him. This predominance of a particular Jina is due to the situation of the temple in a place sanctified by him. For instance, in the temple at Sārnāth believed by the Jains to be the Birth-place of Śreyāṃśanātha, we find his image in the position of a mūlanāyaka. Other deities such as the Yakṣa, Śāsana-devatā, Lakṣmī, Gaṇeśa play the part as subordinates to the Jinas and are found in their relative positions in a temple. Thus, we see the Tīrthaṅkaras are the highest divinities in Jainism and they are believed to be absolutely free from desires (Rāgas) while the other gods and goddesses possess desires and have their heavens of enjoyment. Here, the Jaina ideal of asceticism asserts itself and their stand-point in this respect is brought to bear upon their Iconography. The Jainas represent a high order of asceticism and other gods, according to the Jaina belief, cannot approach that order. In actual images, the Jinas are shewn as ascetics draped, sometimes naked in two Yogic postures of Padmāsana or Kāyotsarga. In general appearance, the image of Tīrthāṅkara resembles that of Dakṣiṇā-mūrti of Śiva. This resemblance is significant and it may be possible to infer that the Jaina imagery might have been borrowed from Śiva's asceticism. There is also some resemblance between a Jina image and a Buddha image and a layman is very apt to mistake one for the other. What are the differences between the two, common to all idols? Jaina images of Tīrthāṅkaras, whether new or old, must have a Śrīvatsa symbol on the chest of the figures, must have a trilinear umbrella above the figure and except the early Mathura statues, have a Lāñchana or symbol which not only distinguishes them from other images but differentiates them from each other. The fact that the Jaina images of the Kushān period from Muttra do not bear the *Lāñchana*s prove that in the earliest stage of Jaina Iconography, there had not been a practice of marking out a Jina figure with a distinctive symbol. Next, probably a confusion arose to distinguish a Jina figure from another having a stereotyped appearance. Thus images of the Gupta and subsequent periods have invariably a Lāñchana and cannot be misapprehended. Although the Tīrthāṅkara images of the Kushāna age bear no *Lāñchana*s, in cases of the Pārśva image, the Kushāna artists have given a snake canopy behind the head of the figure and we are enabled to identify the Jina without any difficulty.¹

In other cases, we are almost left in the dark as to the identification of the Jina represented unless inscriptions come to enlighten us with the actual names of the Jina.² Of course, such inscriptions are only too limited in number. Thus, it may be repeated that the earliest Jina figures had no distinguishing *Lāñchana*s. This conclusion does not probably imply that *Lāñchana*s were not known to the Jainas and to the Jaina artists.

1. Fig 2. plate OXC. V.A. Smith's "The Jaina Stupa and other antiquities of Mathura.
2. Image of Sambhavanātha the year 48, Epi. Ind. Vol. X. Plate III, P. 112.

In fact, we find a large number of these distinctive symbols, to wit, a bull, ram, deer; Krauñca bird, elephant, dolphin, Śyena bird, conch, lion, lotus, rhinoceros, buffalo, represented on rail-bars and coping stones discovered in Kankālī Tīlā of Mathura.¹ The Kalpasūtra, a very early text of the Jaina canon (date 300 B.C.) gives a list of all the 24 Lāñchanas for the 24 Jinas, monumental evidences fail to show their early association with their master in sculptural art. In no sculpture of the Kushan age from Mathura the Tirthaṅkara figure is seen attended by either a Yakṣa or a Yakṣiṇī. Curiously, however one example of a Yakṣiṇī named Ambikā is to be noticed in a sculpture on the reverse of the Jina statue of the year 9 from Mathura.² From the Gupta period onwards, we find the Jaina sculptors have regularly appended the Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī figures to the sculptures of the Tirthaṅkaras.³ Thus, it may be concluded that the Lāñchanas as well as the Yakṣa figures might have remained as isolated and in a germinal state and their actual association with the Jaina images did not take place in the Kushan age of Jaina art.

Another feature of the Jina icon is the presence of Gaṇadharas just to the right and left of the main figure. Jaina texts specially of iconography mention them as attendants of a Tirthaṅkara.⁴ Such figures are represented as holding some Chowris, one of them might be shown with its hands clasped in adoration. Though Yakṣa figures are absent from the early Jina images of Mathura, Gaṇadhara figures are prominent by their presence in many of these images.⁵

A further feature of the Mathura Sculpture is that most of the Jina figures are shown completely naked. No conclusion,

1. Ibid, Plate LXXV, Figs 1, 3, 5, Plate LXXIV, Figs 2, 3, 4, 5, Plate LXXI, Figs. 2-7, Plate LXXX, Fig. 3, Plate LXXXI, Fig. 1.

2. Jaina Fig. the year 9, back, Pl. 1. Ep. In. Vol. X, p. 109.

3. A pair of conches, deer or lion indicate nothing of this image with conches below the seat.

4. Ancient image of Rābhanātha from Kankālī Tīlā, V.A. Smith's "Mathura stupa", plate XC VIII wrongly identified for Neminātha. The Śaṇa-devatā seen in this base is not Cakreśvarī with discs but Ambikā with a child in her lap.

5. New Brāhmi inscriptions of the Scythian period by R.D. Banerji, Ep. Ind. Vol. X, Plate 1, p. 109.

however, can be drawn from the images of the Scythian or Pre-Scythian period as to their origin either of the Digambara or Śvetāmbara sect. The Śvetāmbaras, on no ground, would allow their figures to be represented as such. The Mathura Jaina figures can neither be claimed by the Digambaras because we find the attendant Gaṇadharas both male and female in the sculptures are fully draped and decorated with ornaments, a custom which stands in opposition to their doctrine as they never permit any nun an admission into the ascetic order. Therefore, it can safely be concluded that the sectarian distinction relating to nudity or drapery did not, atleast in sculptures, originate as early as the Kushan period.

The Gupta period showed a marked development in the iconographic characteristics of a Jina figure. Not only do we see in such images the particular Lāñchanas incorporated but miniature figures of a Yakṣa and Śāsana devatā invariably included.¹ Other marks such as a trilinear umbrella, a drum-player surmounting it, a pair of elephants on two sides of the umbrella and a Dharmacakra symbol attended by a pair of either bulls or deer form parts of a Jina sculpture.

All these Iconographic marks are prescribed for a Jina image in Jaina books on *Pratiṣṭhā*² (or installation of images) written about the late Gupta period. Of these marks, the Dharma-cakra symbol seems to be positively of early growth. We find even in the Kushan Jina images the simple representation of a Dharmacakra symbol. The addition of a pair of bulls or deer begins with figure of the Gupta period (Epi. ind. Vol. II. p. 210. Sculpture from Koṣam) on both sides of the "Wheel of the Law". The bulls may have some mythological connexion with Rṣabhanātha, whose symbol is a bull and who first turned the "Wheel of the Law" or in other words, founded the Jaina religion. A pair of antelopes facing the Dharmacakra, a device

1. "This image of a Jina, richly endowed with the embellishments of the expanded hoods of a snake and an attendant female divinity, having the name Pārīva"—Fleet, Gupta Inscriptions no. 61. Pl. XXXVIII, p. 258 ff. Cf. Jaina Cave at Badami, Arch : Surv. W. Ind. Vol. I, p. 25.
2. Vasunandi is the author of Pratiṣṭhāsāra. He flourished in 536, see Bhandarkar's Report published by the Jaina Svatantra Bhāṇḍāra, Pāvāpurī.

of later growth, must have been borrowed from the Buddhist Iconography. Some of these symbols viz. Dharma-cakra, Chowris, lion-seat, 3 umbrellas, an aureola, an Aśoka tree have been enumerated among the 21 Atīśayas or supernatural qualities of a Jina by Hemacandra in his Abhidhānacintāmaṇi. The Jina sculptures of the Gupta and the later ages are found to be always marked with these well-known symbols.

The Jaina religion places some of the Hindu deities in a subordinate category (under Devas and not Devādhidevas) and makes them waiting upon the Tirthaṅkaras. This fact is strikingly borne out by some of the Hindu sculptures of the Gupta period. For instance, in the illustration of the so-called image of "R̥ṣabha," Mathura series, Kaṅkāli Tūlā, we can recognise in the two figures immediately to the right and left of the main figure, Balarāma with a snake-canopy and a plough and Vāsudeva with his usual attributes of conch, club (flute?), Vanamālā and disc. As the Jina represented is undoubtedly Neminātha known from his Yakṣa Gomeda and Śāsanadevatā Ambikā, this relation of Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, the Jina's cousins, is ingeniously brought into relief by the sculptor. The sculpturing of the pedestal of the Jina images underwent some changes in the Gupta period. In many instances, the pedestal of the Kushan age shews a large group of male and female devotees surrounding the Dharma-cakra surmounting a pilaster. The pedestals in the Gupta age as mentioned before, portray a pair of deer and the figures of the planets in a lower row.

When we come to treat of the race and families of the Jinas we find that history and mythology cannot be co-ordinated. The Jaina books inform us that twenty-two Tirthaṅkaras belonged to the Ikṣvāku race and the two, namely, Munisuvrata and Nemi belonged to the Harivaṁśa family. From the stereotyped character of the birth, renunciation and salvation of the Jinas, we are led to believe that their lives had been cast into the same mould. They shewed no novelty or variety in their character. The 24 Tirthaṅkaras, as if, led a monotonous course of existence on earth. Although, however, their lives are outwardly similar, there are in them a great many points of difference which the Jaina mythology brings home to us. The names of the Jinas (explained by the commentators), their mothers'

16 dreams, Lāñchanas, Yakṣas shew a widely varied character. It is, indeed, so difficult to separate truth from mythology in the critical treatment of their lives as they are presented in the Jaina Purāṇas. Some observations may safely be made regarding the genetic development of the mythological matter. The origin of the names is purely an accidental matter and there is hardly any room for believing in Hemacandra's much-laboured interpretation of the Jina names sometimes with reference to grammar, sometimes to a myth associated with their lives. For instance, he would explain the name Nemi as derived from the circumference (नेमि) of the Dharmacakra, the name Pārśva as derived from the fact that "he touches (Spr̥ṣati) all ideas by knowledge" or from the circumstance that his mother in her pregnancy, while lying, saw a black serpent crawling about. Hemacandra by similar method traces the origin of the name R̥ṣabha of the first Jina from the myth that his mother before his birth saw in her 14 dreams a bull as the very first.

The dreams of the Jina's mothers and the way in which a Jina is born descending from heaven bear a distant echo of Buddha's mother Māyā's dream and her conception. All the mythological stories related in the Jaina Purāṇas seem to have been engrafted into the life of a Jina. For instance, the 14th Tirthaṅkara Mallinātha was made a woman by the Śvetāmbaras. They tell a story in support of his female incarnation. It is related in Hemacandra's Mallinātha Carita, chap. 6. that Mallinātha in his previous birth while practising penances with other ascetics concealed some extra penances from them. As a result of this, he was born as a woman. The Digambaras, however, lay no credence to all this fanciful story of the Śvetāmbaras, probably fabricated in order to show that women had equal rights with men to asceticism and salvation. From the enormous mass of mythological matter, we may draw out one or two facts which should claim our serious attention. The Lāñchanas of some of the Jinās look like the totems of the families to which they belonged. For instance, the Ikṣvāku family of Ayodhyā used bull as a vehicle.¹ Hence, R̥ṣabhanātha descending from the same famous royal family made a bull as his totem or Lāñchana.

1. This point is elaborated in a Hindi article by Rai Krishna Das, Secretary, Nāgarī Pracārīṇī Sabhā, Benares.

Similarly, Munisuvrata's and Neminātha's respective symbols of tortoise and conch speak of their birth from the Hari family, whose connection with these Vaiṣṇavite symbols are well-known.

JINAS IN ĀYĀGAPAṬAS

The Kaṅkāli Ṭilā of Mathura yielded among other sculptures some Āyāgapaṭas of very early age. In 3 of them, we notice the Tīrthaṅkara figure seated with hands laid in the lap. A feature of these representations is the inclusion of some of the Jaina Aṣṭamaṅgala symbols such as a pair of fish, a Svastika etc. in a serial row around the main figure. A head-dress and trace of a parasol are visible in the case of one Āyāgapaṭa (pl. VII. Smith's Mathura).

There is hardly any mark or Lāñchana by which we can recognise the particular Jinas figured in these tablets of homage. One tablet, however, shows the figure of a Jina, which by its mark of snake-canopy we can identify as that of Pārśvanātha. The representations of Jinas in these Āyāgapaṭas of pre-Kushan age as may be proved from the script of the inscriptions on them appear to be the earliest in the stages of Jaina iconography. Thus, we can infer that in the first stage of iconic development Jinas had no Lāñchanas or distinctive marks, the Pārśva figure had the invariable symbol of snake canopy and some of the Aṣṭamaṅgalikas had been very primitive in their growth.

The figures in this tablet of homage (VII, IX, X) as they belong to an age anterior to Kushan rule, are devoid of any mark of any classical influence and are purely of Indian origin. The conventional type of a Jina figure must have been derived from an Indian Yogī seated erect in meditation. The general appearance of Jina figures, their face, body is the same and with the exception of their distinctive marks of Lāñchanas they would be just regarded as representing only one Tīrthaṅkara.

VARIETIES OF JINAS OF THE KUSHAN SCHOOL

The Tīrthaṅkara images of the Kushan age may be divided into 3 varieties viz: first, in which the Jina figures form a part of a sculptured panel; second, in which the figures are represented as images for worship; third, figures in the middle of the Āyāgapāṭas. The Jinas in panels in one case are seated in a row in meditation posture on both sides of a stupa, (Pl; XVII, fig. 2) and another, Neminātha preaching to royalty (2). In the former, the third Jina is endowed with snake hood of Pārśvanātha, others possessing no distinctive marks. The "imagetypes" of Jinas of this age have some noticeable peculiarities, such as, seated figures have no attendants on sides but have a devotional scene on the pedestal; standing figures are nude and are attended by 2 Gaṇadharas.

JINA QUADRUPLÉ

In place of the Brāhmanic Trimūrti, there is the Jaina Quadruple, popularly known as "Caumukhi". It has the further name of Sarvaśobhadra-Pratimā i.e. auspicious from all sides. It is a broad obelisk representing the figure of a Tīrthamkara on each of the four sides. There seems to be no regularity as to the particular Jinas to be sculptured there. But the most important of them have, as a rule, been selected for representation in a Caumukhi. The symbols and descriptions of the Jinas in such a group are those that we shall discuss next in connection with them separately.

Adinātha or Rṣabhanātha

The Jaina Purāṇas and ritualistic texts do not yield much in the way of describing specially the images of the Tīrthamkaras. The same may be said of the Jaina Śilpa Śāstras, which seem to be very laconic in this respect. On the contrary, all this body of literature, when traced, is very informative with regard to the iconography of the attendant figures of the Jinas as well as the other divinities.

From the categorical list of the Lāñchanas or emblems of the Jinas given in the *Pravacanasāroddhāra*¹ we are informed that the first Tīrthamkara's cognizance is a Bull. Over and above this symbol, we get a clue that he has also the symbol of Dharma-Cakra.¹ All the patriarchs have certain special trees under which they received the Kevala Jñāna or Perfect Knowledge. The tree connected with the first Jina is Nyagrodha or the Indian Banyan tree. Other iconographic marks of the Jina are his Yakṣa named Gomukha (lit. Bull-Faced) and Yakṣiṇī Cakreśvarī (Goddess of wheels) or Apraticakrā. The texts give two worshippers on either side of Ṛṣabha-deva viz. Bharata and Bāhubali.²

१. वसहगयतुरयवानरकुचो कमलं च सत्त्वियो चंदो ।
मयसरिखच्छगण्डयमहिसवराहो यः सेणो यः ।

The images of Ādinātha, so far discovered in India and preserved in Museums and temples, essentially satisfy the above conditions. The illustration of the saint we have reproduced in Pl. II, shows the effigy of a bull in the middle of the pedestal. At the left end of it, may be seen the figure of Yakṣiṇī Cakreśvarī, who holds a discus and rides the Guraḍa. Standing types of the same Jina statues may also be seen. In these, nudity is very prominent and there is no lion or the lion-seat.³

In the Jaina history of the Patriarchs, Ṛṣabhanātha or Vṛṣabhanātha is regarded as the founder of the religion. Details of his history are preserved in the Ādipurāṇa of the Digambaras, Kalpasūtra and Hemachandra's Triṣaṣṭhi-Salākāpuruṣacaritra of the

वज्रं हरिणो ह्यगलो नंदावसो यः कलसकुम्भो यः ।

नीलपुष्पलसंस्पर्शनीसीहो अ जिनाय चिन्हाहं ॥

प्रबचनसारोद्धार 16 द्वार

1. तक्षशिलायां बाहुबलिना कारिते भगवत ऋषभदेवस्य धर्मप्रकाशके चक्रे च आवः ।

2. पार्श्वयोर्मरुतबाहुबलिम्यामुपसेवितः ।

राघोम्या (?) निव पाथोधिर्बभासे वृषभध्वजः ॥

Triṣaṣṭisādhikā, Ādīśvara, 1st Parva, 3rd Ch. 58 verse.

I saw in an old picture collection preserved in the Asiatic Society of Bengal Mss. Collection No. 1544, the representation of Ṛṣabhanātha attended by Bharatacakrī, his son.

3. For examples see the figure of Ṛṣabhanātha half way up on the Vaibhār hill of Rājgir. It has a mark of a lotus with two bulls on either side. For other fig. vide and cf. Cunningham Arch. S. R. Vol XI., p. 12. Ibid., Vol. X p. 17. Ibid., Vol. IX., p. 58. Mathura Museum Catalogue, p. 67. fig. B. 4., p. 71, fig. B 21, p. 81, fig. B 76, Deogarh Fort, 2228 list... (3) Ibid., No. 2223.

Śvetāmbaras. Curiously, the Brāhmanic Purāṇas like the Bhāgavata Agni and Varāha mention him as an incarnation of Viṣṇu although by his symbolism of a bull and his place of Mokṣa as Kailāsa, one is tempted to connect him with Śiva in these respects. Whatever may be the real or supposed relation between these three gods, that he is prominently a Jaina Prophet and his image has little or no connection with any Brāhmanic image may be taken as a proven fact.

The explanation of his bull symbol is clear from the origin of his name. His mother like the mothers of all the Tīrthāṅkaras saw certain dreams and the first dream was about a bull. Hence, the name of the Jina as Vṛṣabhanātha or Ṛṣabhanātha and the symbol of bull as invariably connected with his representation.¹ The symbol of his Yakṣa Gomukha having a bull's face has a definite connection with the same origin. Cakreśvarī, the Yakṣiṇī of the Jina looks like the Vaiṣṇavī, the wife of Brāhmanic Viṣṇu. Thus, the originator of the sculpture tried to show the superiority and triumph of Ādinātha over Śiva, and Viṣṇu, the two greatest gods of the Brāhmaṇas.

Ajitanātha Saptaparṇa

The Jaina original books give him the symbol of elephant (Gaja) and his other symbol, namely his special tree (kevala-

1. ऊर्वोर्बुधमलाञ्छनमभूद् भगवतो जनन्या च चतुर्दशानां स्वप्नानामादावुभो
दृष्टस्तेन ऋषभः ।

Hemacandra: Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi

"All mothers of Tīrthāṅkaras see, first of all, this elephant in their dreams excepting only the mother of Ṛṣabhadeva, who saw a bull first, hence the child's name. Mrs. Stevenson's Heart of Jainism, p. 22. The 14 Dreams are:—

गजो बृषो हरिः साभिषेकश्रीः स्रक्शशी रविः ।

महाध्वजः पूर्णकुम्भः पद्मसरः सरित्पतिः ॥

विमानं रत्नपुञ्जश्च विधुरग्निरिति क्रमात् ।

ददर्श स्वामिनी स्वप्नान्मुखे प्रविशतस्तदा ॥

Triṣaṣṭi-Salākā, Parva 10, Sarga II-19-21.

Uttarapurāṇa, Parva 48.

vṛkṣa) 'tree' both being connected with his images. Further, two other iconographic points by which Ajitanātha's statues may be differentiated from those of others are the figures of his particular Yakṣa called Mahāyakṣa and his Yakṣiṇī named Ajitabalā. Mention of these is made in the Jaina canonical Literature. His posture is what is technically known as Khaḍgāsana i.e., standing with two arms hanging on the sides. His chowir-bearer is Sagaracakrī.

In sculpture, the images of Ajitanātha fully answer to the above characteristic descriptions. Two noteworthy figures of Ajita, one in the Deogarh Fort, Jhānsi² and another preserved under the old sculpture-shed at Sarnath, Benares,³ may be cited here as examples bearing his symbols. In both these representations, his main figure is standing in the so-called Khaḍgāsana; in the Deogarh-statue, it is attended by two Chowri-bearers and two devotees in front of them. The emblem of elephant is shown as usual under the seat of the Jina. The Yakṣa and the Yakṣiṇī occupy the two corners of the pedestal.

The origin of his symbolism and his name can be traced to the Jaina books. The Jina's mother saw an elephant in her several dreams.⁴ An elephant in India is always connected with kingly power. After his birth all his father's enemies were conquered (Jita), hence his name the 'invincible' one. The Śvetāmbara author Hemachandra interprets his name as 'not conquered by excrement of the bowels etc.'⁵

The Digambara authoritative book, the Uttarapurāṇa

1. माघे मासि सिते पक्षे रोहिण्यां नवमीदिने ।

सहेतुके बने सप्तपर्णद्रुमसमीपगः ॥

Uttara Purāṇa, Parva 48.

2. Image of Ajitanātha, Deogarh, No. 2526, List of Photo-negatives, A.S.I.

3. Catalogue of the Sarnath Museum, No. g. 61.

4. The dream of an elephant admitting into the mouth of Ajita's mother is particularly mentioned in the undermentioned verse.

देवीं विजयसेनाख्यां षोडशस्वप्नपूर्वकम् ।

प्रविशन्तं विलोक्यात्मवक्त्राब्जं गन्धसिन्दुरम् ॥

Uttara, Parva 48.

5. पुरीषहाऽऽदिभिर्न जित इत्यजितः । explains the word Ajita as not conquered by sin or by all heretics'.¹ Thus, all the facts and ideas primarily connected with the life and teachings of this Jina, converge to one point "invincibility", 'conquest.' His elephant emblem, his Yakṣa's just the identical emblem together with the warlike symbols of spear, goad, club etc., his Yakṣiṇī's symbols noose, goad etc eminently express the idea of temporal conquest, on one hand, the symbols of rosary, Varada mudrā, and abhaya mudrā on the part of the Yakṣa and Varada mudrā on the part of the Yakṣiṇī, the idea of spiritual conquest on the other.

Sambhavanātha

The Jaina literature relating to our subject provides the distinct clue to identify the image of Sambhavanātha. That clue is the symbol of horse (Turaya Skt. Turaga) connected with his representations. We are informed from the same literature of his Yakṣa being Trimukha and Yakṣiṇī being Duritārī Devi—other special marks of his images. The tree under which Sambhavanātha received the Kevala knowledge and of which the mention is made in the Jaina books is the Indian Śāla tree² (Shorea robusta)—his Chowri-bearer is called Satyavīrya. So far with iconographical details.

The Jina's parentage has come down to our knowledge through Jaina history. His father was a king named Dṛḍharāja and his mother was called Suśeṇā. His birth place is Śrāvastī.³

We come now to discuss the origin of his name respecting which there is a tale in Jaina books. "The king, his father, had been distressed to see the way his dominions were ravaged by plague, but when he heard the good news of the boy's birth, he felt there was a chance (Sambhava) of better times coming,

1. पापैः क्वापि न जीयतेऽयमिति वा दुर्वादिभिश्चाखिलै-
र्मान्वायैर्मवाप्तवानिति विदोः स्तोत्रस्य पार्श्वे भवन् ॥

Uttarapurāṇa, Parva 48.

2. द्विसप्तसु गते दीक्षावने शालतरोरधः ।

Verse 40 para 49,

Uttarapurāṇa.

3. द्वीपेऽस्मिन् भारते वर्षे श्रावस्तिनगरे शिलः ।

राज्ञः काश्यपगोत्रस्य दृढराजस्य सद्युतेः ।

वत्सभेदवाकुर्वशस्य सुपेणा तत्सुरागमे ॥

Ibid. 49.

hence the boy's name"¹. The Jina's symbol of horse, which in India is regarded as auspicious² originates from the idea of good chance associated with his name. His Yakṣa's emblem of a mongoose Skt. Sarvatobhadra (lucky on all sides), and the Yakṣiṇī's name as Duritāri, meaning 'vanquisher of enemies' and her symbols of Varada mudrā, fruit and Abhaya all very clearly bespeak the same idea of auspiciousness or 'good chance.'

Not many sculptures of Sambhavanātha have yet been found out. But those that are found show in lithic art the aphorism of iconography as enunciated before on the basis of Jaina original texts.³

Abhinandanānātha

The fourth Tīrthamkara's iconographic marks may be gathered from the different Jaina books in different contexts. His emblem or the so-called Lāñchana is an ape.⁴ The tree connected with his Kevala knowledge is Piyāla (Vesāli tree according to other texts). The Yakṣa believed to have been appointed by Indra, as in all cases, to serve him is named Īvara and the Yakṣiṇī's name is Kālī. The particular pose in which he is to appear in sculpture is called Khaḍgāsana i.e., standing posture.

In sculpture, all this specification has been followed almost strictly. The examples of his figures are rare in India.

1. Heart of Jainism, p. 51.

Of. यद्वा—गर्भस्येऽस्मिन् द्यूते राज्ञा जननी न जितेत्यजितशं सुखं भवत्यस्मिन् स्तुते सम्भवः । यद्वा—गर्भगतेऽप्यस्मिन्नभ्यधिकायस्य सम्भवात् सम्भवोऽपि ॥

2. धेनुर्वत्स्रयुक्ता द्युपगजतुरगा दक्षिणावर्तवह्निः ।
दिव्यस्त्री पूर्णकुम्भा द्विजनृपगणिका पुष्पमाला पताका ॥

etc., are lucky things at all times.

3. An inscribed image of Sambhavanātha at Khajurāho in Hamirpur. Cf. Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Rep. Vol. II., Epi Ind. Vol. I p. 112 & Plate III

4. In another text the list of the Lāñchanas is given as follows :—

गौर्गजोऽश्वः कपिः कोकः कमलं स्वस्तिकः शशी ।
मकरः श्रीद्रुमो गण्डो महिषः कोलसेधिको ।
वज्रं मृगोऽजष्टगरं कलशः कूर्म उत्पलम् ।
शङ्खो नागाधिपः सिंहो लाञ्छनान्यर्हता क्रमात् ।

In Jaina history of pontiffs, Abhinandanānātha's birth-place is Ayodhyā.¹ His father's name is King Svayaṃvara and mother's name Siddhārthā.² He attained mokṣa accompanied by a thousand monks, as, indeed, did all the first eleven Tīrthaṅkaras except Supārśvanātha.³

In treating of his symbolism, we encounter some difficulties. His main symbol is a monkey. If we interpret hari, one of the dreams of Jina's mothers, to stand for a monkey, the propriety of the emblem is explained. Hari also means a lion, which makes it a symbol of Mahāvīra. The real nature of his Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī may, to some extent, help us to get at the meaning of the symbols. Yakṣa, as we have seen, is named Īśvara and Yakṣiṇī is named Kālī. Clearly, they are Śaivite deities borrowed from the Brāhmaṇic pantheon. Thus, it is likeliest to connect the ape of the Jina with the apish incarnation of Īśvara or Śiva. The explanation of his name is given clearly enough in the Jaina books.⁴ According to it, he acquired the name of Abhinandana because he used to be honoured (Abhinandana) by Indra and others.

Sumatinātha

He is known from the Jaina Literature to be associated with the symbol of a curlew (Krauñcha) or a red goose. The Kevala tree, in his case, is Priyaṅgu. The Yakṣa and Yakṣi attend-

1. The birth places of Jainas are given collectively in the following passage:—

.... 'जन्मस्य इमा नु नयरीओ ।

इक्खागभूमज्जुज्झा सावली दौअउज्जो कोसंबी ।

वाणारसि चन्दपुरी कायंदी भदिलपुरं च ॥

सीधपुरचम्पकपिल्लउज्जयणपुररतिगयपुरमहिला ।

रायगिहमिहिलसूरियपुरवाणारसि य कुंडपुरं ॥

Abhidhāna Rājendra Satta, Dvāra 20.

2. द्वीपेऽस्मिन् भारते वर्षे साकेतनगराधिपः ।

राजा स्वयम्बरो नाम्ना सिद्धार्थास्याप्रवल्लभा ॥

Uttarapurāṇa, Verse 16.

3. Heart of Jainism, p. 52.

4. अभिनन्दते देवेन्द्रादिभिरित्यभिनन्दनः ॥

Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi.

ing upon him in the image are named Tumbaru and Mahākālī. His chowribearer is called Mitravīrya.

The sculptures extant agree with the rules of Iconography as given before. Besides the fundamental marks, which specialise one Jina from all the rest, the sculpture contains the figures of the flying garland-bearers, the drums etc., and sometimes miniature figures of other Jina which with the main figure complete the number of twenty-four. The lion-seat is meaningfully borne by a pair of lions. Two elephants often are seen either pouring showers of water or merely standing at the top of the main figure. Apart from the special cognizance of the Jina, a Cakra or wheel is noticed represented on the pedestal. The donor's image is also included below the feet of the statue. Images of Sumatinātha have been found in many places in Northern India, the most noteworthy figure to be mentioned is the one discovered at Sahet Mahet.¹

The Sumatinātha's native place and his parents have been mentioned in the Jaina traditional history. His birth place was Ayodhyā (Sāketa), his father was called Megharatha and mother Maṅgalā.² When and how he attained the Kevala knowledge and what palanquin carried him, all these are given in the Uttarapurāṇa. We omit, however, those details as rather too far from our main topic.

With regard to the derivation of his name, there is, as usual, a story to explain it. "The child was called Sumatinātha, because even before his birth his mother's intellect (Sumati) was so sharpened. To prove the queen's ability, a story resembling that of the judgment of Solomon runs. An old Brahmin died, leaving two wives; both women claimed the only son as their's and the dispute was taken to the queen to settle, who decreed, as Solomon did (and with similar result), that

1. See. Arch. Surv. Rept. 1907-8.

2. द्वीपेऽस्मिन् भारते वर्षे साकेते वृषभान्वये ।

तद्गोत्रे क्षत्रियोऽस्तारिः स्लाघ्यो मेघरथोऽभवत् ।

मङ्गलास्य महादेवी वसुधाराऽपि पूजिता ॥

the living child should be cut into two".¹ The Jina's Lāñchana of a goose has clear association with the same symbol of Sarasvatī, the goddess of intelligence. It summarily symbolises the central idea of Sumati or Intelligence behind the life of the Tīrthamkara. In other cases, we shall see, the symbol is the material object to stand for the name. As for example the crescent is the symbol of Candraprabha (lit. 'shining like the moon').

Padmaprabha

The books of Jainism assign to the sixth Tīrthamkara Padmaprabha the cikna or iconographic cognizance of a red lotus. His Kevala tree is called the Chatrābha. The attendant spirits are named Kusuma and Śyāmā (Dig. Manovegā). The chowri-bearer, generally, the contemporary king, is Yamadyuti by name. So far with sculptural details from literary sources.

The sculptures of Padmaprabha so far discovered in Jaina places, though not many in number, when seen in the light of iconography tally with the above description.² I have seen two images of Padmaprabha wrongly identified as Mahāvīra on the Vaibhāra Hill in Rājgir with the clear symbol of a lotus on the pedestal. The two lions should not have been mistaken for the symbol Mahāvīra in the presence of the lotus, the lions being simply the bearers of the Sinhāsana or lion-seat.

We are informed by the Jaina Purāṇas of both sects that his native place is Kauśāmbī. His father's name is known as Susimā. Other details are left out as being redundant.³

Two interpretations of his name are given. First, his colour was of a red lotus, hence the name. Second, his mother, while the Jina was in her womb, expressed a desire to sleep upon a bed of red lotuses, which was fulfilled. This originated the name.

1. Heart of Jainism p. 52. Cf. शोभना मतिर्यस्य सुमतिः । यद्वा गर्भस्थे जनन्याः सुनिश्चिता मतिरभूदिति सुमतिः ॥

Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi.

2. Cf. Cunningham: Arch. Surv. Rep. VIII., p. 193.

3. जम्बूद्वीपे च कौशाम्ब्याः पतिरिक्ष्वाकुवंशजः ।

गोत्रेण काश्यपो राजा घरणाख्यो महानभूत् ॥

तस्य देवी सुसीमाख्या रत्नवृष्ट्यादिमानिता ॥

Uttarapurāṇa.

His symbolism is just expressive of the same fact. The name of Yakṣa attendant Kusuma connected with him means a flower and lends support to the very idea.

Supārśvanātha

He has, according to the canon, the emblem of the mystic cross called the Svastika. Books give him the additional symbolic decorations of serpents. There is some regularity with regard to the number of the hoods of the serpents. The number must be either one or five or nine.¹ His Kevala tree is Śirīṣa (शिरिष).²

The attendant spirits serving him are mātaṅga and Śānti (Dig. Varanandi and Kālī). The name of the bearer of the fly-fan is Dharmavīrya.

Now, the Purāṇas give the historical news that he was the son of a Kṣatriya ruling prince named Supratīṣṭha. The mother was Queen Pṛthivī by name. His birth-place and kingdom was Banarés and Kāśī.³ Unlike the other earlier Tirthankara, he attained Mokṣa with only five hundred companions.

The representation of Supārśvanātha in art may either be seen in a group or single. Either of these representations fulfils the condition laid down by the canons. The most important point regarding Supārśvanātha's image is the five-fold serpent-hood as distinguished from the usual seven-fold serpent-hood of Pārśvanātha.⁴ Disregard or ignorance of this point has led to many wrong identifications. For instance, in the Catalogue of the Mathura Museum, Dr. Vogel has, in several instances, written without being sure "a Jina, either Supārśva or Pārśvanātha"⁵ Again, the statue No. B 62 has been wrongly identified as Jina Pārśvanātha. It is, in fact, the figure of Supārśvanātha. The image also shows another cognizance of the Jina, namely,

1. इग पण नव य सुपासे (एकः पञ्च नव च फणाः, सुपास्ये सप्तमे जिने ।)
Sattoasdroddhāra, 43 Dvāra.

2. सुपास्यो मौनमास्याय च्छादमस्ये नववर्षकः ।
सहेतुकवने मूले शिरीषस्य द्र्युपोषितः ॥

Uttarapurāṇa.

3. सुप्रतिष्ठमहाराजो बाराणस्या महीपतिः ।
तस्यासीत्पुष्पिणीयेणा देवी तस्या गृहाङ्गणे ॥ Ibid.

4. Cunningham: Arch. Surv. Rep. Vol. XIX, p. 6.

5. Prof. Dr. Vogel: Cat. Arch: Mus. Mathura, p. 73.

Svastika. Prof. Vogel himself writes, "and that over the outermost head on the proper left and the Svastika."¹

His name has a historical meaning. He acquired the name of Supārva because he was endowed from birth with 'beautiful sides'.² His mother suffered from leprosy in both her sides. This dreadful disease was cured before the Child's birth, so he was given the name of Su (good) Pārva (side).³ This has also evident connection with his emblem of Svastika which stands for good and auspiciousness.

Candraprabha

The main iconographic details to be gleaned from the Jaina books distinguish the image of Candraprabha from all other Indian images. His Lāñchana or technical emblem is the moon or the crescent. His special tree is Nāga (Nāgakeśara, (नागकेशर). The goblins are Vijaya and Bhṛkuṭi (Jvālāmālīnī). The Chowri-bearer, who does him honour is called Dāna-vīrya.

Many good specimens of this Jina's image have come to light in Northern India. All of them, however, answer the definitions as detailed above, in a specific way. The artists in India, it is well known, acted up to the demands of the priests and temple-worshippers. In sculpture, we get two types, the seated and the standing types, in which the main figure of the Tīrthaṅkara appears amidst his attendants and Chowri-bearers.⁴ It is obviously not a difficult question to explain the origin of his name and his symbolism. Literally, he was called Candraprabha because he had the lustre (Prabhā) of that of the moon.⁵ There is also a historical tradition accounting for this name—

1. Ibid., p. 77.

2. शोभनी पार्श्ववस्य सुपार्श्वः । Hemacandra.

3. Heart of Jainism, p. 52, 53.

4. Inscribed image of Candraprabha standing with other Tīrthaṅkaras, Deogarh Fort, Dist. Jhansi, No. 2224, list of Photo-negatives A.I.S. In the same fort may be seen a seated image of the Jina. In Madanpur, Jhansi Dist., 5 Jina Figures have been found out of which one represents the Jina Candraprabha. An erect Fig. of Candraprabha from Gwalior is in the Indian Museum, Cat., 12, No. 3702.

5. चन्द्रस्यैव प्रभा ज्योत्स्ना सौम्यतेत्या विशेषोऽस्य चन्द्रप्रभः ।

"Before his birth, his mother (the wife of the Rajput King of Candrapurī)¹ longed to drink the moon (Candra). To assuage her craving, a plate of water was one night handed to her in such a way that the moon was reflected in it; when the child was born, he was found to be as bright and white as the moon, which accordingly became his emblem, and he was called Candraprabha."² With such lunar association in life, one needs hardly any explanation to understand why the moon or the crescent became his essential symbol, we may also note in this connection that one of the dreams of the Jina's mothers is about the moon.

Suvidhinātha

Suvidhinātha has two names given to him, another being Puṣpadanta. There is a dispute over his emblem. Some say, it is a dolphin (Makara); others declare it is a crab. His Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī are named Ajita and Sūtārī Devī (Dig. Mahākālī) respectively. The chowri-bearer has the name of Maghavatarāja. The religious tree under which he attained the Kevala knowledge is the Nāga according to some authorities,³ Malli according to other authorities.

From patriarchal history, we gather his native place was called Kākandīnagara. His father was the ruling prince by the name of Sugrīva and his mother was named Rāmā,⁴ his place of Nirvāṇa was Sameta-Sikhara or Mount Pārasnātha.

A separate sculpture of Suvidhinātha is not yet known to the author. The Jina, of course, appears with the other 23 Tirthaṅkaras in a group. The sculpture, there is little doubt to say, must when discovered exhibit all the important iconographic details described above. The point of interest will be that some sculptures will bear the symbol of a crab.

1. In the Benares district, also called Candrāvati.

2. Heart of Jainism, p. 53. Cf. तथा गर्भस्ये देव्याः चन्द्रपानदोहदोऽभूदिति चन्द्रप्रभः ।

3. दिनद्वयोपवासः सन्तधस्तान्नागभूरुहः । Uttara p. 85.

4. द्वीपेऽस्मिन् भारते क्षेत्रे काकन्दीनगराधिपः ।

सुग्रीवोऽस्य महादेवी जयरामेति रम्यता ॥ Ibid.

The two names have two origins as might be expected. The name "Suvidhinātha" was given to him because after an internecine warfare fought by his kingly relatives, they gave up fighting and took to performing religious duties. His birth eventually brought 'good order' (Suvidhi)¹ to the distracted family. The other name, namely, Puṣpadanta was derived from the fact that the Jina's teeth resembled the buds of a flower (puṣpa). The origin of his symbols seems prima facie rather enigmatic. Neither a crocodile nor a crab has been dreamt of by the Jina's mother. His father was the lord of Kākandī. Curiously, Kākandī is called Kākandīnagara, Skt. Kīṣkindhānagara. Let us remember, his father is called Sugrīva, his mother has the name of Rāmā. All this has curious association with the Rāmāyaṇa. The Kīṣkindhā of the Rāmāyaṇa was situated on the sea. Hence, it is evident that aquatic animals like a crocodile or a crab have come to be the emblems of this Tīrthaṅkara. His Yakṣa Ajita for the same reason has tortoise as vehicle and his Yakṣiṇī Sūtārā Devī has an urn symbolising her intimate connexion with waters.

Śītalānātha

The Tīrthaṅkara in question was, as usual, born of a Kṣatriya family of Malaya Kingdom. His birth-place is named Bhadrīkapura or Bhadrīllapura (Madrapura according to one version). His parent's names were king Dr̥ḍharatha and Queen Sunandā respectively.² His chowri-bearer was called Rājā Sīmandhara. The tree under which he attained the Kevala knowledge is Vilva (Aegle Marmelos). The Jaina texts assign to him the Yakṣa named Brahmā and Yakṣiṇī named Aśokā (Dig. Mānavī). The Digambaras regard the Aśvattha (Ficus religiosa) as his emblem, the Śvetāmbaras Śrīvatsa (wishing tree) for the same.

A separate specimen of Śītalānātha's image has not been discovered so far. When discovered, it is doubtless expected to

1. क्षोभनो विधिर्विधानमस्य सुविधिः । Hemacandra
2. द्वीपेऽस्मिन् भारते वर्षे विषये मलयद्वीपे ।
राजा भद्रपुरे वंशे पुरोर्द्वारयोऽभवत् ॥

yield a material illustration of iconographic canons discussed above.¹

The Jina received the name of Śīṭalanātha inasmuch as he could take away men's heat of sorrow.² Another version explains the name as follows—"The tenth Tīrthamkara had marvellous power of imparting coolness (Śīṭalatā) to fevered patients. Before his birth his mother laid her hand on her husband and immediately the fever which had defied all the efforts of physicians left him, and all his life being the saint had a similar power, hence his name Śīṭalanātha, Lord of coolness."³ His emblems have not much to interpret. The Peepal tree is known for its cool shade, similarly the Śrīvatsa symbol stands for auspiciousness and blessedness.

Śreyāṃśanātha

The Jaina texts concur in giving him the symbol of a rhinoceros. The Yakṣa and the Yakṣiṇī to serve him as guards of honour, have been named as Yakṣeta and Mānavī (Dig. Īvara and Gaurī) respectively. The tree special to him was Tumbara (तुम्बर)⁴ or Tindaka according to some authorities. Rājā Tripiṣṭa Vāsudeva was to act as a Chowri-bearer.

The sculptures hitherto found of Śreyāṃśanātha closely accord with the above iconographic prescriptions. At Sarnath, in Benares, the traditional place of the Jina, there is a Jaina temple dedicated to this patriarch. An old image of the same Jina may be seen in the "Brāhmanical sculpture shed" attached to the Museum.⁵

The Jaina Purāṇas record his lineage. His father was a

1. Anderson : Catalogue of the Indian Museum, Part II, Gupta gallery TA 1. The figure has been identified as that of Śīṭalanātha. It seems to be a doubtful identification. First, no Jina figure is represented in the Bhūmiśvara Mudrā as in this case. Secondly, no specific sign of Svastika is to be seen on the pedestal of the sculpture.

2. सकलसत्त्वसन्तापहरणात् शीतलः ।

Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi.

3. Heart of Jainism, p. 53. Cf. तथा गर्भस्थे भगवति पितुः पूर्वोत्पन्ना-
चिकित्स्यपित्तदाहो जननीकरस्पर्शादुपशान्त इति शीतलः ।

4. मुनिर्मनोहरोद्याने तुम्बरद्रुमसंश्रयः । Uttara, p. 103.

5. See Fig. C. 62.

Kṣatriya prince of Ikṣvāku clan named Viṣṇu and his mother was called Viṣṇudri. His home was at Sindhapurī, the present Sārnāth.¹

The origin of his name has, as usual, a historical tale to explain it. "King Viṣṇudeva possessed a beautiful throne, but unfortunately an evil spirit took up his abode in it, so that no one dare sit there. His wife, however, so longed to sit on it that she determined to do so at any risk; to every one's astonishment she was quite uninjured; so, when her son was born, he was named Śreyāṁśanātha, the Lord of good, for already he had enabled his mother to cast out an evil spirit and so do a world of good (Śreyāṁśa)."² All his turbulence and forwardness on the part of both the mother and the child have been fittingly symbolised by the sign of a rhinoceros, so known for those qualities.

Vāsupūjya

The emblem constantly associated with Vāsupūjya, as we gather from Jaina books, is the buffalo. The other characteristics of his image viz. the Śāsanadeva and the Śāsanadevi, are known by the names of Kumāra and Caṇḍā (Dig. Gāndhārī). The tree which gave him shade while acquiring the Kevala knowledge is Pāṭalika 'according to the Abhidhānacintāmaṇi and Kadamba (कदम्ब) according to the Uttarapurāṇa.³ A King named Darpiṣṭa-Vāsudeva is to wave the Chōrī or the fly-fan by his side.

So far as my knowledge goes, one separate figure of Vāsupūjya has only been found in Northern India. It tallies with the above description.⁴

From Jaina sources, we gather that his father named Vāsupūjya was a Kṣatriya prince of Ikṣvāku race. His mother is

1. द्वीपेऽस्मिन् भारते सिंहपुराधीशो नरेस्वरः ।

इक्ष्वाकुवंशविख्यातो विष्णुनामाऽस्य बलभा ॥

Uttara, ibid.

2. Heart of Jainism p. 54. For Sanskrit version Hemacandra :—

यथा गर्भस्थेऽस्मिन् केनाप्यनाक्रान्तपूर्वा देवताऽधिष्ठितशय्या जनन्याऽऽक्रान्तेति श्रेयो जातमिति श्रेयांसः ।

3. कदम्बवृक्षमूलस्थः सोपवासोऽपराङ्मुखः ।

Uttara, p. 113.

4. One good figure of the Jina is in Nāthanagara, Jaina Temple, Bhaagpur.

called Jayāvati. Campāpurī (Modern Bhāgalpur) was his birth-place.

His name has been derived in various ways. As he was the son of Vasupūjya, he was fitly called Vāsupūjya. It is said that while in the mother's womb, God Indra used to give his father wealth (vasu). Hence his name Vāsupūjya. Thirdly, the gods Vasus worshipped him, which led to his name as such.¹

The only explanation that can be rendered to his symbol is that cattle formed the chief wealth in Ancient India. Hence, a buffalo as the emblem.

Vimalanātha

Jaina liturgical treatises attribute to Vimalanātha, the thirteenth Jina, the Lāñchana or symbol of the boar. The particular attendant spirits attached to him are named as Ṣaṇmukha and Vairoṇi (Śvetām—Viditā). The King to stand for his fanner is called Svayambhu-Vāsudeva. His Kevala tree is Jambu (Black-berry).²

As for his parentage, his father's name is Kṛtavarman and mother's name is Suramyā. His birth occurred in Kāmpilya (Kāmpil in Furrukhabad), the Southern capital of the Pāñcāla.

An interesting story is told to explain the origin of his name. We reproduce it here. "He got his name Vimalanātha (Lord of Clearness) through the clearness (Vimalatā) of intellect with which he endowed his mother before his birth, and which she displayed in the following manner. A certain man and his wife unwisely stayed in a temple inhabited by a female demon, who, falling in love with the husband, assumed his real wife's form. The miserable man was quite unable to tell which was his true wife, and asked the King of Kāmpilapura to distinguish between them. It was the queen, however, who solved the difficulty. She knew the long reach that witches and only witches have and telling the husband to stand a long distance off,

1. वसुपूज्यनूपतेरयं वासुपूज्यः । यद्वा—गर्भस्थेऽस्मिन् वसु हिरण्यं तेन वासवो राजकुलं पूजितवानिति । वसवो देवविशेषाः तेषां पूज्यो वा वसुपूज्यः; प्रज्ञायणि वासुपूज्यः ।
Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi.

2. निजदीक्षावने जम्बूद्वयमूले द्युपोषितः । Uttarapurāṇa, P. 126.

challenged the two wives to prove their chastity by touching him. Both tried their utmost, but, of course, the human wife could not reach so far, whereas the demon wife did and thus showed her real character."¹

The sharpness (of intellect) of the Tirthamkara has been emblemized by the boar noted specially for its sharpness. We may compare, in this connexion, the boar symbol of the Buddhist Māricī, the goddess of shooting rays of the dawn.

Anantanātha.

The symbolic mark which distinguishes Anantanātha from all other Tirthamkaras is the hawk according to Śvetāmbaras and the bear according to the Digambaras. The Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī, the goblins, serving him are named Pātāla and Anantamatī (Śvet. Amkuṣā) respectively. The Chowri-waver, in his case, was king Puruṣottama-Vāsudeva by name. The tree associated with his enlightenment is Aśvattha (Ficus Religiosa).²

The Jaina Purāṇas give his father's name as Sīrṇhasena and mother's name as Jayaśyāmā.³ He was the Kṣatriya sovereign of Ayodhyā, where the Tirthamkara was born.

He obtained his name of Ananta as his mother had seen an endless necklace of pearls. Jaina tradition asserts that an endless (Ananta) thread which lay about powerless in Ayodhyā became endowed with power to heal diseases as soon as the Tirthamkara took his birth.

The idea of power and combating spirit have given rise to his symbols either of a falcon or a bear. His Yakṣa and the Yakṣiṇī carry, it may be interesting to notice, warlike weapons symbolising the same idea.

Dharmanātha.

The symbol by which an image of Dharmanātha is to be

1. Heart of Jainism, p. 55. Cf. Hemacandra : विगतो मलोऽस्य विमलज्ञानाऽऽदियोगाद्वा विमलः । यद्वा—गर्भस्थे मातुर्मतिस्तनुश्च विमला जातेति विमलः ।

2. अश्वत्थपादपोषान्ते कैवल्यमुदपीपदत् । Uttarapurāṇa, p. 157.

3. इक्ष्वाकुः काश्यपः सिंहसेनो नाम महानृपः ।

जयश्यामा महादेवी तस्यास्या वेश्मनः पुरः ॥ Ibid.

recognised is Vajra-daṇḍa or thunder-bolt. The Yakṣa couple to attend upon him are respectively called Kinnara and Kandarvā (Dig. Mānasī). The position of a fanner has been taken up by Puṇḍarika-Vāsudeva. The Kevala tree for him is called Dadhi-parṇa or Sapta-cchada.¹

The statues of Dharmanātha so far known to us correspond with the above description. The Nagpur Museum preserved two such images. They show the symbol of the thunderbolt and the Chowri-bearer in a royal attire.²

With regard to his family we are told that his father's name was Bhānu Rāja and his mother's name Suvratā. He was born at Ratnapura.³

He obtained the name of Dharmanātha because he saved mankind from miseries. There is tradition also that the Jina's mother performed many acts of religion while bearing him in the womb. Hence the name of the child as Dharmanātha.

It appears that the symbol of the Tīrthamkara, as the name suggests, has evident connection with Yama's staff. God Yama has another name of Dharmanātha or Dharma-rāja. Hence, the similarity of symbolism.

Śāntinātha

The cognizance which separates the image of Śāntinātha from those of other Tīrthamkaras is a deer. The Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī attendants escorting him are respectively named as Kimpuruṣa and Mahāmānasī (Śvetām-Garuḍa and Nirvāṇī). Rājā Puruṣadatta stands for his Chowri-bearer. The tree under which he attained the Kevala knowledge is Nandi Vṛkṣa.

The images of Śāntinātha so far discovered are not a few in number. They all correspond with the descriptive details, as given above. In sculpture, we notice as his emblem, a pair

1. वने सप्तच्छदस्याधः कृतपण्डोपवासकः ।

Uttara P., p. 166.

2. Vide B. 14. B. 15. "They (Chowri-bearers) wear an elaborate diadem and many ornaments. They seem to be of royal rank." Descriptive list of exhibits in the Arch. Section of the Nagpur Museum, pp. 27-28.

3. द्वीपेऽस्मिन् भारते रत्नपुराधीशो महीपतिः ।

देव्या भानुमहाराजसंज्ञस्य विपुलश्रियः ॥

Uttara P., ibid.

of antilopes between a wheel. The attendant spirits occupy the recesses of the lowest panel.¹

Regarding the Jina's parentage, we gather from Jaina books that King Viśvasena was his father and Acirā was his mother. He was born at Hastināpura.

In Jaina history of pontiffs, Śāntinātha occupies a very high place. Not only did he revive Jainism, which was in danger of falling into oblivion, but he so consolidated the faith that it never disappeared again. Another extraordinary fact about him is that he was the first Tīrthaṅkara to become a Cakravarti or emperor of the whole of India. The occasion,² which gave origin to his name, is that before Śāntinātha's birth, his mother was able to stay the course of the pestilence which was raging in the kingdom by sprinkling the sufferers with Śānti water. Hence, the name "Śāntinātha" or 'Lord of Peace'.

The symbol of a wheel flanked by two antilopes is exactly equivalent to the Buddhist symbol of the "Turning of the wheel of Law" at Sārṇāth. As we are informed that Śāntinātha revived the decadent Jainism, in other words, he preached anew the Jaina religion,³ it is evident, therefore, he invented or adopted the common symbol of a wheel and two deer. It may not be unlikely that men, in later times, in analogy to the Buddhist symbol of preaching, assigned to his image the "Dharma-Cakra" emblem.

1. Vide a statue of Śāntinātha in the Fyzabad Museum, Arch : 1907-08 No. 52; another seated image of the Tīrthaṅkara in the Jogin Kā Maṭha near Rohtak town, Arch. List No 2430. In Khajurāho, Chattarapur State, there is an image of Śāntinātha, 14 feet high; in Sirankala, near Lalitpur, Jhansi, there is a temple dedicated to the same Jina; Cf. B. 16. Catalogue of the Nagpur Museum, Mm 1 (Gupta Gallery) Anderson : Catalogue of the Ind. Mus., pp. 201, 215.

2. Heart of Jainism, p. 55. Cf. तथा गर्भस्थे पूर्वोत्पन्नाशिवशान्तिरभूदिति शान्तिः ।

3. For the alternate rise and decline of Jainism refer to the following passage: "After the Nirvāṇa of the ninth Tīrthaṅkara Suvidhinātha, the Jaina faith disappeared until the birth of the tenth Tīrthaṅkara, who revived it; on his Nirvāṇa it disappeared again, but was revived on the birth of the eleventh; and this continued to be the case until the birth of Śāntinātha the Sixteenth Tīrthaṅkara after which it never disappeared again". Heart of Jainism, p. 55.

Kunthanātha.

Jaina tradition as preserved in their literature, has always connected the symbol of a goat with this Tīrthamkara. He has as his Yakṣa Gandharva and Yakṣiṇī Balā (Dig. Vijayā). The contemporary King, who carries his Chowri-fan is called Kuṇāla. The tree selected by him to sit under for attaining the Kevala knowledge is Tilaka taru.¹

Hitherto, no image of Kunthanātha, to the best of my knowledge, has come to light. Doubtless, however, any image when found out will shew unmistakably the iconographic marks as detailed above.

His parent's names, as may be gathered from the Jaina Purāṇas, are variously called Śūrasena, Sūrya, Śivarāja (Svetāmbara version) for the father, Śrikāntā or Śrī-devī for the mother.² His father belonged to the Kuru race, and Hastināpura as his capital, where the Jina was born. He, like his predecessor, became an emperor.

Two explanations of the origin of his name are given in the Abhidhāna Cintāmaṇi. First the Jina stood firmly on earth hence Kunthanātha. Secondly, before his birth, his mother saw a heap (Kuntha) of jewels.³

Agni, the god of fire, is believed in India to be the presiding deity of wealth also. His symbol of goat has been borrowed in this case to symbolise the idea of riches, which, too, is responsible for the origin of the Jina's name.

Aranātha

The eighteenth Jina Aranātha carries with him the mystic symbol of either the Nandīvavarta (a kind of Svastika) or a fish. His ministerial staff consists of the Yakṣa named Yakṣendra and

1. तिलकद्रुममूलस्यैवैत्रज्योत्स्नापराङ्मुके । Uttara P., 2. 281.

2. हस्तिनाख्यपुराधीशः कौरवः काश्यपान्वयः ।
शूरसेनो महाराजः श्रीकान्तास्याप्रवत्तभा ॥ Ibid.

3. कुः पृथ्वी तस्यां स्थितवानिति कुन्धुः । तथा गर्भस्थे भगवति जननी
रत्नानां कुन्धुराशिं दृष्टवतीति कुन्धुः Hemacandra.

Mrs. Stevenson mentions two more explanations, viz., "...during his life people began to show great kindness to insects (Kunthu) and the power of his enemies was stunted (Kuntha)".

Yakṣiṇī named Dhārāṇī Devī. The sacred tree peculiar to him is Cāta or mango tree.¹ Govinda Rāja had the honour of holding his flywhisk.

One or two images of Aranātha that have been found out so far in Northern India meet the conditions of iconographic marks mentioned in the preceding paragraph. These were discovered in Mathurā and belong to the ancient Kushān age.²

Aranātha's father was a Kṣatriya prince of the lunar race. He was known by the name of Sudarśana. The Jina's mother was queen Mitrasenā. Their capital was at Hastināpura, when Aranātha was born.³ This Jina also became an emperor.

He obtained the name of Ara because his mother saw a dream of a wheel (Ara) of jewels.⁴

It is obvious to explain his emblem of a Nandīāvartta. This, as also fishes, come under the Aṣṭamaṅgala or eight auspicious symbols.⁵

Mallinātha

The Jaina books point out to us the emblem of a water-jar distinguishing Mallinātha sharply from his predecessors as well as his successors. His special attendant goblins or technically Śāsana devatās are known as Kubera and Dharanapriyā (Dig. Aparājītā). Rājā Suluma stands by his side as a Chowri-bearer. The Kevala tree in his case goes by the name of Aśoka.⁶

1. रेवत्यां शुक्लपक्षेऽपराह्णे चतुर्दश्याः । Uttara P., P. 286.
2. Vide Ch. II. Plate VI "Base of image of the Nandīāvartta or Ara, dated in the year 79"; Cf. Plates XCII, XCIV figures showing Nandīāvartta symbol on the chest. The Jaina Stupa and other antiquities of Mathura by V.A. Smith.
3. हस्तिनाख्यं पुरं तस्य पतिर्गोत्रेण काश्यपः । सोमवंशसमुद्भूतसुदर्शन-
समाह्वयः । मित्रसेना महादेवी प्राणेश्वरस्य बल्लभा ॥ Uttara P.
4. तथा गर्भस्थे भगवति जनन्या स्वप्ने सर्वरत्नमयोऽरो दृष्ट इत्यरः ॥
Hemacandra.
5. Aupapātika Sūtra. The symbols are : (1) Svastika, (2) Śrīvatsa, (3) Nandīāvartta, (4) powder-box, (5) throne of Fortune etc., Notes on Jaina Art by Dr. Coomarswamy, J.I.A.I.
6. अश्वत्थो रक्षोः कस्य... Uttara, P. p. 305

Separate sculptures of Mallinātha are not altogether rare. The examples known to us materially verify the description given above. They particularly shew the emblem on the pedestal and the Śāsana devatās in the two extreme corners.¹

His father was the king of Mithilā in Vaṅga (Bengal) and belonged to the Ikṣvāku race. His name was Kumbha and his queen was called Prajāvatī.² According to the Śvetāmbara sect, Mallinātha was a woman. But the sculpture and the name ending in Nātha (Mascu.) are not in favour of this tradition as they do not shew the Tīrthaṃkara with any feminine signs.

The Jina acquired the name of Malli as his mother longed for fragrant Malli (a kind of Jasmine) flowers while bearing him in the womb.³ The emblem of a water-jar either symbolises the ninth dream of the Jina mother or one of the Aṣṭa-maṅgalas or eight auspicious things.

Munisuvrata

The Jaina texts furnish the emblem of a tortoise which differentiates the image of this Jina from those of all the rest. The Yakṣa husband and wife are called Varuṇa and Naradattā (Dig. Bahurūpiṇī) respectively. The king who plays the part of his Chowri-bearer is named Ajita. The tree made sacred by being associated with the scene of his Kevala knowledge is Campaka.

1. Nagpur Museum Fig. B. 18. The Jina is flanked by two attendants of royal birth. They seem to hold Chowri each in one hand; vide Catalogue, p. 29. Fig. B. 19. "The proper right and left extremities of the pedestal are carved with the śāsana-devatās : Kuvera and Dharanapriyā respectively." Vide Catalogue, p. 30.

2. अत्रैव भारते वङ्गविषये मिथिलाधिपः ।
इक्ष्वाकुर्भूपतिः कुम्भनामा काश्यपगोत्रजः ।
प्रजावती महादेवी तस्य लक्ष्मीरिवापरा ॥

Uttara P., p. 305.

It is worth nothing here, that Mithilā (modern Darbhāṅgā) is said to be a part of Bengal (Baṅga Viṣaya).

3. Also पुरीषहादिमल्लजयान्निस्तान्मल्लिः । तथा गर्भस्थे भगवति मातुः
सुरभिः सुममाल्पशयनीयदोहदो देवतया पूरित इति मल्लिः ।

Hemacandra.

The few sculptures hitherto discovered of this Jina shew, in unmistakable terms, the symbols etc., as we have described above. Of him, one separately sculptured image is only known to us.¹

Regarding the Jina's parentage, we are informed that his father named Sumitra was the king of Magadha. His mother had the name of Soma (Padmāvatī according to some books). His dynasty is called the Harivamśa. The capital was at Rājagṛha².

His name originated from the fact that he kept noble vows (Suvrata, good vows) devoutly and he was a Muni or a Saint.³ The tortoise as his emblem symbolises the idea of slowness and steadiness, the two requisite qualities for keeping vows.

Naminātha

The emblem which is associated with this Jina is a blue lotus or the Aśoka tree, according to the sectarian view of the Digambaras. Bhṛkuṭi and Gandhārī (Dig. Cāmuṇḍī) are his respective Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī.

The King who holds the Chowri-fan by him is called Vijaya Rāja. The tree under the shade of which he sat and attained the Kevala knowledge is Bakula.⁴

No image with the particular symbol of a lotus, so far as I know, has yet come to light. One image of a Tīrthaṅkara with the sign of a lotus between two conches was seen by me among the group of Jaina statues on the Vaibhār Hill. It may presumably be the figure of Naminātha. Conches have been added to distinguish the symbolism of Padmaprabha, who likewise has a lotus emblem.

1. Dr. Fuhrer obtained a black pillar with the representation of Muni Suvrata not far from the gate of the Agra Fort overlooking the Jumna river.

2. अथैव भरते राजां पुरे राजगृहाह्वये ।
सुमित्रो मगधाधीशो हरिवंशसिलामणिः ॥
शोत्रेण काश्यपस्तस्य देवी सोमाह्वया सुरैः ॥

Uttara P., p. 318.

3. शोभनानि व्रतान्यस्य सुव्रतः, मुनिश्चासौ सुव्रतश्च मुनिसुव्रतः ॥

Hemacandra.

4. निजदीक्षावने रम्ये मूलवकुलभूषहः ।

Uttara P. 1. 437.

The Jaina Uttarapurāṇa tells us that his father was a Kṣatriya king of Mithilā in the land of Bengal. According to disputed opinion, the place was not Mithilā but Mathurā. The name of the Queen was Vappilā or Vaprā.¹

We hear of explanation given in the Jaina books for the origin of his name. While the Jina was in the mother's womb, the enemies of his father bowed down (Praṇāma) in submission. Hence, the name Naminātha.²

Neminātha

His emblem is known to be a conch-shell from the Jaina canonical texts. The Śāsana devatās who attend upon him are Yakṣa Gomedha and Yakṣiṇī Ambikā (Dig. and Kuṣmāṇḍinī). The Chowri-bearer, in his case, is King Ugrasena. His Kevala-tree is called Mahāvegṇu or Vetasa.³

Fortunately for Neminātha, it is not hard to find examples of his sculptural representations. Those that are discovered agree with what is prescribed by iconographical canons.⁴

The Jina's parentage and family have a well-known historical background according to the Jainas. His father was named Samudravijaya. He was the king of Sauripurī or Dvārakā. His race is known as Harivamśa. Neminātha's mother's name was Śivadevī.⁵ The most interesting point in this connexion is

1. जम्बूपलक्षिते द्वीपे विषये यज्ञनामनि ।

मिथिलायां महीपालः श्रीमान् गोत्रेण काश्यपः ।

वणिजा तन्महादेवी वसुधारादिपूजिता ॥ Ibid.

2. यदा गर्भस्थे भगवति परचक्रनूपैरपि प्रणतिः कृतेति नमिः ।

Hemacandra's Abhidhānacintāmaṇi.

3. षष्ठोपवासयुक्तश्च महावेणोरथः स्थितः ।

Uttara P., p., 499.

4. Two images of Neminātha are kept in the Mathura Museum Vide Fig. B. 22, ".....Under these two attendants are two crouching figures male and female, with a staff in each hand. They probably represent Yakṣas". Under the inscription in a conch—Vogel's Catalogue of the Arch. Museum at Mathura, p. 72, vide also fig. B. 77. Cf B. 120, Nagpur Museum, Cata. p. 30.

5. राज्ञः काश्यपगोत्रस्य हरिवंशशिखामणेः ।

समुद्रविजयाक्यस्य शिवदेवी मनोरमा ॥

Uttara P., 1. Ibid.

that Neminātha was a cousin of Śrī Kriṣṇa and Baladeva.

His name has been derived in two ways. First, his circumference (figuratively) was like that of the Dharma Cakra.¹ Secondly, before his birth his mother saw a wheel of black jewels. Hence, his other name of Ariṣṭanemi.

His emblem of a conch may be accounted for as being symbolic of his residence in a sea-side place where conch shells are abundantly met with or as reminiscent of his kinship with the Vaiṣṇavite family of Śrīkṛṣṇa.

Pārśvanātha.

He is one of the greatest Tīrthamkaras or Prophets of Jainism. Some, with a scrupulously historical eye, regard him as the true founder of the Jaina faith.² His historicity is unquestioned, his date is almost precisely known and his influence on the Jaina religion is of leading importance. From all sources, we gather his emblem or cognizance is a snake. In sculpture, snake seems to be everything with him. Not only do we find snake in the usual place of the symbol, we find, snakes canopy him with three or seven or eleven hoods.

His Yakṣa is called Pārśva or Vāmana or Dharapendra and Yakṣiṇī is called Padmāvatī. The king, who stands by his side as a Chowri-bearer is known as Ajitarāja. The Devadāru (Deodar) or Dhātaki is his Kevala-tree.

No dearth of images for Pārśvanātha ! His statues can equal in number those of Mahāvīra abundantly found in ancient places of Northern India. In sculpture, several coils of the snake, which flank him are to be noticed. Pārśva's Yakṣa carries a snake. The Yakṣiṇī, also has the cobra as her vehicle.³ Much is known from Jaina Purāṇas and Caritas of Pārśvanātha's personal

1. धर्मचक्रस्य नेमिवन्नेमिः । नेमीतीक्ष्णन्तोऽपि दृश्यते ।

Abhidhānecintāmaṇi.

2. According to Rhys Davids, Pārśvanātha was probably the founder of the Sect. Ency. Britt. 9th ed., Vol. xii. p. 543.
3. Vide Pl. standing image of Pārśva, in the Jogion kā Maṭha near Rohtak town, No. 2431; Mathura Museum B. 62, Catalogue p. 77 Nagpur Museum, Figs B. 21. B. 22 D. 23. B. 24; Rajpur Museum, B. 5. (Nagpur Museum Catalogue, Appendix p. 3); 2 Figs of Pārśva discovered on the Vaibhāra Hill, Rājgir, they shew 7 hoods of the snake; Cr. 1. Cabinet 5, Gupta gallery, Indian Museum Ibid., J. Ms. 1, J. Ms. 2 and family history. He was probably born about 817 and died about 717 B.C. His father Aśvasena was the King of Benares. His mother's name was Vāmā or Brahmā¹. Pārśva was a brave warrior and once he carried his victorious arms down to Kaliṅga. He married the daughter of King Prasenajit, King of Kośala, but like Prince Siddhārtha, he left his princess to follow the life of an ascetic at 30 years of age. He preached his doctrines of love and universal fraternity for about 70 years and finally attained liberation or Mokṣa on Mt. Summet Śikhara now called after him Giri Pārśvanātha Hill, in South Bihār.

A little history mixed with mythology is accredited to Pārśvanātha. The story how he saved a serpent from being burnt by an ascetic named Kaṭha may be studied critically and iconographically. One day Pārśva sees Kaṭha surrounded by a great concourse of people, performing the severe five-fire penance. And he sees that Kaṭha has thrown a great serpent into a fire-pan. He asks the reason for this pitiless practice, inconsistent with Kaṭha's own austerities. Kaṭha replies that kings might understand elephants and horses, but the sages alone understood religion. Pārśva has the fire put out; the agonized serpent comes out and Pārśva makes his people show honour to him. Absorbing the essence of their worship, the serpent is reborn as Dharāṇa, the wealthy king of the Nāgas in Pātāla, Kaṭha, as the result of his false practice, is reborn as an Asura by name of Meghamālin. One day, "Pārśva happening to see on the wall of his palace a picture of the Arhat Nemi, who had taken the vow early in life, decides to do the same. . . . He wanders from place to place, instructing and acclaimed as a Saint. While standing in the forest of Kauśāmbī in the Kāyotsarga posture, the serpent king Dharāṇa comes in great state to do him honour, performs a mimic representation and during three days holds an umbrella over his head to protect him from the sun. The Asura Meghamālin (the soul of Kamāṭha) attacks Lord Pārśva with tigers, elephants etc. Dharāṇa, then excoriates Meghamālin's hatred of the Lord, pointing out he had done him no injury but on the contrary, had saved him from the sin

1. वाराणस्यामभूद्विश्वसेनः काश्यपगोत्रजः ।

ब्रह्मास्य देवी सम्प्राप्तवसुधारादिपूजना ॥

Uttara P.

of burning up Dharāṇa on the occasion of his uncanny practice".¹

The name of Pārśva has been explained in Jaina literature differently. "He touches (Spṛśati) all ideas by knowledge"—is one version. The name was given him because his mother before his birth while lying on her couch, saw a black serpent crawling about. This is the version of the Pārśvanātha Carita also. Thirdly, he is the lord (Nātha) of his Yakṣa named Pārśva.²

Very little now remains to explain emblem of a serpent. Throughout his life and tradition, serpent plays a prominent part. We shall have a further occasion of dealing with the symbolism of the Yakṣas and Yakṣiṇīs separately. It here suffices to add that the Gaṇadhara-Sārdha-Śataka speaks of Pārśva wearing nine serpent's hoods; (Pārśvanātha Naraphana Dharāṇa).³ Thus, the canon of the numbers of hoods cited above is not always regular.

Mahāvīra.

Mahāvīra, the twenty-fourth or the last Jina is the greatest of all the Tīrthamkaras. His position is of unchallenged eminence in the Jaina religion, history and iconography. Being the Lion among the Jaina prophets, rightly given was his emblem of a lion. His Yakṣa spirits are respectively known as Mātaraṅga and Siddhāyikā. The Magadhan King Śreṇika or better known as Bimbisāra acts as his Chowri-bearer. His Kevala tree is called Sāla (L. Shorea Robusta).

1. M. Bloomfield : The Life and stories of the Jaina Saviour. Pārśvanātha (Baltimore, 1914), based upon Pārśvanātha Carita, p. 10. The same incident we find represented in some images of Pārśva. Vide J. Ms. : (Gupta Gallery) Indian Museum. "The rest of the slab is profusely covered over with human figures, demons, monsters, and animals, doubtless a representation of the attack of Pārśvanātha by his enemy Kamathā, treated after the fashion of the attack of Māra on Buddha Gotama" Anderson : Catalogue Part II.
2. स्पृशति ज्ञानेन सर्वं भवानिति पार्श्वः । तथा गर्भस्थे जनन्त्या निशि सपौं दृष्ट इति गर्भानुभावोऽयमिति मत्वा पश्यतीति निश्चितात्पार्श्वः । पार्श्वोऽस्य वैयावृत्यकरः यक्षः तस्य नाथः पार्श्वनाथः ।

Abhidhānacintāmaṇi.

3. Bloomfield, Ibid. p. 20. See Weber-Verzeichnisse Vol. II. p. 982. Rohiṇeya-carita, however, asserts clearly that Dharapendra here called 'Nāga King of Patāla,' covers him with seven hoods.

The statues of all sizes, which number great, have been found in all Jaina places of Northern and Southern India. The complete images show in detail an accord to the description furnished above. Standing and seated figures have been met with, which range in size from a miniature to a colossus. In most cases, the image is represented as seated rather than standing in which posture other Tīrthamkaras usually appear in sculptures.¹

Regarding his life history, the Jaina books such as the Kalpa-Sūtra, Uttara-purāṇa, Triṣaṣṭi-Śalākā Puruṣa Carita, Vardhamānacārītra yield abundant materials. We just deal with those important events of his life, which relate directly to his images and worship. The five Kalyāṇakas really mark out the salient periods of a Jina's life. These in Vardhamāna's life are associated with interesting episodes.

Vardhamāna was born of a royal family of Videha or North Bihār, his father Siddhārtha, being the ruling prince of Kuṇḍapura, the abode of the Nāta or Nāya clan. His mother is known by the name of Trīśalā.² Connected with his birth is the auspicious legend that the Tīrthamkara was actually born of Devanandā of the family of Jālandhara, wife of Rṣabha Datta, a Brāhmaṇa, but Indra finding that a Jina ought not to according to tradition, take his birth in a Brāhmin family, transferred the foetus through his general Harinegameṣa to the womb of Trīśalā, a Kṣatriya lady of royal family.³ The child Vardhamāna

1. Vide Fig. B. 25., Nagpur Museum, Fig. B 4. Rajpur Museum; Two very ancient images in the Arch. Collection, on the Vaibhār Hill, Rajgir; See T a 2 Fig. (Gupta Gallery), Indian Museum. Anderson : Catalogue, Part II., p. 207, the Gwalior Fort sculptures include many prominent figures of Mahāvīra. In the Deogarh Fort, I noticed a well-preserved image of Vardhamāna on a plinth near the Western gate. The fig. is attended by his Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇī. The earliest images of the Tīrthamkara are those which were discovered from the Kaikkālī-Tīlā. Vide P. XVII., XCI. V.A. Smith's "The Jaina stupa and other antiquities of Mathura."

2. भास्तेऽस्मिन् विदेहाख्ये विषये भवनाङ्गने ।

राज्ञः कुण्डपुरेशस्य वसुधारावतत् पृथुः ।

सप्तकोटीः मनीः सार्द्धाः सिद्धार्थस्य दिनं प्रति ॥

Uttarapurāṇa.

3. Cf. तस्याश्च देवनन्दाया गर्भयोर्व्यत्ययो मया । had shewn early signs of being destined to be a Prophet. Thirty years he lived as a house-holder, but after his parent's death, he determined to take the ascetic life and obtained the permission of his brother, who had, then, become king. He renounced everything, all his gold and jewels, distributing them in charity and dividing them among his relatives. He then proceeded in his palanquin to the Park called Sundavana (Śveta) or Sārathi Khaṇḍa (Digm. in Kuṇḍanagara (of Vaiśālī) and there under the Asoka tree, he stripped himself of all his raiments and jewels and entered upon an ascetic life of severest penances and austerities.

विमृश्यैवं शतमुखः समाहूय उगित्यपि ॥

The adorable ascetic hero for one year and a month wore clothing, afterwards he went robeless and had no vessel but his hand. Mahāvīra for twelve years and full six months, entirely neglected his body, and laid aside all care of his person, he conducted himself with perfect patience and equanimity and felt nothing dispirited by the wretchedness of his condition. He had no attachment or tie binding him to the world. These ties are of four kinds: articles of possession, place, time and affections.¹ "Bound neither to this world nor to the world to come desiring neither life nor death, wholly superior to worldly attachments, he set himself to slay the enemy works (Karma).

The third stage of Mahāvīra's life is represented by his attainment of Kevalajñāna or Perfect knowledge. After twelve years of constant practice of asceticism and meditation, when he was 42 years old he went to a place differently known as Tṛmbhikagrāma or Jṛmbhikagrāma, not far from the Pārśvanātha hills. There under the shade of a Sāla tree by the side of the river called R̥tuvālīka or R̥juvālīka, 'sitting in a crouching posture, as one does in milking a cow' (Samparyanākāsana), he was in deepest meditation and attained the absolute or the perfect knowledge. From that time, he became an Arhat or Jina.

Then began his career as a preacher of his doctrine which

आदिदेश तथा कर्तुं सेनान्यं नैगमेयिणम् ।

विदधे नैगमेयी च तथैव स्वामिशासनम् ॥

Triṣaṣṭi-lalākā-puruṣa-carita, Parvan, 10, 2nd Sarga, 24-25.

1. Rev. J. Stevenson's version of the Kalpa Sūtra (1848).

went on for 30 years until his Nirvāṇa or death. The fundamental point in his doctrine is that birth is nothing, caste nothing, and authority of scripture is nothing but Karma every thing and one gets full release from the revolution of births and deaths on the destruction of Karma through utmost austerities. Like Buddha, he preached first to the rich and aristocratic, and though his followers are to be found more amongst the middle classes, his earliest supporters seem to have been rulers and petty kings. . . . The Digambara and Śvetāmbara legends give the names of the different rulers Mahāvīra visited, and tell how Cetaka, king of Videha became a patron of the order, and Kupika, king of Aṅga, gave him the most cordial welcome, and how, when he travelled as far as Kauśāmbī, he was received with the greatest honour by its King Śatānīka, who listened with deep interest to his preaching and eventually entered his order. The Digambaras claim that in 30 years he converted to Jainism, Magadha, Bihār, Prayāga, Kauśāmbī, Campāpurī and many other powerful states in North India.¹ The places visited by the Jina number great in the Jaina chronicles. The first rainy season of his religious ministry was spent at a town named Asthigrāma. "Proceeding then to Campā and Pṛṣṭacampā, he there spent 3, at Vāṇijyagrāma near Vaiśālī he spent 12, and in the village of Nālandā, near Rājagṛha 14, six at Mithilā, two at Bhadrakā, one at Śrāvastī, one at Paṇitabhūmī, and the last of the rainy season, he spent at Pāpā, the place of his Nirvāṇa. His first disciple was Gotama Indrabhūti, who attained Supreme knowledge and became the chief of his perfectly initiated disciples. At the last-named place, sitting on his lotus seat, he preached the fifty-five discourses that explain the results of Karma and while repeating all alone the sixty-sixth called the chief lesson, he passed away at the age of 72 in about 527 B.C."²

We are to deal now with the origin of his name and symbolism. The two principal names by which he was known were Vardhamāna and Mahāvīra. The first name is explained as

1. The Heart of Jainism, p. 40.

2. This short life of Mahāvīra is sketched mainly from the Kalpa Sūtra of the Śvetāmbaras. The Digambaras, however, differ in the points of his birth, marriage and dress in the Saint's life. Cf. Uttarapurāṇa and the Digambara Harivamśa Purāṇa, Chapters II, III.

'since the prince was placed in the womb of the Kṣatriyāṇī Triṣālā this family's (treasure) of gold, silver, riches, corn, jewels, pearls, shells, precious stones and corals increased, therefore, the prince shall be called Vardhamāna (i.e. Increasing).¹ He was called Vīra or Mahāvīra inasmuch as he specially sent away the deeds (Karmans)².

His symbol of the lion is the most befitting mark of his spiritual heroism. His forbearance, his austerities, his strenuous work in the path of destroying work are all unmistakable proofs of his lion-like personality. Indeed, he figures amongst the whole range of Jaina Tīrthamkaras as the Coeur de lion. For the same reason, we find his Yakṣiṇī Siddhāyikā has the symbol, as her vehicle, of a lion. His Yakṣa Mātāṅga riding an elephant personifies the royal power, which was associated with Vardhamāna in his worldly as well as in his spiritual life.

1. Ācārāṅga Sūtra, S.B.E. XXII, p. 191.

2. विशेषेण ईरयति प्रेरयति कर्माणिोति वीरः ।

Abhidhāna-Cintāmaṇi.

He had also five names Vīra, Ativīra, Mahāvīra, Sanmati, Vardhana—

CHAPTER II

THE YAKṢAS AND THE ŚĀSANA-DEVATĀS

In what period of time and how the Yakṣas and their spouses Yakṣiṇīs otherwise known as Śāsana-devatās first appeared in the Jaina pantheon, we have no means of ascertaining. This much can be said with reliable certainty that these demi-gods do not represent purely Jaina elements but the form in which we find them is an outcome of mixture of ideas. The names of some of the Yakṣas and Śāsana-devatās betray unmistakable identity with those of Hindu deities while the symbols connected with them are also of those of the latter class. These are:—

प्रचेतसः सुता यक्षास्तेषां नामानि मे शृणु ।
केवलो हरिकेशश्च कपिलः काञ्चनस्तथा ।
मेघमाली च यक्षाणां गण एष उदाहृतः ॥

Agni-Purāṇa.

The Yakṣas as a class had existed in popular belief and in literary tradition of the Hindus much earlier than the rise of both Buddhism and Jainism. Kuvera or Vaiśravaṇa, the king of the Yakṣas, who was the treasurer of Śiva and lord of the Alakā is several times referred to in early Hindu literature. His attendants were many and several of them are mentioned in a canonical text of the Jains thus, Pūrṇabhadra, Maṇibhadra Śālibhadra, Sumanabhadra Lakṣarakṣa, Pūrṇarakṣa, Śravaṇa, Sarvayaśas, Sarva-kāma, Saṃṛddha, Amogha, Asmata.¹ Of these Maṇibhadra, whose another name is Yakṣendra or Yakṣapati² attained much antiquarian importance on account of a discovery of his image in the frontier. Such discussion was evoked and it was generally accepted by scholars that Maṇibhadra was a Yakṣa. It may be remarked here in brief that this image must be Jaina in origin on the ground that Maṇibhadra's name as Yakṣendra is counted in the list of the Jaina Yakṣas and the inscription in the pedestal reads like the Mathurā Jaina-

1. Bhagavati-Sūtra III. 7, also discussed by Rai Bahadur R. Chanda in his "four ancient Yakṣa statues", p. 6, Journal of the Dept. of Letters, Cal. University. 1921.
2. See M. BH.

inscriptions. The Yakṣas are, in Indian tradition, regarded as the presiding spirits over wealth and therefore it is easy to see why Jainas who represent a mercantile class specially endeared themselves to this cult and appropriated them especially among the class of their Dhunḍhi-devas or highest divinities.

In the foregoing chapter, we have had occasion, in connection with the individual Tīrthaṅkaras, of making mention of the Yakṣas by names but a description of their general character was not outlined. 'A Yakṣa is a devotee of the Tīrthaṅkaras',¹ so defines a Jaina liturgical text. According to the Jaina belief, Indra appoints one Yakṣa and Yakṣi to serve, as attendants of each Tīrthaṅkara. The Yakṣa would be on his right side and Yakṣiṇī on his left. Thus, they also came to be called Sāsana-Devatā or attendant spirits. According to Hemacandra, a Yakṣa originates from the particular religious spirit of a Jina.² Hence, we can take, in all strong probability, that the Yakṣa was the leader of the disciples and Yakṣiṇī was the first female convert. Truth of this statement can also be supported by the fact that just like the disciples of the Buddha in his image, the Yakṣa and the Yakṣiṇī occupy the corner of the pedestal on which the Tīrthaṅkara figure is seated. In later development, the Yakṣa cult obtained greater veneration among the Jainas, hence we find detached independent images of the Yakṣas among the ancient ruins. In this connection, we should bear in mind that the Yakṣas are traditionally known as demi-gods of riches, Kuvera, their leader, being the supreme deity of treasures. The question may arise why the Yakṣas play such a prominent role in the Jaina Pantheon and why they became associates of the Tīrthaṅkaras. It may again be conjectured and probably

1. यक्षा भक्तिदक्षास्तीर्थकृतमिमे ।

Pravacanasāroddhāra.

Cl. या पाति शासनं जैनं सद्यः प्रत्यूहनाशिनी ।

साभिप्रेतसमृद्धयर्थं भूयात् शासनदेवता ॥

Pratiṣṭhā-kalpa, p. 13.

2. A Yakṣa is always spoken of as "तत्तीर्थजन्मा", "तत्तीर्थभूः" तत्तत् तीर्थे तत्रैवोत्पन्नः ।" तीर्थे "तत्र समुत्पन्ने" etc., repeatedly in Hemacandra's Triṣaṁśitalākṣīpurāṇa-carita. 'A yakṣa is again clearly described as the defender of the Jina's religion. (ओं नमो गोमुख-यक्षाय श्रीयुगाङ्गे जिनशासनरक्षाकारकाय—Ācāra-dinakara) MSS., Rāmghāṭa Collection, Benares).

with strong grounds that as the Yakṣas and Yakṣiṇīs were leader disciples of the Jinas, they had been chosen from the rich mercantile class and some of them had represented as bankers. In actual images, we find them decorated in rich jewels and characterised with the symbol of money-bag etc. Apart, however, from this historical background, some quasi-mythological incidents exist in the Jaina literature to explain the origin of some of the Yakṣas, as for instance, Dharaṇendra and Padmāvatī in the case of Pārśvanātha. We, now, proceed to discuss the iconographic points of each and every Yakṣa or Śāsana Deva.

Gomukha

As first in order of the Yakṣas, Gomukha is attached to Rṣabhanātha. The texts of both the branches of Jainism concur generally in respect of his attributes. His hands hold the Varada Mudrā and a rosary and left hands hold a Pāśa (Digambara Paraśu or Axe). His riding animal differs from an ox according to some texts, to an elephant according to others. His colour is golden.¹ The Digambara books assign in addition a Dharma

1. चतुर्भुजः सुवर्णाभो गोमुखे वृषवाहनः । हस्तेन परशुं धत्ते बीजपूराक्षसूत्रकम् ।
वरदानपरः सम्यक् धर्मचक्रञ्च मस्तके ।

Vasunandī's Pratiṣṭhā-sāroddhāra (MSS. Jaina Siddhāntabhāṣana, Arrah).

- Cf. सम्यक् रोध्वंकरदीपपरस्वधोक्षसूत्रं तथाधरकराक्षफलेष्टदानम् ।
प्राग्गोमुखे वृषमुखं वृषगं वृषाक्षं भवतं यजे कनकं वृषचक्रदीपम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhā-sāroddhāra by Āśādharma, p. 66

Also Cf. स्वर्णाभो वृषवाहनो . . . चतुर्बाहुभिः . . .

Ācāra-dīnakara.

Again

वराक्षमालाशालिभ्यां दोम्भ्यां दक्षिणपार्श्वयोः ।

मातुलिङ्गपाशभृद्भ्यां वामदोम्भ्यां च शोभितः ॥

हेमवर्णी गजरथः etc., Triṣaṣṭi-salākā-puruṣa-carita.

Further, प्रथमजिनस्य गोमुखो यक्षः स्वर्णवर्णो गजवाहनः . . .

Pravacana-Sāroddhāra (MSS. Chāni Jaina Bhandāra, Barodā).

ऋषभे गोमुखो यक्षो हेमवर्णो गजाननः ।

वराक्षसूत्रपाशञ्च बीजपूरं करेण च ॥

Sūtradhāra Maṇḍana's Vāstu-lāstra (MSS. No., 1351, Jaina Collection jñāna Mandir, Baroda. Cf. the details in the Mandira-pratiṣṭhā-vidhāna MSS. Jaina Siddhāntabhāṣana, Arrah).

Cakra symbol to his head. Images of Gomukha are found in two types, one detached and larger in size and another miniature in form as attendant to Ādinātha in his representation. The latter type is more abundant as images of Ādinātha can be met with in numerous Jaina places of India. In both the types, the figures do not, as a rule, strictly follow the canons of iconography as laid down by the scriptures. The figure of Gomukha, for instance, from Gaṇḍāval in Gwalior state shows a staff, axe etc. in his hands. This ascription of the attributes is due to the artist's partial obedience to divergent texts.

Now, how to explain the symbolism and name of this particular Yakṣa? His bull face, bull as animal, Dharma Cakra mark on his hand all speak of his intimate association with Rṣabhanātha or Vṛṣabhanātha, whose bull and Dharma Cakra (wheel of the law or faith) are the prominent effigies. Further, we find, in one text, that he has been identified with Dharma or God of Gods (Mahādeva), he being the originator of the Jaina religion. Thus, he is also identified with a bull, the symbol of religion.¹

Mahāyakṣa

The Digambara, as well as the Śvetāmbara texts coincidentally describe him as riding an elephant and having four faces and eight hands armed with weapons. Only with regard to these weapons the texts vary. The Śvetāmbara books enumerate them as (for right hands) Varada, club, rosary, noose, (for left hands) citrus, Abhaya, goad and Śakti.² The Digambara texts read for these a disc, trident, lotus, goad (for left arms), a sword, staff, axe and Vara-Mudrā (for right arms). Another point of difference between the texts of the two sects is that the Śvetāmbaras

1. श्रीं चत्वारः शृङ्गास्त्रयोऽस्य पादा द्वे शीर्षे सप्त हस्तासोऽस्य ।
त्रिषा बद्धो वृषभो रोरवीति महादेवो मर्त्यं आ विवेश । स्वाहा ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāra-saṃgraha, p. 13. MSS. J.S. Bhavan, Arrah.

2. ततश्च तीर्थे तत्रैवोत्पन्नो यक्षश्चतुर्मुखः ।
स्यामवर्णो गजस्थो महायक्षाभिधानतः ॥

Cf. the description of the Yakṣa in Pravacana-sāroddhāra and also in the Ācāra-dīpikā.

will have green colour, while the Digambaras will have golden colour for the Yakṣa.¹

We do not know images of Mahāyakṣa except in the case of attendant miniature figures as can be seen in the sculpture of Ajitanātha.² Correspondence between the descriptions given above and the figures may be maintained.

The Yakṣa's symbol of an elephant should be interpreted as directly concerned with his master's symbol of the same animal. His eight arms naturally correspond with his four faces.

Trimukha

Trimukha is Sambhavanātha's attendant disciple. Texts of both the Śvetāmbaras and Digambaras are concordant in describing this Yakṣa as possessed of three faces, six arms and riding on a peacock. With respect to articles held in the hands, the books vary in some respects. The Śvetāmbara texts give him a mongoose, club, Abhaya-Mudrā (for his right hands) and a citrus garland and rosary (for his left hands).³ The Digambara text, on the contrary, gives the following attributes for his six arms—a disc, sword, Śṇi (goad) staff, trident and dagger.⁴

1. चक्रत्रिशूलकमलाङ्कुशवामहस्तो निस्त्रिंशदण्डपरशुप्रवरान्यपाणिः ।

वामीकरद्युतिप्रभाङ्कनतो महादिर्यक्षोऽजितो गजरयश्चतुराननोऽसौ ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra, p. 66.

Cf. अजितस्य महायक्षो हेमवर्णश्चतुर्मुखः ।

गजेन्द्रवाहनाख्यः स्वोचिताष्टभुजायुधः ॥

Vasunandi's Pratiṣṭhāsāra-saṅgraha MSS, Jaina Collection, Arrah.

2. The figure of Mahā-Yakṣa occurs in the Sculpture of Ajitanātha, Deogarh Fort, Jhansi. Cf. Arch. Serial No. 2225.

3. त्रिनेत्रस्त्रिमुखः श्यामः षड्बाहुर्बहिर्बाहूनाम् । दक्षिणैर्नकुलधरः गदाभृदभयप्रदः ।
युक्तो वामैर्भुजैर्मातुलिङ्गदामाक्षसूत्रिणिः ॥

Hemacandra's Sambhavarāṭa.

Cf. श्यामवर्णो मयूरवाहनः षड्भुजो नकुलगदाभययुक्तदक्षिणकरकमलः
मातुलिङ्गदामाक्षसूत्रयुक्तवामपाणिः

Pravacanāsāroddhāra MSS, Jaina Bhandar Chhani Baroda,

4. चक्रासिभृद्युपगसव्यसयोन्यहस्तैर्दण्डत्रिशूलमुपयन् शितकर्तिकां च ।

वाजिध्वजप्रभुनतः शिलिगोऽजनाभस्त्र्यक्षः प्रतीक्षतु वसि त्रिमुखाख्ययक्षः ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

Cf. the same details in Mandira Pratiṣṭhāvidhāna MSS, Jaina bhavana, Arrah.

Separate representations of Trimukha have not been discovered anywhere in India. A corner figure in miniature of the Yakṣa may be seen in the sculpture of the third Jina Sambhavanātha. In general details, the figures accord with the canonical descriptions.

His symbol of peacock has close connection with his Yakṣiṇī, Prajñapti, who is one of the presiding deities over learning or as they are the Vidyādevīs, and who also has peacock as her vehicle. The Yakṣa's name of Trimukha can be explained as his having three faces.

Yakṣeśvara

He belongs, as an attendant spirit, to Abhinandana. He is characterised by the symbol of an elephant, the ascription thereof is common to divergent books. The attributes held by the spirit are not regular. Sectarian canons vary in this respect. According to the Śvetāmbara view, the Yakṣa holds in his right hands—a citrus, a rosary, and in his left hand, a mongoose and a goad.¹ According to the other view, he has a bow, shield (Kheṭaka) and a sword.²

We have not met with any instance of an image of Yakṣeśvara as a separate piece. The sculpture of Abhinandana, however, includes a figurine of this Yakṣa and when compared reveals much correspondence in respect of symbolism with the canonical description.³

This Yakṣa has been described as the King of Yakṣas (Yakṣeśvara) and very powerful. The elephant symbol, in his

1. तीर्थयक्षेश्वरस्तत्र श्यामो द्विरदवाहनः ।
दोर्दण्डौ दक्षिणौ बिभ्रन्मातुलिङ्गाक्षसूत्रिणौ ॥
वामौ च धारयन् बाहू नकुलं कुशधारिणौ ॥

Hemacandra's Abhinandana-carita III. 2.

- Cf. श्यामसुन्दरवाहनो युगमुजौ हस्तद्वये दक्षिणे ' ' मुक्ताक्षावलिमुत्तमां परिणतं
' ' मातुलिङ्गं बहन् वामेऽप्यङ्कुशमुत्तमं च नकुलं कल्याणमालाकरः ॥

Ācārādīnakara (MSS. Rāmāghāṣa Jaina Collection)

2. प्रेङ्खदनुःखेटकवामपाणि सकम्पत्राणास्यपसव्यहस्तम् ।
श्यामकरिस्थं कपिकेतुभक्तं यक्षेश्वरं यक्षमिहार्चयामि ॥

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra, p. 68.

3. Cf. Fig. B. 10. Nagpur Museum Collection.

case, betrays thus kingly magnificence. His goad is an instrument for driving the elephant. The symbol of a mongoose (Nakula) is curiously identical with the same symbol held by Jambhala, the Buddhist Kuvera of wealth.

Tumbara

He is attached to Sumatinātha Jina as an attendant Yakṣa. That his vehicle is Garuḍa is attested by the scriptures of both the sects of Jainism. His attributes according to the Śvetāmbara iconography are : Varada, Śakti (spear) club and noose¹ whereas the Digambara variants are these: two snakes, fruit and Varada.² The Digambara scripture gives him in addition a snake in the shape of a holy thread.

Except in the sculpture of Sumatinātha, no separate image of Yakṣas has up to the present been discovered.

Tumbara, in Hindu Literature is said to be the divine musician, a Gandharva. In Jaina pantheon, this aspect is completely changed for some reason or other; he changed his musical instrument for deadly weapons. Both he and his Yakṣiṇī known as Puruṣadattā (among the Digambara) ride upon birds, his being Garuḍa, and the Yakṣiṇī's red goose (Cakravāka). The Jina Sumatinātha, to whom they are attached, has also a red goose for his emblem.

Kusuma or Puṣpa Yakṣa

His characteristic symbol, according to the Śvetāmbaras and Digambaras, is an antelope. Texts of both the sects, how-

1. तत्तीर्थे तुम्बरुमि श्वेताङ्गस्ताक्ष्यवाहनः ।
दक्षिणौ वरदशक्तिधरो बाहू समुद्रहन् ।
वामौ बाहू गदाधरो पाशयुक्तौ च धारयन् ॥

Hemacandra's Sumatināthacarita.

2. सपौषवीतं विषपन्नगोर्ध्वकरं स्फुरद्दानफलान्यहस्तम् ।
कोकाङ्कनम्रं गच्छादिरुद्धं श्रीतुम्बरं श्यामहर्षि यजामि ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsādhoddhāra, p. 67.

- Gf. संपदयं फलं धत्ते वरदः परिकीर्तितः ।
सपयसोपवीतोऽसौ सगविपतिवाहनः ॥

Vasunandi's Pratiṣṭhāsādharaṅgraha, Arrah Jaina Collection.

ever, diverge with regard to the objects held by him. The Śvetāmbara Yakṣa will have four hands holding a fruit and Abhaya (in the right hands) and a rosary and a mongoose, (in his left hands).¹ The Yakṣa as known to the Digambaras has a lance, Varada-Mudrā, shield and Abhaya-Mudrā in his four hands.²

The Yakṣa's name as Kusuma or Puṣpa (flower) has direct connection with the emblem of red lotus flower of his master. His antelope symbol standing for the idea of quickness seems to be associated with his Yakṣiṇī, whose name is 'Manovegā' or 'quick as mind' (in a literal sense).

Mātaṅga or Varanandī

His characteristic emblem is not common to both the sects. The Śvetāmbara view will prescribe an elephant for his vehicle while the Digambara will make him ride a lion. The attributes which the Yakṣa holds vary with the books of the two sects. The Śvetāmbara version gives them as: a Vilva fruit, noose, mongoose and goad.³ The other version enumerates the same as:—staff, spear, Svastika and flag.⁴ One text, however, of the Digambaras speaks of the Yakṣa as two-armed and as having a crooked face.⁵

1. श्रीपद्मप्रभस्य कुसुमो यक्षो नीलवर्णः कुरङ्गवाहनश्चतुर्भुजः फलाभययुक्त-दक्षिणपाणिद्वयो नकुलाक्षसूत्रयुक्तवामपाणिश्च ।

Pravacana-sāroddhāra (MSS. Chhāni Jaina Bhandara, Barodā).

Cf. स्फूर्जत्फलाभयमुदक्षिणपाणियुग्मो नकुलाक्षसूत्रयुक्तवामकरद्वयश्च संघं
जिनाचनरतं कुसुमः पुनातु ।

Ācārādinakara (MSS. Ramaghāja Collection, Benares).

2. मृगाधिरूढं वरकुन्तवामकरं सखेटाभयसव्यहस्तम् ।

स्यामाङ्गमञ्जज्जदेवसव्यं पुष्पाख्ययक्षं परितर्पयामि ॥

(Mandira Pratigṛhāvidhāna MSS. Jain Siddhānta bhavana, Arrah).

3. सुपाश्वर्यस्य मातङ्गो यक्षो नीलवर्णो गजवाहनश्चतुर्भुजो विल्वपाशयुक्तदक्षिण-पाणिद्वयनकुलाकुशयुक्तवामपाणिः ॥

Pravacanasāroddhāra (MSS. Chhāni Collection).

4. सिंहाधिरोहस्य सदण्डशूलसव्याव्यपाणेः कुटिलाननस्य ।

कृष्णत्विवधः स्वरितककेतुभक्तेर्मातङ्गयक्षस्य करोमि पूजाम् ।

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra.

5. सुपाश्वर्याथदेवस्य यक्षो मातङ्गसंज्ञकः ।

द्विभुजो वक्रतुण्डोऽसौ कृष्णवर्णः प्रकीर्तितः ॥

Pratigṛhāsārasaṃgraha (MSS. Jaina Siddhānta bhavana, Arrah).

A survey of the North Indian Museums and Jaina sites makes it possible for me to say that nowhere a separate image of this particular Yakṣa has been found. In the sculptures of Supārśvanātha, however, we find him represented in his usual position.

As his name (Mātaṅga—'elephant') suggests, his symbol ought to be appropriately an elephant. And his goad shows that he drives the animal. In his Digambara aspect, his Svastika symbol may be explained as directly concerned with the same emblem belonging to his master Supārśvanātha.

Vijaya or Śyāma Yakṣa

He has, in the Digambara version, three eyes, and holds in his hands a fruit, rosary, axe and the *Varamudrā*¹; with some alterations the Śvetāmbaras represent him with three eyes, a swan as his vehicle, two hands holding a disc and a club.² He is known to them by the name of Vijaya.

The sculptures of Candraprabha include, as a whole, a figure of this Yakṣa. The symbolism as noticed above is followed by such figures.³

Ajita

His symbol of a tortoise as a vehicle is admitted by both the sects. The attributes vary, however, with them. The Śvetāmbara image will hold in his hands, a citrus, rosary, mongoose and a spear.⁴ The image as conceived by the Digambaras will bear

1. चन्द्रप्रभजिनेन्द्रस्य श्यामो यक्षस्त्रिलोचनः ।

फलाक्षसूत्रकं धत्ते परशुं च वरप्रदः ।

Ibid., (MSS, Jaina Siddhānta bhavana, Arrah).

2. तत्तीर्थभर्हरिदक्षविजयो हंसवाहनः ।

दधानो दक्षिणे चक्रं भुजे वामे तु मुद्गरम् ॥

Hemacandra's Triṣaṣṭiśalākṣaṇusāra).

3. A clear figure of the Yakṣa in the sculpture of Candraprabha, discovered in the Gwalior State Arch. No. 84.

4. तत्तीर्थजन्मा स्वजितः श्वेताङ्गः कूर्मवाहनः ।

विभ्राणो दक्षिणी वाहू मातुलिङ्गाक्षसूत्रिणी ॥

वामौ तु नकुलकुन्तधारिणी धारयन् भुजौ ॥

Smṛddhisūtracārī by Hemacandra.

vice above a Śakti, Varada-mudrā, fruit and rosary.¹

The tortoise symbol is the same with the symbol of his Yakṣiṇī (according to the Digambara version). The Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī holds an urn having some connection with water. All this group of emblems agree in nature with the aquatic symbol of a crocodile or a crab as associated with their master Suvidhinātha.

Brahma Yakṣa

He is invariably given four faces, three eyes, eight hands, and a lotus seat. The difference lies in respect of the attributes held by the eight hands. The Śvetāmbara Brahma Yakṣa bears the following objects in his hands:—a citrus, club, noose, Abhaya, mongoose, mace, goad and rosary.² The Digambara variants are : a bow, staff, shield, a sword, Vara-Mudrā etc. The conception of this Yakṣa has much in common, together with the name with that of the Brāhmanic deity Brahmā. The same four faces (Caturmukha) an epithet of Brahmā, the lotus seat etc. are attributed to this demi-god. His Yakṣiṇī Aśokā (of the Śvetāmbaras) has the lotus-seat while the same Yakṣiṇī as represented by the Digambaras has black hogs for her chariot and with the emblem of dawn may be said to be the Aurorā of the Jains.

Īśvara Yakṣa

This Yakṣa of Śreyāṃśanātha has from both accounts, a bull vehicle, three eyes and four hands. The Digambara canon places on his hands the attributes of a trident (Trīśūla), staff, rosary and a fruit.³ The Śvetāmbara icon of the same Yakṣa

1. अजितपुण्यदण्डस्य यक्षः श्वेतचतुर्भुजः ।
फलाक्षसूत्रशक्तपादधो वरदः कूर्मबाहनः ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha.

2. तृतीयभूर्ब्रह्मनामा यक्षस्त्र्यक्षश्चतुर्भुजः ।
पद्मासनः श्वेतवर्णश्चतुर्भिर्दक्षिणैर्भुजैः ।
मातुलिङ्गी मुद्गरभृत्सपाशाभयदायिनिः ।
वामैस्तु नकुलगदाङ्कुशाक्षसूत्रधारिभिः ॥

Hemacandra's Śūlanāthacarita.

3. त्रिनेत्रो वृषबाहनः फलाक्षसूत्रसंयुक्तः सत्रिशूलश्चतुर्भुजः ।

Pratiṣṭhā-sūtra-saṅgraha (MSS., Arrah Library).

holds a mongoose, rosary, staff and a fruit.¹

A separate image of this Yakṣa was unexpectedly explored by the author, who gave it to the Indian Museum, Calcutta. The image with slight modifications agrees with the scriptural description. The important symbol of a bull is prominent enough in the figure.

From the aforesaid description and from the name itself the Yakṣa, represents a borrowed form of the Brāhmanic Śiva or Īśvara. His Yakṣiṇī also bears the name of Gaurī (according to the Digambaras). And as Mānavī (Śvetāmbara version), she rides an elephant like the consort of Śiva. All this shows that the older gods became subordinate to the Tirthaṅkaras whom they also served as attendants with their wives.

Kumāra

Both the texts of the Śvetāmbaras and the Digambaras coincide in attributing to him a vehicle of swan and white complexion.² The Digambara view makes him three-headed and six-handed while the Śvetāmbara school only four-armed. The attributes held by him according to the former are a bow, ichneumon, fruit, club, vara.³ The attributes as represented by the latter view are a citrus, arrow, mongoose and bow.⁴

It is rather curious that this Yakṣa, who bears the analog-

Cf. त्रिशूलदण्डान्वितवामहस्तः करेऽशसूत्रं त्वपरे फले च ।

Pratiṣṭhā-sāroddhāra, p. 68.

1. वृषयानो मातुलिङ्गगदादक्षिणदोर्द्वयः ।

नकुलाशसूत्रयुक्तदक्षिणेतरेबाहुकः ॥

Hemacandra's Śreyāśānāṭhacarita.

2. त्रिमूर्तः षट्भुजः श्वेतः सूरूपो हंसवाहनः ।

Pratiṣṭhā-sāra-saṅgraha (Jaina Bhavana, Arrah).

3. शुभ्रो घनुर्बभ्रु फलाढ्यसव्यहस्तोज्ज्वहस्तेषु गदेष्टदानः ।

तुलायत्तक्षमप्रणतस्त्रिवक्त्रः प्रमोदतां हंसचरः कुमारः ॥

Pratiṣṭhā-sāroddhāra.

4. तत्तीर्थभूः कुमारस्यो यक्षो हंसरथः सितः ।

मातुलिङ्गशरधरो धारयन् दक्षिणी करो ॥

वामो च नकुलधनधारिणी धारयन् भुजौ ।

शसुपूज्यजितेन्द्रस्याभवत् शासनदेवता ॥

Hemacandra's Vāsāp ājya-carita.

ous name to Kumāra or Kārttikeya should have a swan instead of a peacock for his vehicle while the next Yakṣa, who is called Caturmukha (an epithet of Brahmā) has a peacock as his riding animal. In all probability there must have been some unknown anomaly in the symbolism of these two Yakṣas.

Caturmukha or Ṣaṣmukha Yakṣa

He is known by the name of Caturmukha, to the Digambaras and Ṣaṣmukha to the Śvetāmbaras. Both sects, however, concurrently assign to him the vehicle of a peacock. Caturmukha has twelve arms according to one version and eight arms according to another. The arms hold such objects as—an axe, scimitar (Kaukṣeyaka), Akṣamaṇi (?) shield, staff etc.¹ The Yakṣa Ṣaṣmukha has twelve hands holding a fruit, disc, arrow, sword, noose, rosary, mongoose, discus, bond, fruit, goad and Abhaya.²

From the description and names, he bears anomalously, as mentioned before, identity with Brahmā as well as with Kumāra or Kārttikeya. The Śvetāmbara Yakṣa is clearly called Ṣaṣmukha (six-headed, a designation of Kārttikeya) while in accordance with both the doctrines, he rides a peacock, the symbol of Kārttikeya.

Pātāla Yakṣa

The Digambara and the Śvetāmbara books agree insofar as the Yakṣa has three faces, six arms and the vehicle of a dolphin. The former texts state in a version of difference that he

1. विमलस्य जितेन्द्रस्य नामार्थान्यां चतुर्मुखः ।

यक्षो द्वादशदोर्दण्डः सुरूपः शिखिवाहनः ॥

Pratijñā-sāra-saṅgraha MSS. Jaina Bhavana.

- Or. यक्षो हरितसपरशूपरिमा (?) षट्पाणिः कौक्षेयकाक्षमणिलेटकदण्डमुद्राः ।

बिभ्रच्चतुर्भिरपरैः शिलिगः किराकूलन्नः प्रतृप्यतु यचार्यचतुर्मुखाख्यः ॥

Mandira-Pratijñā-Vidhāna (MSS 6/2 Arrah).

2. Pravacana-sāroddhāra, Dvāra 26.

तत्तीर्थभूः षण्मुखाख्यो यक्षः शिलिरथः सितः ।

दक्षिणैः शूलचक्रेषु लज्जपाशाक्षसूत्रिभिः ।

वामैः सनकुलचक्रकोदण्डशूलशङ्कुर्कैः ।

Hemacandra's Vimalanāthacarita.

holds a goad, spear, bow, rope, plough and fruit¹ and in addition bears a canopy of a three-hooded snake. The latter texts represent his hands as holding a lotus, sword, noose, mongoose, fruit and rosary.

For some reason or other his name "Pātāla" has been connected with Ananta both meaning serpent-kings of the nether world. His symbol of a three-headed snake may support this explanation. He seems to be the presiding spirit of the Nāga world and the plough symbol suggests of agriculture also.

Kinnara Yakṣa

The texts of both the schools is unanimous in giving this Yakṣa three faces and six arms. His vehicle differs from a tortoise with the Śvetāmbaras to a fish with the Digambaras. The former sect describes his attributes as a citrus, mace, Abhaya, mongoose, lotus and a rosary.² The Digambaras, on the contrary, describe them as a disc, Vajra, goad, club, rosary and Vaśa Mudrā.³

The symbolisms of the some of the Yakṣas are sometimes very riddling. It is certain that the conception of this Yakṣa is mainly borrowed from an older tradition. The Kinnaras are

1. अनन्तस्य जिनेन्द्रस्य यक्षः पातालनामकः ।

त्रिमुखः षड्भुजो रक्तवर्णो मकरवाहनः ॥

Pratiṣṭhā-sāra-saṃgraha (MSS., Jaina Collection Arrah).

Gf. पातालकः सशूणिशूलकचापसव्य-

हस्तः कषाहलफलाङ्कितसव्यपाणिः ।

रक्ताञ्जल्यङ्गतां त्रिफणनागशिरास्त्रिवक्त्रः ।

Pratiṣṭhā-sāroddhāra, p. 69.

2. तत्तीर्थभूः किन्नराख्यस्त्वास्यः कूर्मरथोऽरुणः ।

वक्षिणैस्तु मातुलिङ्गगदाभृदभयप्रदेः ।

वामैस्तु नकुलपद्माक्षमालामालिभिर्भुजैः ॥

Hemacandra's Dharmadūthacarita, Parva 4, Sarga 5.

3. धर्मस्य किन्नरो यक्षस्त्रिमुखो मीनवाहनः ।

Pratiṣṭhā-sāra-saṃgraha.

सचक्रवज्राङ्कुशवामपाणिः समुद्रगराक्षालिवरान्यहस्तः ।

प्रवालवर्णस्त्रिमुखो भ्रूयस्थो वज्राङ्कुभक्तोऽर्हंतु किन्नरोऽर्चाम् ॥ supposed to be human figures with horse-heads and Kubera is their leader being called Kimīlvara. Gradually, we find, these Yakṣas are associated with Nāgas, Kinnaras, Garuḍas, Gandharvas and so on. Of course, the particular appearance in which they appear along with the Jinas is, no doubt, of Jaina invention. The idea of his three faces is quite original to them. The fish symbol alone given by the Digambaras is curious enough to be noticed in the case of his Yakṣiṇī Kandarpa as represented by the Śvetāmbara.

Pratiṣṭhā-sāroddhāra.

Garuḍa Yakṣa of Śāntinātha

Garuḍa Yakṣa is represented from both points of view as riding a boar. (acc. to the Pravaçana-Sāroddhāra and elephant acc. to Hemacandra) and as endowed with four hands. The objects borne by the hands, as usual, vary canonically. In accordance with the Śvetāmbara view, the hands hold a citrus, lotus, mongoose and rosary.¹ To the other sect the hands are known to have a lotus, fruit, Vajra and discus.²

I saw a figure of Garuḍa Yakṣa on the Southern face of a pillar just entering the Deogarh Fort Gate (Western) as an attendant of Śāntinātha. He rides a boar and holds a club, rosary, citrus, and snakes. Thus, all this agrees mostly with the description cited before. It seems to be a Śvetāmbara image although in Deogarh Fort there are Digambara images in greater number as well. Both are found inseparably mixed up.

His symbol of an elephant might not have distant allusion to the mythical bird Garuḍa while holding an elephant in one hand and tortoise in another (Gaja Kacchapa).

1. तत्तीर्थजन्मा गरुडयक्षो गजरथोऽसितः ।
क्रोडास्यो बीजपूरान्जभूदक्षिणकरद्वयः ।
वामो दधानो नकुलाक्षसूत्राभ्यां सहितौ करौ ॥

Hemacandra's Śāntināthacarita, Paṇva 5. Sarga 5.

2. गरुडो नामतो यक्षः शान्तिनाथस्य कीर्तितः ।
वराहवाहनस्यामो वक्रवक्त्रचतुर्भुजः

Pratiṣṭhā-sāra-saṃgraha (Arrah).

Cf. वक्राननधोऽधस्तनहस्तपद्मफलोऽप्यहस्तापितवज्रवक्रः ।

मृगध्वजाहंतप्रणतः सपर्यां श्यामः किटिस्थो गरुडोऽम्बुपैतु ॥

Pratiṣṭhā-sāroddhāra, p. 69.

Gandharva Yakṣa

The Digambara account makes this Yakṣa to ride a bird and bear four hands. The symbols held in them are a snake, noose, bow etc.¹ The Śvetāmbara representation shows a swan as his vehicle and his four hands holding a Varada, noose, citrus and goad.²

The Gandharvas are a class of demi-gods regarded as the musicians of gods and are said to give good and agreeable voice to girls. As the Yakṣas came out from all kinds of demi-gods, it is very natural that a Gandharva also had a place among them. His vehicle of a bird or a swan might echo the idea of his inherent connection with sound and sky, which is called "Gandharvanagara" or the city of the Gandharvas.

Khendra or Yakṣendra

According to the imagery of both the sects, this Yakṣa is represented as having six mouths and twelve arms. The Śvetāmbara version gives the vehicle of a conch-shell and adorns his arms with a citrus, arrow, sword, club, noose, and Abhaya, mongoose, bow, fruit, spear, goad and rosary.³ Another book of the same school gives him a peacock as a vehicle.⁴ He, as called 'Khendra' by the Digambaras, is described as bearing in

1. कुन्धुनाथजिनेन्द्रस्य यक्षो गन्धर्वसंज्ञकः ।

पक्षियानसमारुहः श्यामवर्णश्चतुर्भुजः ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāra-Samgraha (MSS. Arrah).

Cf. सनागपाशोर्ध्वकरद्वयोऽथः करद्वयात्तेषु धनुः सुनीलः ।

गन्धर्वयक्षः स्तमकेतुभक्तः पूजामुपैतु श्रितपक्षिजानुः ॥

2. तत्तीर्थभूश्च गन्धर्वयक्षो हंसरयोऽस्तिः । दधानो दक्षिणौ बाहुदण्डौ वरद-
पाशिनौ । मातुलिङ्गाङ्कुशधरी धारयन् दक्षिणेतरी ॥

Hemacandra.

3. यक्षेन्द्रः षण्मुखस्त्यक्षः श्यामः शङ्खरथो भुजैः ।

मातुलिङ्गिबाणिखिङ्गिमुद्गरिपाशभीप्रदैः (छिदैः) ॥

दक्षिणैः षड्भिरन्यैश्च नकुलेष्वसिचर्मभिः ।

शूलाङ्कुशाक्षः सूत्राक्षैर्युक्तस्तत्तीर्थभूस्तथा ॥

Hemacandra's Araṇāthacaritra.

4. Pravacanasāroddhāra.

his twelve arms a bow, thunderbolt, noose, club, goad, Varada, arrow, fruit, garland, etc.¹

In description and name, he seems to be a Jaina counterpart of Kārttikeya 'six-faced'. The vehicle of Śaḍānana i.e. peacock is the same in both the cases. It is to be noted also that this Yakṣa is again nearly the same in all respects as the Śaṇmukha Yakṣa of Vimalanātha already described. The representation and the name (Kha—Indra) suggest the idea of a heavenly Indra, one of the Dikpālas. This Yakṣa also holds a thunderbolt.

Kubera.

His iconographic marks common to both the schools of Jainism are rainbow colour, an elephant as vehicle, his eight hands and four faces. The Śvetāmbara Kubera Yakṣa holds distinctly, however, a Varada, axe, spear, Abhaya, citrus, śakti, club, and rosary². The Digambara image has, instead, the attributes of a shield (phalaka) bow, staff, lotus, sword, axe, noose, Varada-Mudrā.³

As an illustration of the description, the figure of Kubera, in the sculpture of Mallinātha, in the Nagpur Museum, (Fig. B. 18) may be cited. As usual, in important points, the figure is the material embodiment of the iconographic rules.

1. अरस्य जिननाथस्य खेन्द्रो यक्षस्त्रिलोचनः ।

द्वादशोरुभुजः श्यामः षड्मुखः शङ्खवाहनः ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāra Saṃgraha, MSS., Jaina Bhavana Arrah.

2. तत्तीर्थजन्मा कुबेरयक्ष इन्द्रायुधश्रुतिः ।

चतुर्मुखो गजरथश्चतुर्भिर्दक्षिणैर्भुजैः ॥

वरदेन पशुशूलमृदङ्गमभयदेन च ।

शमैः शक्तिमुद्गरकबीजपूराक्षसूत्रिभिः ॥

Mallināthacarita, Parva 8, Sarga 8.

3. मल्लिनाथस्य यक्षेशः कुबेरो हस्तिवाहनः ।

सुरेन्द्रचापसंवनश्चाष्टहस्तश्चतुर्भुजः ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāṃgraha (MSS. Arrah).

Cf. सफलकधनुर्वण्डपद्मलङ्गपरशुपाशवरप्रदाष्टपाणिम् ।

गजगमनचतुर्मुखेन्द्रचापश्रुतिकलशाङ्कनतं यजे कुबेरम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

In the list of the Yakṣas, Kubera, who was the king of them, must be included. Every Indian religion has a Kubera. This Kubera of Jainism retains the common symbol of a club found in the Hindu Kubera. In other respects, his aspect is quite original and distinct.

Varuṇa

Descriptions of both the sectarian literatures agree insofar as to make him three-eyed, crowned with matted hair and riding a bull. The Digambara books represent him as eight-headed and four-armed but the Śvetāmbara books represent him as eight-headed and eight-armed. The former representation bears in the hands a shield, sword, fruit and *Varada*¹ and the latter—a citrus, mace, arrow, spear, mongoose, lotus, bow and axe.²

This is another instance of mixing up the conception of Varuṇa, the guardian deity of ocean and the Western quarter, with that of a Yakṣa, the attendant Jina Muni Subrata. His name is Varuṇa. He holds, on the other hand, citron, club, and the mongoose,—the symbols of Kubera and Jambhala of Buddhism.

Bhṛkuṭi

The Śvetāmbara and Digambara descriptions are undivided as to the present Yakṣa's having four faces, eight hands and a bull as the vehicle. The Digambara books give the following attributes to his hands,—shield, sword, bow, arrow, goad, lotus, disc, Varada.³ The texts of the other school substitute these:—

1. त्रिनेत्रो वृषभासुडः श्वेतवर्णश्चतुर्भुजः ।
अष्टाननो महाकायो जटामुकुटभूषितः ॥

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra, p. 69.

2. तत्तीर्थजन्मा वरुणयक्षस्त्वयक्षश्चतुर्भुजः ।
श्वेतो जटी वृषरथश्चतुर्भिर्दक्षिणैर्भुजैः ॥
मातुलिङ्गगदाबाणशक्तिभृद्भिस्तथापरैः ।
नकुलाक्षधनुःपशुधारिभिः परिशोभितः ॥

Hemacandra's Munisūvatanañāthacarita.

3. अष्टबाहुश्चतुर्वक्त्रो रक्ताक्षो नगवाहनः ।

Pratigṛhāsārasaṅgraha.

citrus spear, mace, Abhaya, mongoose, axe, thunderbolt, rosary.¹

This Yakṣa, as he is called, Nandiga ('going on the Bull of Śiva') has some mysterious connection with the Nandi, the chief attendant of Śiva. He once assumed the form of Bhṛkūṭi,² hence such is the name in his Jaina type.

Gomedha or Gomedha

He is the Yakṣa of Ariṣṭanemi or Neminātha. The descriptions of both the sects are equal regarding the features of his three faces, six hands and vehicle of a man. In other respects, the Śvetāmbara books prescribe for his hands a citrus, axe, disc, mongoose, trident, and Śakti (spear)³; the Digambara texts give him similarly for his hands—a hammer (Drughāṇa), axe, staff, fruit, Vajra, Varada Mudrā.⁴

We have fairly a good number of Gomedha figures for

Cf. खेटासिकोदण्डसराङ्कुशाब्जचक्रैष्टदानोल्लसिताष्टहस्ताम् ।
चतुर्मुखं नन्दिगमुत्पलाभभक्तं जपामं भृकुटिं यजामि ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha.

1. तत्तीर्थजन्मा भृकुटिर्यक्षस्त्र्यक्षश्चतुर्मुखः ।
स्वर्णवर्णो वृषरथश्चतुर्भिर्दक्षिणैर्भुजैः ॥
धृतमातुलिङ्गशक्तिमुद्गराभयदैर्युतः ।
वामैः पुनर्नकुलकर्षुवज्राक्षसूत्रिभिः ॥

Hemacandra's Nemināthacarita.

2. रचितभृकुटिबन्धं नन्दिना द्वारि रुद्धे । Haravilāsa.
3. तत्तीर्थजन्मा त्रिवदनः श्यामवर्णः पुरुषवाहनो बीजपूरपरशुचक्रसंयुक्तदक्षिण-
करत्रयो नकुलत्रिशूलशक्तिसहितवामकरत्रय एवंविधगोमेधनाम

Gunavijaya Sūri's Nemināthacarita (Nirṇaya Sagar Press)

Cf. श्रीनेमिनाथे गोमेधो नरस्वस्त्रिमुखोऽसितः । p. 16.

बीजपूरं परशुचक्रं शक्तिं शूलं नकुलं (करेषु)

(MSS No. 1351, Jaina Collection, Jñāna Mandir, Baroda).

4. अरिष्टनेमिदेवस्य यक्षो गोमेदसंज्ञकः ।
त्रिमुखः षड्भुजः श्यामः पुष्पयानो नृवाहनः ।
श्यामस्त्रिवक्त्रो द्रुघनं कुठारं दण्डं फलं वज्रवरी च विभ्रत् ।
गोमेदयक्षः सितशङ्खलक्ष्मा पूजां नृवाहोर्हत् पुष्पयानः ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (Jaina bhavana, Arrah).

comparison. They all show the nearest correspondence to the scriptural description.¹

He is typically a Yakṣa and probably a form of Kubera. Two symbols occurring in the description very strongly support this. In the first place, he is called Naravāhana (riding a man), which is another name of Kubera. He is also called Puṣpayāna (driving the chariot called Puṣpa). This is, again indicative of this Kubera type inasmuch as Kubera's chariot was called Puṣpa or Puṣpakam, which was subsequently snatched away by Rāvaṇa and after him by Rāma.

Pārśva or Dharaṇendṛa

This Yakṣa of Pārśvanātha is one of the most important amongst the members of his class. His image whether Śvetāmbara or Digambara has the common points of snake-hoods, snake-attribute and a tortoise as vehicle. The Śvetāmbara books, in points of difference, make him appear with four hands holding an ichneumen, snake, citrus, and snake (again).² The Digambara texts, in turn, give his hands snake, noose and Varada.³

A clear representation of Pārśva Yakṣa's figure may be seen in the statue of Pārśvanātha from Jogion kā Maṭha, near Rohtak town.⁴ Another good figure of the Yakṣa was seen by the

1. What Dr. Vogel has wrongly identified as the figure of Kubera is, in fact, the figure of Gomedha, Mathurā Museum fig. B. 65 (Cata). The same case with fig. No. 75 of the figure of Gomedha, Dugarh Fort, Jhansi, Arch : Photo-Negatives, Serial No. 2229.

2. तत्तीर्थभूरभूत्पास्वयकः कूर्मरथः शितिः । गजाननः फणिफणाच्छत्रशोभी चतुर्भुजः । नकुलाही वामदोर्म्या बीजपूरोरगौ पुनः ।

Hemacandra's Pārśvanāthacarita.

Cf. पार्श्वः स्यात्पास्वनायस्य कूर्मारूढो गजाननः ।

बीजपूरोरगं नागं नकुलं स्यामवर्णकः ।

Sūtradhāra Maṇḍana's Vāstulāstra (MSS Jñāna maṇḍir, Baroda).

3. ऊर्ध्वद्विहस्तधृतवामुक्तिरुद्धटाधःसव्यान्यपाणिफणिपाशवरप्रणत्ता ।
श्रीनागराजककुदधरणोऽधनीलः कूर्मश्रितो भोजतु वामुकिमोलिरज्याम् ॥

Prastigbhāṣitredhāra.

4. Vide Photo : Negatives, Arch : Dept., Serial No. 2431.

author in a cave on the Eastern side of the Gwalior Fort. Both the examples answer to the descriptions of the Yakṣa.

In connection with his origin, there exists in Jaina literature a mythological story as to how he was saved by Jina Pārśvanātha from being burnt in the sacred fire of a false ascetic Kaṭha (afterwards, Meghamālin) and how when attacked by Meghamālin, in his Kāyotsarga Āsana, Pārśvanātha was gratefully waited upon by the same serpent, born next as Dharaṇendra, or Nāgendra Yakṣa of Pātāla. This story we have reproduced in detail in connection with the treatment of Pārśvanātha and his images (vide ante). Apart from this mythology, the very name Dharaṇendra, or Dharaṇīdhara clearly signifies his identity with Śeṣanāga, the king of the serpents. In actual iconography, we find this Yakṣa has snake-symbols abundantly besides the snake-hoods. He holds also Vāsuki, the king of snakes (said to be a son of Kāśyapa). His vehicle of a tortoise might suggest his superiority over Kamaṭha (Kamaṭha=tortoise), who had been his and his master's enemy for ages.

Mātāṅga Yakṣa.

He, being the attendant of Mahāvīra, is the last but the most important one in the list of Yakṣas. Not much difference exists between the two sects in the matter of his iconographic descriptions. Both the sects describe him as two-handed and riding an elephant. The Śvetāmbara school gives a mongoose and a citrus as his attributes,¹ while, the Digambara makes them a Varada Mudrā and a citron. The same sect adds a Dharma Cakra symbol for his head.²

1. तत्तीर्थजन्मा मातङ्गो यक्षः करिरयोऽसितः ।

बीजपूरं भुजे वामे दक्षिणे नकुलं दधत् ॥

Hemacandra's Mahāvīracarita, Parva 10.

Or. महावीरस्य मातङ्गो गजारूढोऽसितो भवेत् ।

दक्षिणे नकुलं हस्ते वामे स्याद् बीजपूरकम् ॥

(MSS, 1351, Jñānamandir, Barodā).

2. वद्धमानजितेन्द्रस्य यक्षो मातङ्गसंज्ञकः ... वरदो गजवाहनः ।

मातुलिङ्गं करे धत्ते धर्मचक्रञ्च मस्तके ॥

Pratijñāśāstrasaṅgraha (MSS J. S. B. Arrah).

Separate icons of Mātāṅga Yakṣa have not been found anywhere. A full statue of Mahāvīra always shows his figure, which symbolically tallies with his description. Such a figure of Yakṣa of good preservation was seen by the author in the Deogarh Fort.¹ Gwalior Fort has also many sculptures of Mahāvīra, which contain the figure of the Yakṣa. I saw a good and clear image in a cave under the Eastern roof.

His symbol of an elephant is quite compatible with his name as Mātāṅga or 'elephant'. His other symbols, whether Śvetāmbara or Digambara such as an ichneumen and citron (Mātulūṅga or Vijapūraka) are only too evident to bear some relationship with Kubera, the chief of the Yakṣas. One text mentions a Dharma Cakra symbol on his head. This would indicate, as in the case of Gomukha, the Yakṣa of Ādinātha, that the Yakṣa attached to Mahāvīra, the renovator of Jainism, upholds the faith or in the artistic language, 'the wheel of the Law'. We must note, in this connexion that Mātāṅga also happens to be the Yakṣa of Supārśva and according to the Śvetāmbara representation, he likewise rides an elephant as dealt with before.

Cf. मुद्गप्रभोर्मूर्धनि घर्मचक्रं बिभ्रत्फलं वामकरे प्रयच्छन् ।

वरं करिष्यः करिकेतुभक्तो मातङ्गयशोऽङ्गत्तु तुष्टिमिष्टया ॥

Mandira-Pratiṣṭhāvidhāna (MSS 6/2 Jaina S.B Arrah.)

1. Deogarh Fort Jhansi, inside the Western gate i., on the plinth the sculpture of Mahāvīra in the middle.

CHAPTER III

THE YAKṢIṆĪS

The Yakṣiṇīs as much as the Yakṣas constitute a class of deified beings quite peculiar to the Jaina religion. There are reasons for believing that they are not purely fanciful creations. The Jaina books supply us the clue that they were female attendants of the Tīrthamkaras, being the leaders of the women converts. As they, however, appear in the Jaina representations, they are endowed with semi-divine attributes and symbolism of various kinds. These, in historical analysis, may reveal mixed conceptions, which explain how their well-developed iconography arose. The names and symbols of some of the Śāsana devīs, such as, Cakreśvari, Nirvāṇi Dēvī, Ambikā betray unmistakably original ideas of personalities fused with those of older Brāhmāṇic goddesses. Of the Yakṣiṇīs a good number passes into an order of Jaina female deities, called the Vidyādevīs or goddesses of learning. These goddesses share in a great measure forms of the Brāhmaṇic female deities. All these resemblances prove the fact with greater force how the Yakṣiṇī representations underlie striking conceptions borrowed from Brāhmaṇic pantheon. Additionally too, there are cases in which the Yakṣiṇīs with their consorts have more directly evolved their forms out of semi-mythological incidents in which the Jinas were the main actors. Further, it may be said that the Yakṣa character of the Yakṣiṇī's symbolism and their chief mission as Śāsana-devīs (governing goddesses)¹ have been carefully taken into account by the sculptors as they represented them in images.

Cakreśvari

The Śvetāmbaras and the Digambaras concurrently describe her as holding the symbol of disc and riding a Gaṛuḍa. The Śvetāmbara image has eight hands, which carry Varada Mudrā,

1. या पाति शासनं जैनैः सद्यःप्रत्युहनाशिनी ।
सामिप्रेतसमुद्घर्षं भूयाच्छासनदेवता ॥

arrow, disc, noose, bow, thunder, disc, goad.¹ The Digambara image, on the other hand, is represented as having either twelve or four hands. In case of twelve, the attributes are these:—eight discs, citrus, Varada Mudrā, and two Vajras. The four-handed figure holds two discs.²

A good number of images of Cakreśvarī, both as detached and as part of the Rṣabha Jina figure, has been found in Jaina places. The abundance of her image is due to her important cult-position as the Śāsanadevī of the first Tīrthāṅkara.³

By her name and symbols of disc., Garuḍa etc., she pertains to the nature of Vaiṣṇavī, the wife of Viṣṇu, whose one name is Cakreśvara. Some texts give her the symbol of citron, which brings her into connection with the Yakṣa class. Thus, as pointed out before, the Yakṣiṇīs, as a rule, combine in them influences from the Brāhmaṇic goddesses as well as those of the Yakṣa demi-divinities.

1. नामतोऽप्रतिचक्रेति हेमाभा गरुडासना ।

वरप्रदेष्टुमृच्चक्रियाशिभिर्दक्षिणैर्भुजैः ॥

वामहस्तैर्धनुर्वज्रचक्राङ्कुशधरैर्युता ॥

Hemacandra's

Ādiśvaracarita, Parva, I Sarga 3.

Cf. The Pravacana-sāroddhāra, Dvāra 26.

2. वामे चक्रेश्वरी देवी स्याप्या द्वादश पद्भुजा ।

धत्ते हस्तद्वये वज्रे चक्राणि च त्रयाण्यसु ॥

एकेन बीजपूरं तु वरदा कमलासना ।

चतुर्भुजाऽप्यवा चक्रं द्वयोर्गरुडवाहना ॥

Vasunandī's Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

सूर्याभाद्यकरद्वयात्तकुलिशा चक्राङ्कुहस्ताष्टका

सव्यासव्यशयोत्ससत्फलवरा धम्मतिरास्तेऽम्बुजे ।

ताक्ष्यवासुकिजक्रयुग्मरुचकत्यागैश्चतुर्भिः करैः

Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. Vide, Cakreśvarī Fig. 8-9/499, Lucknow Sculpture; Fig. Deogarh Fort, Annual Report, Arch. Dept., 1917-1918 Plate II; Another Fig. on the Pillar across the Western gate, Deogarh Fort; Gwalior Fort, C. E. Eastern roof: Fig. No. D 6 Mathura Museum has been wrongly identified by Dr. Vogel as Vaiṣṇavī. The hands of the Yakṣiṇī do not seem to be quite regular. The Mathura image has ten hands, the Deogarh image (first) has 16 arms, the other one has 8 arms. A twelve-handed fig. 5 in the Barabhuji Gumpā, Udayagiri, Distt. Puri.

Ajitā or Rohiṇī.

Her symbolic vehicle varies with different texts even among the same sect. For instance most of the Śvetāmbara books, in agreement with the Digambara books, give her an iron-seat (Lohāsana) but the Śvetāmbara text called the Ācāradinakara makes her vehicle a bull. The other symbols, which she holds in her hands are constantly among the Śvetāmbara books as follows—Varada Mudrā, noose, citron and goad.¹ Except the Yakṣiṇī's common vehicle, the Digambara books furnish her hands differently with the following attributes:—Varada, Abhaya, conch and disc.²

Examples of images of this Yakṣiṇī are only too limited. The one or two figures that I have been able to see show the bull symbol and co-ordinate with the description. A clear image may be seen in the Deogarh Fort.

The Yakṣiṇī's name and symbolism seem to be obviously connected with those of her Jina Ajitanātha. She has been named after him as Ajitā, meaning 'invincible.' Her spirit, as such, is also symbolised by the iron-seat (Lohāsana), known for its hardness and metallic strength.

1. दक्षिणबाहुभ्यां वरदेनाथ पाशिनी ।
बीजपूराङ्कुशभूद्भ्यां वामदोभ्यां च शोभिता ॥
लोहासनस्था पाश्वेऽस्याद् भर्तुः शासनदेवता ॥

Hemacandra's Ajitanāthacarita.

Cf. लोहासनाधिरूढां चतुर्भुजां वरदपाशाधिष्ठितदक्षिणकरां बीजपूराङ्कुशयुक्तवामकरां चेति ।

Nirvāṇakalikā (MSS. Jñānamandir, Agra). Again,
गोगामिनी धवलरुक् 'वामेतरं वरदपाशविभासमाना ।
वामं च पाणिद्युगलं सृणिमातुलिङ्गयुक्तं' ..

Ācāradinakara Vibhāṅga (MSS., Rāmghāṭa Collection).

2. देवी लोहासनारूढा रोहिण्यास्या चतुर्भुजा ।
वरदोभयहस्तासौ शङ्खचक्रोज्ज्वलायुधा ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṃgraha, (MSS, Jainabhavana, Arrah).

Cf. स्वर्णद्युतिशङ्खरयाङ्गशस्त्रा लोहासनस्थाऽभयदानहस्ता ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

Duritārī or Prajñapti.

The first name belongs to the Śvetāmbara representation, the second to the Digambara. Duritārī rides a ram and is four-handed. The hands hold Varada, rosary, fruit and Abhaya.¹ The Digambara Prajñapti places herself upon a bird. She has six hands, which are adorned with an axe, crescent, fruit, sword, (Idhi) and Vara-mudrā.²

The symbol of a ram in the case of Duritārī implies her connexion with the wife of Agni. The symbols of Vara and rosary also support this supposition. The conception of Prajñapti seems clearly to be derived from that of Sarasvatī or goddess of learning. The bird appears to be a peacock as her husband is represented as riding on the same bird (Barhivāhana). Further, the name 'Prajñapti' literally means 'one of intellect' (Prajñā) and we find, therefore, the name in the list of the Vidyādevīs to be described later.

Vajra-Śṛṅkhalā or Kālī.

Descriptions of this Yakṣiṇī of Abhinandana differ with the two sects. The Digambaras represent Vajra-Śṛṅkhalā as riding on a swan and holding in her four hands a snake, noose, rosary and fruit.³ The Śvetāmbara variant of the same Yakṣiṇī

1. दुरितारिदेवीं गौरवर्णां मेघवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदाक्षसूत्रमुक्तदक्षिणकरां फलाभयान्वितवामकरां च ।

Nirodha-Kalikā

(MSS Jñānamandir, Agra).

Cf. चतुर्भुजा गौरवर्णा मेघवाहनगामिनी ।
दक्षिणाभ्यां भुजाभ्यां तु वरदेनाक्षसूत्रिणा ॥
वामाभ्यां शोभमाना तु फलेनाभयदेन च ।

2. प्रज्ञप्तिदेवता श्वेता पद्मभुजा पक्षिवाहना ॥
अर्धेन्दुं परशुं धत्ते फलासीदिवरप्रदा ।

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS Jainendrabhavana, Arrah).

Cf. पक्षिस्वार्धेन्दुपरशुफलासीदिवरैः सिता ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. वरदा हंसमारूढा देवता वज्रशृङ्खला ।
नागपाशाक्षसूत्रोरुफलहस्ता चतुर्भुजा ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS, Arrah).

named Kālī is described as seated on a lotus and as holding in her hands Varada, noose, snake and goad.¹

*Vajra-śṛṅghalā*² or Kālī is both a Yakṣiṇī and one of the Vidyādevīs. Her Yakṣiṇī character is well symbolised by the presence of a citrus and goad and Vidyā-devī character is symbolised by a swan and rosary. Kālī also assumes some symbols as becoming Vidyādevī such as Varada and Nāga, and other symbols of noose and goad as they should belong to a Yakṣiṇī. When we treat Vajra-śṛṅghalā as a Vidyādevī, we shall see, she holds actually a Śṛṅghalā or chain, which may explain as the origin of her name.

Mahākālī or Puruṣadattā

Mahākālī of the Śvetāmbaras appears in her representation seated on a lotus with her four hands holding Varada, noose, citrus and goad.³ Puruṣadattā in her Digāmbara aspect rides an elephant and holds in her hands a disc, Vajra, fruit and Varada Mudrā.⁴

Or. सनागपाशोरुक्लाशसूत्रा हंसाधिरूढा वरदानुयुक्ता ।

Pratijñāsāroddhāra.

1. कालिकादेवीं श्यामवर्णां पद्मासनां चतुर्भुजां वरदपाशाधिष्ठितदक्षिणभुजां नागाङ्कुशालितवामकरो ।

Nirṇyākālikā (MSS., Jñānamandir, Agra).

Or. श्यामाभा पद्मसंस्था वलयवलिचतुर्बाहुविभ्राजमाना पाशं विस्फूर्ज-
मूर्ज्वस्वलमपि वरदं. . . विभ्राजा चापि वामेङ्कुशमपि करिष ।

Ācārādīnakara (Rāmāghāṭa).

2. A thousand image with the name is found in the temple of "Patāinī Devi" 8 miles from Unchhera G.I.
3. तथोत्पन्ना महाकाली स्वर्णरुक् पद्मवाहना ।
दधाना दक्षिणौ बाहू वरदामयपाशिनौ ॥

Samatindāthacarita.

मातुलिङ्गाङ्कुशधरो परौ बाहू च विभ्रती ॥

Hemacandra's Samatindāthacarita.

4. देवी पुरुषदत्ता च चतुर्हस्ता गजेन्द्रगा ।

रयाङ्गवज्रशस्त्रासौ फलहस्ता वरप्रदा ॥

Pratijñāsāroddhāra (MSS. Siddhāntabhavana, Arrah).

The attributes such as citrus, goad and noose held by Mahākālī are symbolic of her Yakṣa character. Her other aspect represented by Puruṣadattā makes her half like a Vidyādevī and half like a Yakṣiṇī. Puruṣadattā as Vidyādevī is described as riding a cuckoo and holding a Vajra and lotus. In this case, her symbols of an elephant (Gajendragā), Vajra and citrus are those by which we recognise her as a Yakṣiṇī.

Acyutā or Śyāmā, Manovegā.

The Yakṣiṇī of Padmaprabha is known to the Śvetāmbaras as Acyutā or Śyāmā and to the Digāmbaras as Manovegā. The Śvetāmbara image is canonically represented as riding a man and holding, in her four hands, Varada, Vīṇā, bow and Abhaya.¹ The Digāmbara Yakṣiṇī Manovegā has a horse as her vehicle, and holds a sword, lance, fruit, and Vaśa Mudrā.²

The name Acyutā or Śyāmā may have, most probably, originated from Acyuta or Viṣṇu or Śyāma. Her Vīṇā symbol would qualify her as a Vidyādevī, almost a derivative of Acyutā who like the Digāmbara Manovegā, rides a horse and holds a sword, arrow etc. Her vehicle of a man, undoubtedly, makes up her character as a Yakṣiṇī as Yakṣa is proverbially a man-rider or Nara-Vāhana. Manovegā or 'swift as mind' is aptly symbolised by the vehicle of a horse known for its swiftness.

Śāntā or Kālī.

The Śvetāmbara books describe Śāntā as riding an elephant and her hands as furnished with Varada, rosary, lance,

1. अच्युतादेवीं श्यामवर्णां नरवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरवीणाचितदक्षिणकरां
कामुकामययुतवामहस्ताम् ।

Nirvāṇa-kālikā (MSS. Jāṇa-mandir).

- Cf. श्यामा चतुर्भुजधरा नरवाहनस्था पार्श्वे तया च वरदं करयोर्दधाना ।
वामान्ययोस्तदनु सुन्दरबीजपूरं तीक्ष्णाङ्गुली च परयोः... अच्युता ॥

Ācārādīnakara MSS. Rāmghāṭa Collection.

2. तुरङ्गवाहना देवी मनोवेगा चतुर्भुजा ।

Pratīṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha.

Also, मनोवेगा सफलका फलखड्गवराच्यते ।

Mandira pratīṣṭhā-Vidhāna (MSS. Jaina-siddhānta library, Arrah).

and Abhaya.¹ Kālī,² her Digambara variant, is known from their literature as being seated on a bull and as carrying in her hands a trident, fruit, Varada and bell.³

As wife of Yakṣa Mātāṅga literally meaning 'elephant', Śāntā's symbolic vehicle of an elephant is evident enough. Her other Symbols bespeak her military Yakṣiṇī as well as benign Vidyādevī character. Kālī also takes her place among the Vidyādevīs. Her symbols of a bull, bell, trident make her resemble a Hindu Śaivite goddess on one hand and a citrus makes her unmistakably a Yakṣiṇī on the other.

Bhṛkuṭī or Jvālāmālīnī.

The Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī Bhṛkuṭī rides a cat (or swan) and her hands are adorned with a sword, club, spear and axe.⁴ The Digambara Śāsanadevī Jvālāmālīnī or Jvālīnī has a buffalo

1. शान्तादेवीं सुवर्णवर्णां गजवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदाक्षयुक्तदक्षिणकरां शूलभय-युतवामहस्तां ।

Nīrṇāṇakalīkā.

(MSS. Jñāna Mandir, Agra).

Cf. तथोत्पन्ना शान्ता देवी स्वर्णरुग्गजवाहना ।

वरदं साक्षसूत्रं च विभ्राणा दक्षिणौ भुजौ ।

सशूलभयदौ बाहू दधाना दक्षिणेतरी ॥

Hemacandra's Supārśvacarita.

2. सिताङ्गा वृषभारुडा काली देवी चतुर्भुजा ।

षष्ठात्रिशूलसंयुक्ता फलहस्ता वरप्रदा ॥ (J.B. Arrah).

Cf. सिता गोवृषगा षष्ठां फलशूलवरावृताम् ।

Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. One image with name in the Patanī Devī Temple.

4. पीता बिडालगमना भृकुटिचतुर्दो-

वमि च हस्तयुगले फलकं सुपशुम् ।

तत्रैव दक्षिणकरेऽप्यसिमुद्गरौ च... ॥

Acārādīnakara, (MSS. Rāmghāṭa Collection., Banares).

Cf. मरालयाना पीताङ्गी भृकुटी नाम देव्यपि ।

दधती दक्षिणौ बाहू खड्गमुद्गरधारिणी ।

वामौ च फलकपरशुलायितौ विभ्रती भुजौ ।

Hemacandra's Candraprabhacarita.

as her riding animal and holds in her hands disc, arrow, noose, shield, trident, sword, bow etc.¹

An image of this Yakṣiṇī was seen by me in a cave, under the Eastern roof, Gwalior Fort. It has eight hands and consequently should be identified with Jvālāmālīnī rather than with Bhṛkuṭī.²

Bhṛkuṭī's symbol of a swan (acc. to Hemacandra) may be explained as identically the same riding animal for the husband Vijaya (Vijayo haṁsavāhanaḥ, Vide ante). Her other symbols as held in the hands are such as become a Yakṣiṇī or 'guardian goddess'. Jvālāmālīnī or Jvālīnī or Mahājvālā as known to the Śvetāmbaras also assume, in the same name, the function of a Vidyādevī. Her symbol of a buffalo shows her symbolic connexion with her husband Vijaya, who, in Brāhmaṇism, is synonymous with Yama, the famous rider of a Buffalo.

Sutārā or Mahākālī.

Sutārā Yakṣiṇī of the Śvetāmbaras as described in their books rides a bull and bears four hands with Varada, rosary urn and goad.³ Mahākālī, the Digambara variant of the Yakṣiṇī sit upon a tortoise and carries in her hands Vajra, club, fruit and Vara Mudrā.⁴

1. चन्द्रोज्ज्वलां चक्रवारसपाशचर्मत्रिशूलेषु भूषासिहस्ताम् ।

Mandirapratipīṭhāvidhāna.

Cf. ज्वालिनी महिषारूढा देवी श्वेता भुजाष्टका ।

काण्डं यच्च त्रिशूलञ्च घत्ते पाशं चतुष्टये ॥

(MSS. J. B. Arrah) Pratipīṭhāsārasaṅgraha.

2. A thousand image of the Yakṣiṇī in the "Pataini" temple, 5 miles from Nachhera State.
3. सुतारां देवीं गौरवर्णां वृषभवाहनीं चतुर्भुजां वरदाक्षसूत्रयुक्तदक्षिणभुजां कलशाङ्कुशान्वितवामपाणिम् ।

Nirvāṇa-Kalikā (MSS. Jhānamandir, Agra).

Cf. तथोत्पन्ना सुताराख्या गौराङ्गी वृषवाहना ।

वरदं साक्षसूत्रं च विभ्राणा दक्षिणी भुजौ ।

कलशाङ्कुशिनी बाहू दधाना दक्षिणेतरी ॥

Hemacandra's Suridhīndhakarita.

4. देवी तथा महाकाली विनीता कूर्मवाहना ।

सर्वत्रमुद्गरहस्ता फलहस्ता चतुर्भुजा ॥

Pratipīṭhāsāra-saṅgraha (MSS. J. S. Arrah).

The Yakṣiṇī's tortoise symbol originates from the same animal as used by Ajitā, her husband. As the names Sutārā or Mahākālī suggest, the Yakṣiṇī's aspect seems, to some extent, to be Śaivite although Mahākālī has her part to play, as a Vidyādevī, with some common symbolic attributes.

Aśokā or Mānavī

The image of the Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī Aśokā is described as seated upon a lotus and bearing in her hands Varada, noose, fruit and goad.¹ The Digambara books describe Mānavī as riding a hog and holding the attributes, as follows, fruit, Vaṛa, bow, etc.²

Like the majority of Yakṣiṇīs, the Yakṣiṇī, in question, has a dual aspect, she is in one aspect a Yakṣiṇī and in another, a Vidyādevī. As Vidyādevī, her name is Mānavī and she is described as seated on a blue lotus. Here, also as a pure Yakṣiṇī, the Śvetāmbara accounts give her a blue lotus. The warlike attributes like a goad, noose, bow are symbols quite befitting her characteristic of a Yakṣiṇī or Guardian angel. The benign symbols, such as, Varada, fruit and a blue-lotus seat she is given, however, would make us recognise in her a form of Vidyādevī or goddess of learning.

ॐ कृष्णा कूर्मासना घन्वशतोन्नतजिनानता ।

महाकालीज्यते वज्रफलमुदगरदानयुक् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

1. अथोकां देवीं मुदगवर्णां पद्मवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदपाशयुक्तदक्षिणकरां फलाङ्कुशयुक्तवामकराम् ।

Nirṇāgakalikā (MSS. Jñānamandir).

ॐ नीला पद्मकृतासना वरभुजैर्वेदप्रमाणैर्युता पाशं सत्वरदं च दक्षिणकरे हस्तद्वये बिभ्रती । वामे चाङ्कुशवर्मणी बहुगुणाऽऽशोका विशोका-जने...

Ācāradinakara.

2. मानवी च हरिद्वर्णा भयहस्ता चतुर्भुजा । कृष्णशूकरयानस्या फलहस्ता वरप्रदा ।

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṁgraha (MSS. Jaina S. Bhavana, Arrah)

ॐ भयदामरुचकदानोचितहस्तां कृष्णकोलगां हरिताम् ।

नवतिघनुस्नुग(?) जिनप्रगतामिह मानवीं प्रयजे ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

Gaurī or Mānavī.

This eleventh Yakṣiṇī belongs to the eleventh Tīrthamkara Śreyāṁśanātha. The Digambara representation of the Yakṣiṇī known therein as Gaurī rides, according to their accounts, an antelope and bears a club, lotus, urn and Varada in her hands.¹ The Śvetāmbara variant of the same Yakṣi in the name of Mānavī or Śrīvatsā Devī has been described as riding a lion and holding a Varada, club, urn and goad.²

The name Gaurī originates evidently from the Brāhmanic Gaurī, the wife of Śiva. Here, in this instance, the Yakṣa, of whom Gaurī is the consort is called Ivara. Her other aspect is represented by a Vidyādevī, known by the same name. Now, the Śvetāmbaras give her the name of Śrīvatsā or Mānavī. This name, however, presents an anomaly due to the identity of Mānavī with the Digambara Yakṣiṇī, of Śīṭalanātha bearing the same name. Thus, it is possible to explain the name Śrīvatsā as originating from the Śrīvatsā figure, the canonical symbol of Śīṭalanātha. As regards the attributes, which adorn the hands of the Devī, some of them are warlike, as worthy of a Yakṣiṇī, and others are benign, as symbolic of a goddess of learning.

Caṇḍā or Gāndhārī.

Caṇḍā or Pracāṇḍā, as she is also called by the Śvetāmbaras, has a horse for her riding animal, and carries the symbols

1. पद्महस्ता सुवर्णाभा गौरी देवी चतुर्भुजा ।

जिनेन्द्रशासनभक्ता वरदा मृगवाहिनी ॥

Pratīṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS. Arrah Collection)

Cf. समुद्रगराजकलशां वरदां कनकप्रभाम् ।

गौरीं यजेज्जीतिधनुःप्रांशुदेवीं मृगोपमाम् ॥

Pratīṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha.

2. तथैव मानवी देवी गौराङ्गी सिंहवाहना ।

वरदं मुद्गरिणं च दधती दक्षिणौ करौ ।

वामौ च विभ्रती पाणी कुलशाङ्ककुशधारिणौ ॥

Śreyāṁśanāthacarita by Hemacandra

Cf. मानवीं देवीं गौरवर्णां सिंहवाहनां चतुर्भुजाम् ।

वरदमुद्गरान्वितदक्षिणपाणिं नेत्रकुलशाङ्ककुशयुक्तवामकराम् ॥

Nirvāṇakālīkā (MSS. Jāna mandir, Agra)

of Varada, spear, flower and club.¹ The Digambara form of the same deity is represented as riding on a crocodile and having the hands equipped with a club, two lotuses and Varada mudrā.

Like the previous one, this Yakṣiṇī, too, takes her part as a Vidyādevī. As such, the name borne by her is Gāndhārī. There is some essential connection between the Yakṣiṇī Gāndhārī's animal of a crocodile and the Vidyādevī Gāndhārī's animal of a tortoise. Caṇḍā or Pracaṇḍā seems to be, as the name indicates, a Jaina prototype of the Brāhmaṇic Caṇḍā or Durgā.

Viditā or Vijayā or Vairoṣi

The Śvetāmbaras know this Yakṣiṇī as Viditā or Vijayā. She is described in their books as seated on a lotus and as having four hands with an arrow, noose, bow and snake.² The Digambara Vairoṣi appears in representations as riding on a snake (Goṇasa) and bearing in her hands two snakes, bow and arrow.³

Vairoṣi figures also like others as a Vidyādevī. The other name of Viditā means 'learned one'. This would suggest the

1. तथोत्पन्ना श्यामवर्णा चण्डा नामाश्ववाहना ।

दक्षिणो वरदशक्तिधारिणो दधती भुजौ ॥

पाणी पुष्पगदायुक्तौ बिभ्रती दक्षिणेतरो ॥

Hemacandra's Vāmbhājyavarita.

Cf. श्यामा तुरगासना चतुर्दोःकरयोर्दक्षिणयोर्बरं च शक्तिम् ।

दधती किल वामयोः प्रसूनं सुगदा सा प्रवरावताच्च चण्डी ॥

Ācāroḍinakara.

2. तथोत्पन्ना विदिताख्या हरितालसमद्युतिः ।

पद्मास्त्रं बाणपाशधरदक्षिणपाणिका ।

कोदण्डनागसंयुक्तदक्षिणेतरेबाहुका ॥

Hemacandra's Pīmalanāthavarita.

Cf. विदितां देवीं हरितालवर्णां पद्मास्त्रं चतुर्भुजां ।

बाणपाशयुक्तदक्षिणपाणिं धनुर्नागयुक्तवामपाणिम् ॥

3. वैरोटी नामतो देवी हरिद्वर्णा चतुर्भुजा ।

हस्तद्वयेन सर्पा द्वौ धत्ते गोणसवाहना ॥

Pratīṣṭhāśāstrasamgraha (MSS. Arrah Collection).

central idea of Goddess of learning. In other respects, Vidyā or Vijayā with her colour of yellow, symbols of bow, arrow, snake and lotus or the vehicle or Goṇasa seems to be a clear derivative of a form of Durgā. The name of Vijayā, it is worth observing, retains the original name of her arche-type.¹

Amṛkuṣā or Anantamatī

Amṛkuṣā of the Śvetāmbaras is to be canonically sculptured as seated on a lotus, and having four hands with a sword, noose, spear and goad.² The Digambaras to whom this Yakṣiṇī is known as Anantamatī describe her as being carried by a swan and as holding in her hands a bow, arrow, fruit and Varada.³

The name 'Amṛkuṣā' appears to be derived from the Amṛkuṣa or goad, which the Yakṣiṇī carries. In the same name, we find a Vidyādevī who also bears a goad. The name Anantamatī originates very evidently from Anantanātha, the Jīna and master, whom the Yakṣiṇī waits upon. Brahmā's wife is Sarasvatī; here the origin of the swan as a vehicle might be due to this connection.

Kandarpā (Paṇṇagadevī) or Mānasī

Descriptions from the Śvetāmbara books make her ride upon a horse or a fish and appear in sculpture with four hands, adorned with a lotus, goad, lotus and Abhaya.⁴ Mānasī, the

Cf. षष्टिदण्डोच्चतीर्षेणता गोणसवाहना ।

ससर्पं चापसर्पेषु वैरोटी हरिताच्यते ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

1. An inscribed image of her is in the "Paitinī Temple" Uchnera State.
2. अङ्कुशां देवीं गौरवर्णां पद्मवाहनां चतुर्भुजां खड्गपाशयुक्तदक्षिणकरां चर्मफलाङ्कुशयुतवामहस्ताम् ॥

(Nirvāṇakalīkā MSS, Jñāna mandir, Agra).

3. तथानन्तमती देवी हेमवर्णा चतुर्भुजा ।

चापं बाणं फलं धत्ते वरदा हंसवाहना ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS, Arrah, Jaina S. Bhavan).

Cf. हेमाभा हंसगा चापफलबाणवरोधता ।

पञ्चाशच्चापतुङ्गाहृद्भुक्तानन्तमतीज्यते ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

4. कन्दर्पा देवीं गौरवर्णामश्ववाहनां चतुर्भुजां . . .

Nirvāṇak alikā (MSS, Jñāna mandir, Agra).

Digambara variant of the same Yakṣiṇī, is described from their point of view, as riding a tiger, and holding in her six hands a lotus, bow, Varada, goad, arrow and lotus.¹

The origin of symbols, it must have been noticed, is of irregular character. The fish symbol of the Yakṣiṇī seems to be due to the identical symbol of her consort Kiṇṇara as furnished by the Digambara books (Dharmasya Kiṇṇaro Yakṣaḥ. .Minavāhana). It is hardly easy to see any possible connection between her name as Kandarpā and the Brāhmanic God, Kandarpa or Kāma. The name-Mānasī has very probable relation with 'Manasijā' implying the same idea. Thus, the other name of Paṇṇagādevī or the Goddess of snakes might have been derived from Manasā, who is characteristically a goddess of snakes. Mānasī is also a deity, in the list of the Vidyādevīs and as such, she is interestingly seen to be symbolised by a snake. Her tiger vehicle, in this instance, shows her a prototype of Vāgīśvarī (goddess of learning) whose figure in Benares shows the same animal as her vehicle.

Nirvāṇī or Mahāmānasī

Nirvāṇī, in Śvetāmbara accounts, is represented as seated on a lotus and four-armed, the attributes being a book, lotus, Kamaṇḍalu and a lotus bud.² The Digambara books supply

ॐ. तथोत्पन्ना च कन्दर्पा गौराङ्गी मत्स्यवाहना ।
उत्पलाङ्कुशचारिभ्यां दक्षिणाभ्यां विराजिता ।
दोभ्यां तदितराभ्यां च पद्मिनाऽभयदेन च ॥

Hemacandra's Dharmadīpa Carita.

Further, कन्दर्पाधृतपरपन्नगाभिधाना गौराभा भयगमना चतुर्भुजा च ।

Ācārādīnakara (Rāmgṛha Collection).

1. साम्बुजधनुदानाङ्कुशशरोत्पला व्याघ्रगा प्रवालनिभा ।

नवपञ्चकचापोच्छ्रितजिननम्रा मानसीह मान्यते ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

Cf. व्याघ्रवाहनमासृष्टा शिल्पधर्मानुरागिणी ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāraṅgraha (MSS., Arrah)

2. निर्वाणां देवीं गौरवर्णां पद्मासनां चतुर्भुजां पुस्तकोत्पलयुक्तदक्षिणकरां
कमण्डलुकमलयुतवामहस्ताम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā (Jñāna-mandir, Agra).

descriptions of Mahāmānasī, according to which, she has the vehicle of a peacock and holds in her hands a disc, fruit, Iḍi (sword?) and Varada.¹

Although most rare, unexpectedly, I was able to explore a separate figure of Nirvāṇī, which generally agrees with the above description. It is now in the Lucknow Museum. A subordinate representation of the Yakṣiṇī may be seen in some places of Jaina antiquity.²

The name Nirvāṇī connotes the idea of Nirvāṇa. Her symbols of a book, lotus, Kamaṇḍalu strike one with her characteristic nature of the wife of Brahmā. Curiously, Brahmā's wife is also called Sarasvatī. As Mahāmānasī, the Yakṣiṇī holds her new function being a Vidyādevī. Mahāmānasī literally means the 'great Goddess to preside over learning'. The symbol of a peacock, again, speaks of her connection with Sarasvatī, the river goddess, who has the same bird as her riding vehicle.

Balā (Acyutā) or Vijayā

We find her described in the Śvetāmbara books as a Yakṣiṇī riding a peacock and bearing four hands symbolised with a citron, spear, Bhuṣuṇḍī and lotus.³ Canonically different

ॐ. तत्तीर्थजन्मा निर्वाणी गौराङ्गी कमलासना ।
पुस्तकोत्पलसंयुक्तौ बिभ्रती दक्षिणी करौ ।
सकमण्डलुकमलौ वामौ च दधती करौ ॥

¹ Hemacandra's Śāntināthacarita.

1. सुमहामानसी देवी हेमवर्णा चतुर्भुजा ।
फलेडिचक्रहस्तासौ वरदा शिखिवाहना ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāraśaṅgraha (MSS., Arrah Collection).

ॐ. चक्रफलेडियराङ्कितकरां महामानसीं सुवर्णाभाम् ।
शिखिगां चरवारिश्चन्द्रनुरुत्तजिनमतां प्रयजे ॥

Pratiṣṭhāśodhāra.

2. Vide the fig. of Śāntinātha, in a cave, eastern roof, Gwalior Fort. It bears four hands. Inside the Fort through the Urai gate, another figure may be seen on the left side of the road, amidst three Jaina Colossi, of which one is of Śāntinātha. Cf. the figure in 'the "Patañi Devī" Temple in Unchhara State, C.I.

3. तत्तीर्थभूर्बला देवी गौराङ्गी केकिवाहना ।
बिभ्राणा दक्षिणी बाहू बीजपूरकशूलिनौ ॥

account is given of Vijayā, the Digambara counterpart of the Yakṣiṇī, in their literature. According to it, she should be represented as riding a black boar and carrying the attributes of a conch, sword, disc and Varada Mudrā.¹

Halā or Acyutā of the Śvetāmbaras from the nature of her vehicle of a peacock seems to be a form of Sarasvatī. This supposition may be supported by the fact that her consort Gandharva rides on a sun and is a divine musician. Sarasvatī is known to be also presiding over the art of music. The symbol of a citron, indicating the Yakṣa characteristic is borne by both the husband and the wife. Vijayā of the Digambaras, on the other hand, shown by her boar vehicle, a Yakṣiṇī goddess whose form must have been borrowed from Mārīcī of Buddhism and Vārāhī of Brāhmaṇism. Her other symbols provided by the Digambara books of a disc, sword, conch and Varada speak of her origin from Vārāhī.²

Dhāraṇī or Tārā

The Śvetāmbara texts described Dhāraṇī Yakṣiṇī as seated on a lotus and possessing four hands with a citrus, two lotuses, and a rosary.³ Tārā, the Yakṣiṇī of the Digambara is to appear,

भुशुण्डिपङ्कजभूतौ विभ्रती दक्षिणेतरो ।
सदा सन्निहिता जज्ञे प्रभोः शासनदेवता ॥

Hemacandra's Kunthuseśmīcaritam.

Cf. शिखिगा सचतुर्भुजाऽतिपीता फलपूरं दधती त्रिशूलयुक्तम् ।
करयोरपसव्ययोश्च सव्ये करयुग्मे तु भुशुण्डिभृद्बलाऽभ्यात् ।

MSS. Rāmāghāṭa.

1. जयादेवी सुवर्णाभा कृष्णसूकरवाहना ।
शङ्खासिचक्रहस्तासौ वरदा धर्मवत्सला ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS. Jaina Siddhānta Bhavana Library, Arrah).

Cf. सचक्रशङ्खासिवरां रुक्माभां कृष्णकोलगां यजे जयाम् ॥

Maudirapratīṣṭhāvidhāna (MSS. Ibid.)

2. An inscribed image of Vijayā in a group is to be found in the "Patānī Temple" Uchnera State C.I.
3. देवी च धारणी नाम नीलाङ्गी कमलासना ।
मातुलिङ्गोत्पलधरा दक्षिणोभयबाहुका ।
पद्माक्षसूत्रभूत्

Hemacandra's Arasāritam.

according to them, as riding on a swan and holding a snake, Vajra, deer and Varada Mudrā.

In this case, like more cases, the Yakṣiṇī Dhārāṇī bears the Yakṣa symbol of a citrus together with other symbols, which explain her mixed origin. The name Tārā renders her connection with the Brāhmaṇic Tārā almost obvious. The snake symbol in her hand is primarily common to the deity of either sects.

Vairoṣi or Aparājitā

The Yakṣiṇī, in her Śvetāmbara appearance, is to be represented as seated on a lotus, and carrying in her hands Varada, rosary, citrus, and Śakti.² Aparājitā, the Digambara counterpart, is represented by their texts as a goddess riding a lion and bearing hands, equipped with a citrus, sword, shield and Vara-mudrā.³

The citrus symbol, in both the forms, makes the goddess typically a Yakṣiṇī. The name Vairoṣi occurs in connection with the Vidyādevīs and as a presiding deity over learning, she

For comparison, see

धारणीदेवीं कृष्णवर्णां चतुर्भुजां पद्मासनां मातुलिङ्गोत्पलान्वितदक्षिणभुजां
पाशाक्षसूत्रान्वितवामकरां ॥

Nirvāṇa-kalikā (MSS., Agra, Jñāna mandir).

1. देवी सारावती नाम्ना हेमवर्णा चतुर्भुजा ।

सर्पवज्रं मृगं धत्ते वरदा हंसवाहना ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS., Arrah Collection).

Cf. स्वर्णाभां हंसगां सर्पमृगवज्रं

Mandira pratiṣṭhā vidhāna (MSS., Ibid).

2. तत्तीर्थभूय वैरोटी कृष्णाङ्गी कमलासना ।

भान्ती दोभ्यां दक्षिणाभ्यां वरदेनाक्षसूत्रिणा ।

मातुलिङ्गशक्तियुक्तदक्षिणभुजां वामदोभ्यां

Hemacandra.

Compare

वैरोटीं देवीं कृष्णवर्णां पद्मासनां चतुर्भुजाम् ।

वरदाक्षसूत्रयुक्तदक्षिणकरां मातुलिङ्गशक्तियुक्तवामहस्ताम् ॥

Nirvāṇa-kalikā (MSS., Jñānamandir, Agra).

3. अष्टापदं समाख्या देवीनाम्नापराजिता ।

फलासिखेटहस्तासौ हरिद्वर्णा चतुर्भुजा ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāṅgraha. (MSS., Jainabhavana, Arrah)

An image of the Yakṣiṇī is in the Patāni Temple vide ante.

has a lion as her vehicle. We find, however, the lion symbol in the case of Aparājītā, the Digambara form of the Yakṣiṇī. We had occasion of describing Vairoṭi as the Digambara counterpart of Vijayā. There seems to be an exchange in the pair of combinations. Vijayā and Aparājītā seem to be the same in meaning; the original idea of both must have been derived from that of Durgā, who bears the same names in Brāhmanism.

Naradattā or Bahurūpiṇī

Naradattā is described in the Śvetāmbara literature as seated in the Bhadrāsana posture, showing four hands which hold Varada, rosary, citron, and trident (or urn).¹ The Digambara Yakṣiṇī is represented by them as riding a black snake and holding a shield, fruit, sword and Varada Mudrā.²

Naradattā or Bahurūpiṇī from the nature of her symbols and her husband's being of Śaivite character, discloses herself in representation as a form of Durgā or a Brāhmanic Śakti. The Yakṣiṇī element in her may be clearly attested by the symbol of the fruit citron and the urn, the true attribute of the wife of Varuṇa. It should be noted in this connection that this Naradattā and the predefined Puruṣadattā, the Yakṣiṇī of Sumatinātha, being the same in meaning suggest some mysterious common origin.³

Gāndhārī or Cāmūṇḍā

The Śvetāmbara sectarian Yakṣiṇī, Gāndhārī by name, has been described as riding a swan and furnished with four hands,

1. भद्रासना कनकसूक्तनुसृज्जबाहुरक्षावलीवरदक्षिणपाणिमुग्धा ।

सन्मातुलिङ्गयुतशूलितदन्वपाणिरच्छुष्मिका श्रीनरदत्ता ॥

Ācārādinakara.

OR. नरदत्तां देवीं गौरवर्णां पद्मासनारूढां चतुर्भुजां ।

वरदाक्षसूत्रयुतदक्षिणकरां बीजपूरककुम्भयुतवामहस्ताम् ॥

Niroḍḍakalikā (MSS., Śvetāmbara. Library Agra).

2. कृष्णनागसमारूढा देवता बहुरूपिणी ।

खेटं खड्गं फलं घटं हेमवर्णा चतुर्भुजा ॥

Pratigṛhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS., Arrah)

बहुरूपिणीं यजे कृष्णाहिणां खेटफलखड्गवरोत्तराम् ॥

Mandirapratigṛhā vidhāna (MSS., Arrah).

3. Her image with name inscribed is in the "Pataini Temple" Uchnera.

which hold, in turn, Varada Mudrā, sword, citron and spear (Kunta).¹ The Cāmuṇḍā or Digambara form of the same Yakṣiṇī is represented in their way as riding on a dolphin and carrying in her hands a rosary, staff, shield and sword.²

This pair of names (viz. Gāndhārī and Cāmuṇḍā) has already occurred in connexion with the Yakṣiṇī of Vāsūpūjya. There seems to have been some mysterious transposition of these deities. In the case of Vāsūpūjyā Caṇḍā is Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī, whereas Gāndhārī, who is Śvetāmbara here was Digambara there. Gāndhārī there rides a dolphin as Cāmuṇḍā rides the same animal in the present case. The Yakṣiṇī Gāndhārī we describe now, assumes such symbols (for instance swan, Varada, citron) as would make her partly a Vidyādevī and partly a Yakṣiṇī. Her Digambara counterpart Cāmuṇḍā is also called Kusuma-mālinī and as such, her dolphin symbol may be justified because Kusumamālī or kāmā has the same symbolical mark (Makara-ketana)³.

Ambikā (Kusmāṇḍī) or Āmrā

This Yakṣiṇī of Neminātha has the Śvetāmbara description of a goddess, who rides a lion and bears a bunch of mangoes, nose, a child and goad.⁴ The Digambara image of the Yakṣiṇī

1. तथैव देवी गान्धारी श्वेताङ्गी हंसवाहना ।
दोभ्यां वरदक्षद्विभ्यां दक्षिणाम्बां विराजिता ।
वामाम्बां बीजपूरिभ्यां बाहुभ्यामुपशोभिता ॥

Hemacandra's Nemināthacarita.

Cf. गान्धारीं देवीं श्वेतां हंसवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदक्षयुक्तदक्षिणभुजद्वयां
बीजपूरकुन्तयुतवामपाणिद्वयां ।

Nirṇānakalikā (MSS., Jñānamandira, Agra).

2. चामुण्डा देवता भीमा हरिद्वर्णा चतुर्भुजा ।
अक्षसूत्रं च यष्टिं च धत्ते मकरवाहना ॥

Pratigṛhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS, Arrah).

Cf. चामुण्डा यष्टिखेटाक्षसूत्रलङ्गोत्कटा हरित् ।

मकरस्थार्च्यते पञ्चदशदण्डोन्नतेशभाक् ॥

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra.

3. An inscribed image with name is in the "Paitinī Temple" Uchnera.
4. तत्तीर्थजन्मा स्वर्णकान्तिः सिंहवाहना आभ्रलुम्बि (?) पाशसंयुक्तदक्षिणकर-
द्वया पुत्राङ्कुशसहितवामकरद्वया कुष्माण्डोत्तिद्वितीयनामधारिणी अम्बिका
प्रभोः शासनदेवी समभवत् ।

Gujarajaya gani's Neminātha Caritra (Nirṇayasagar Press)

is described as also riding upon a lion, but as bearing two hands with a bunch of mangoes and a child.¹

Images of both types may be seen in some Jaina places although they have been wrongly identified in every case. The distinction regarding the number of hands has strictly followed in the representations the point being decisive in making it either Ambikā or Kuṣmāṇḍinī² except her symbol of a bunch of mangoes, which gave origin to one of her names as Āmrā, she is by name and appearance a borrowed form of Durgā. Ambā, Ambālikā and Ambikā are names of Durgā. She has further the name, as in this case, of Kuṣmāṇḍinī. Kuṣmāṇḍī is the name of Durgā. Kuṣmāṇḍas were a hilly clan attached to lord Śiva. It is highly probable that being a Yakṣiṇī, whose class originated from the Northern Himalayan region, Kuṣmāṇḍī came out of this class.

Padmāvati

The name of the Yakṣiṇī is common to both the sects. According to the Śvetāmbara view, Padmāvati is to be represented as riding on a snake and cock, and holding a lotus, noose, fruit and goad.³ Padmāvati of the Digambaras is described to be

cf. कुष्माण्डीं देवीं कनकवर्णां सिंहवाहनां चतुर्भुजां मातुलिङ्गपाशयुक्त-दक्षिणकराम् अङ्कुशान्वितवामकरां ।

Nandya-kalikā (MSS., Agra)

1. द्विभुजा सिंहमारुडा आम्नादेवी हरितप्रभा ।

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṃgraha (MSS., Arrah)

cf. सव्ये कर्मुपगप्रियङ्कुरसुतप्रीत्यै करे बिभ्रतीम् । दिव्याम्रस्तवकं शुभङ्कुर करद्विलष्टान्यहस्ताङ्गुलिम् । सिंहे भर्तृचरे स्थितां हरितभामाम्ब्रुम-
च्छायगाम् ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra

2. The Fig. No. D 7, Mathura Museum, wrongly called by Dr Vogel as Pārvaṭī is, in fact, the Digambara image of Kuṣmāṇḍī. The fact that the Digambara image has no ornaments is not always true as it bears ornaments. What has been wrongly called 'happy twins', Deogarh Fort, Jhānsi, Arch. Serial 2228 is the image of Kuṣmāṇḍī with her consort. A fine and separate image of the Yakṣiṇī is in the Deogarh Fort, on the West of the Main temple. We can identify rightly the images of 'Pārvaṭī', No 629, Gwalior Arch. Dept. from Mohanpur and Nimithur as those of 4 armed Ambikā.

3. तथा पद्मावती देवी कुर्कुटोरगवाहना । स्वर्णवर्णा पद्मपाशभृद्दक्षिणकरद्वया ।
फलाङ्कुशधराम्ना च वामदोम्यां विराजिता ॥

Hemacandra's Pārvaṇḍīhacaritam.

of four types according to the number of hands. Some texts give her a snake and cock as her vehicle, others give her a lotus seat. The four-handed figure holds a goad, rosary, two lotuses. The six-handed type has a nose, sword, spear, crescent, club, staff, as attributes. The eight-handed figure has a noose and other attributes. The twentyfour-handed figure holds a conch, sword, Cakra, crescent, lotus, blue lotus, bow (Sarṣanām), spear, noose, Kuśa-grass, bell, arrow, staff, shield, trident, axe, (Kunta) Vajra, garland, fruit, club, leaf, stalk, and Varada Mudrā.¹

Separate-sculptures of an important Yakṣiṇī like Padmāvati ought to have been discovered but we have, so far, only seen the Yakṣiṇī's likeness with symbols in her master's statues.²

The legend of Padmāvati is throughout associated with snakes and she belongs to the Nether Regions or Pātāla. This

स्वर्णाभोत्तमकुण्डाहिगमना सौम्या चतुर्बाहुभृ-
द्रामे हस्तयुगेऽङ्कुशं दधिफलं तथापि . . . दक्षिणे ।
पद्मं पाशमुदञ्चयन्त्यविरतं पद्मावती . . .

Ācārādinakara.

1. देवी पद्मावती नाम्ना रक्तवर्णा चतुर्भुजा ।
पद्मासनाङ्कुशं धत्ते अक्षसूत्रं च पङ्कजम् ।
अथवा पद्मभुजा देवी चतुर्विधतिसद्भुजा ॥
पाशासिक्तुन्तबालेन्दुगदामुसलसंयुतम् ।
भुजाष्टकं समाख्यातं चतुर्विधतिसिद्ध्यते ।
शङ्खासिचक्रबालेन्दुपद्मोत्पलशरासनम् ।
शक्तिं पाशं कुशं धण्डां बाणं मुसललेटकम् ।
त्रिशूलं परशुं कुन्तं वज्रं मालां फलं गदाम् ।
पद्मञ्च पल्लवं धत्ते वरदा धर्मवत्सला ॥

Pratijñāsārasaṅgraha (MSS, Arrah)

Cf. येष्टुं कुक्कुटसर्पंगा त्रिफणकोत्तंसा द्विषो या तष्टा पाशाविः सदसत्कृते च
धृतशङ्खास्यादिदोरष्टका(?) । तां शान्तामरुणां स्फुरच्छणिसरोजन्माक्ष-
मालाम्बरां पद्मस्थां नवहस्तकप्रभुनतां यायाज्मि पद्मावतीम् ॥

2. A fig. of Padmāvati in Pakhir, Purul'a Dist. See Beglar's report, Arch. Surv. Reports Vol. VIII; with Pārsvanātha's image, in Gwalior Fort, Eastern roof; on the Western face of the pillar near the Western gate (No. 1) in the Deogarh Fort.

serpent symbol is well manifest in art and so is her other symbol of lotus, which is responsible for the origin of her name. In Bengal, Padmāvatī with the snake-symbols is worshipped as Manasā, the goddess of snake and the wife of Jaratkāru. Certain vernacular MSS. called Padma-purāṇa, Behulā (Vipulā also) Carita, give the stories of Behulā, Chand Merchant and Padmāvatī. It is most likely that the connection between the Jaina Padmāvatī and the Brāhmaṇic Manasā originates from the Jaina legends. Jaratkāru, an ascetic, stands for Kaṭha in the Jaina legend and it is he who latterly became one with Śeṣa, the King of Pātāla.

Siddhāyikā

This Yakṣiṇī of Mahāvīra in the account of the Śvetāmbaras, should ride a lion and have four hands carrying a book, Abhaya, Citra, and lute (Viṇā).¹ The Digambara counterpart of the goddess is represented as also riding upon a lion and holding a Varada Mudrā and book.²

Siddhāyikā's images like those of Padmāvatī are only to be seen as parts of the sculptures of Mahāvīra. In them, the lion and the book symbols are prominent enough.³

1. सिद्धायिकां हरितवर्णां सिंहवाहनां चतुर्भुजां पुस्तकाभययुक्तदक्षिणकरां मातु-
लिङ्गवीचान्वितवामहस्ताम् ॥

Nirāṇkalikā (MSS Jñāna mandir, Agra).

Cf. सिद्धायिका तथोत्पन्ना सिंहयाना हरिच्छविः ।

समातुलिङ्गवल्कल्यौ वामबाहू च विभ्रती ॥

पुस्तकाभयदौ चोभौ दधाना दक्षिणौ भुजौ ।

Hemacandra's Mahāvīracarita.

2. सिद्धायिका तथा देवी द्विभुजा कनकप्रभा ।

वरदं पुस्तकं घत्ते सुभद्रासनमाश्रिता ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha (MSS. Arrah)

Cf. सिद्धासनां सप्तकरोच्छिताङ्गजिनाश्रयां पुस्तकदानहस्ताम् ।

श्रितां सुभद्रासनमत्र यज्ञे हेमद्युतिं सिंहवर्ति यजेद्भुम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. A two-armed figure evidently of Digambara origin of the Goddess was seen by me on the Pillar near the Western gate in the Deogarh Fort. The Vāgīśvarī Fig. regarded as Hindu, appears to be of Jaina Yakṣiṇī Siddhāyikā.

The most important symbol connected with Siddhāyikā is her lion. This may be interpreted in the light of the same symbol as assumed by the Yakṣiṇī's master Mahāvīra. Her other symbol, such as a book and Vīṇā (lute) would make her, in appearance, a Vidyādevī. The custom of giving a lion to a goddess of learning does not appear to be singular to the Jainas as we find the Vāgīśvarī of Benares is seated on a lion's back. Siddhāyikā's other symbol is a citrus and this is particularly indicative of her Yakṣiṇī nature.

CHAPTER IV

THE DIKPĀLAS

Equally with Brāhmaṇism, the Jainas of both the sects make room for an important class of divinities under the designation of the Dikpālas, who are supposed to guard the quarters. Their origin, on probable grounds, underlies the actual ideals of certain semi-divine kings, who took the responsibility of governing regions of all the distinct quarters. Their ideas were, undoubtedly, far anterior to the early Brāhmaṇas than to the Jainas. Like the majority of gods imported into the Jaina Pantheon, the Dikpāla gods were directly taken over by the Jaina people. The main characteristics of the Dikpālas are nearly those which we find in connection with the same deities of Brāhmaṇism. In one point, however, the position of the Dikpālas of Jainism is distinct enough. It is always subservient to that of the Tirthaṅkaras, who like the Buddhas were served and cared for by the chiefs of the quarters. It is interesting to reflect that some of the Yakṣas, who owe, as a rule, their origin to other ideas as well, bear recognisable names and nature of the Dikpālas. Whether the Dikpālas came first in order or the Yakṣas is an open question. Yet we have more reason to believe that the conception of the latter was clearly influenced by the former. The Dikpālas, in some cases, such as Indra, Isāna, Brahmā and Nāga introduce into the Jaina godhood their spouses described separately in the iconographic texts. Another feature regarding the Dikpālas, who are also called Lokapālas, is their worship as Vāstu-devatās. One Śvetāmbara text makes them functioning as Kumāras, who differ very little in nature from the Gods of the quarters. We shall describe, now separately the iconography of these ten Dikpālas recognised by both the Śvetāmbaras and Digambaras.

Indra

There seems to lie very little difference between the descriptions of the Dikpāla Indra, as afforded both by the Śve-tāmbara and Digambara texts. His chief characteristics are his elephant called Airāvata and his Vajra or thunderbolt.¹ Indra is the guardian of the eastern regions and his wife is called Śacī. In one text, we shall see, later on, he has been described as possessed of thousand eyes. We can infer, therefore, that the Brāhmaṇic conception of Indra's having thousand eyes, is carried to Jainism. Clear identity of some features leads me also to infer that Mātāṅga, the Yakṣa of Mahāvira or Mahendra, the Yakṣa of Aranātha according to the Digambaras owes largely its conception to that of Indra.

Agni

Both from the Śvetāmbara and Digambara standpoints, Agni is described as riding a ram, holding a Śakti (spear) and bearing seven flames. One Śvetāmbara text, however, gives him a bow and arrow while a Digambara text adds a sacrificial pot to his attributes and makes rosary as his armlet.² His wife is Svāhā and he has the charge of the south-eastern regions.

1. दृष्यत्सामानिकादिप्रिदशपरिवृतं रक्ष्यशय्यादिदेवी-
लोलार्क्षं वज्रभूषोद्भूटसुभगरुचं प्रागिहेन्द्रं यजामि ॥

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra.

Cf. पूर्वस्यां दिशि कुण्डलांशुनिचयव्यालीडगण्डस्थलं शत्रुं मूर्धनि साधुवद्ध-मुकुटं स्वारुद्धमैरावतम् । पत्नीबान्धवभूत्यवर्गसहितं देवं सदाह्वानये ।

... Devapūjā (MSS., Jaina. S. Bhavana, Arrah.).

Śvetāmbara version—अथ लोकपालाः

शक्रं पीतवर्णमैरावतबाहनं वज्रपाणिं . . .

Nirvāṇakalikā (MSS., Agra Collection).

Cf. वास्तुदेवाः श्रौं ह्रीं ऐरावतस्कन्धमधिश्यन्तं वज्रायुधं रक्ष्यशचीसमेतं
प्रत्यहविध्वंसकम् ।

(MSS., Rāmaghāṭa)

2. अग्निमग्निवर्णं मेघबाहनं सप्तशिखं शक्तिपाणिं ।

Nirvāṇakalikā (MSS., Agra, J. Library).

Cf. श्रीअग्नये . . . कपिलवर्णाय . छागवाहनाय नीलाम्बराय धनुर्बाणहस्ताय
... Pūjāvidhi, Aśvradīnakara (MSS. No. 74/11/36 Rāmaghāṭa MSS. Library, p. 14)

Again, ज्वाला यात्मकशक्तिहस्ता वस्ताधिरुद्धा . . . स्वाहा महिष्यासममग्निदेवाः
श्रौं ह्रीं अग्निवास्तुदेवाय स्वाहा । Ibid., p. 35.

It may be seen from the above description that there is very little difference in iconography between a Brāhmaṇic Agni and Jaina Agni, the latter being a by-product of the former. The attributes of a bow and arrow are, of course, conspicuous. We can imagine that these attributes, which arm the hands of Kārttikeya may have been conceived in case of Agni, who was the presiding god of Kārttikeya. The symbols of sacrificial pot (Kuṇḍī) and rosary are only indicative of the god's primary nature as a sacrificial priest. The meaning of Svāhā, also, supports this idea.

Yama

Yama, the god of death, who governs the south regions, is to be sculptured both according to the Śvetāmbaras and Digambaras, as riding on a buffalo and holding a staff. He is known to be the son of the sun and accompanied by his wife called Chāyā. His chief function is not only to guard the south but also to pronounce judgment on merits and demerits of departed souls.¹

Digambara—स्वमास्तुपुर्पुरस्रग्गलचदुलपृथुप्रायभृङ्गाभतुङ्गस्थं रौद्रं पिङ्गले-
क्षणयुगममलं ब्रह्मसूत्रं शिक्षास्त्रम् । कुण्डीवातप्रकोष्ठे दधतमितरपाण्यात्त-
पुण्याक्षसूत्रम् । स्वाहान्वीतं धिनोमि श्रुतिमुखरसमं प्राच्यप्रोच्यान्त-राग्निम् । छागारोहणमक्षसूत्रवलयं...स्वाहासंयुतमुज्ज्व....

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

1. ओं नमो यमाय धर्मराजाय दक्षिणदिग्धीशाय समवर्तिने धर्माधर्मविचार-
करणाय कृष्णवर्णाय चर्मविरणाय महिषवाहनाय दण्डहस्ताय ।

Ācāradīnakara, Pāṇḍividhi.

Cf. छायासमेतं महिषाधिरूढं दण्डायुधं दण्डितवैरिवर्गं वैवस्वतं...ओं ह्रीं
यमवास्तुदेवाय स्वाहा । Ibid.

Digambara version :

यमदेवस्येति । आसीनं शितवर्णभाजि महिषे वैवस्वतञ्च स्वयम् ।
दण्डमण्डितभुजं दक्षिणस्यां दिशि ।...

Deśapāṇḍī (MSS., Arrah Collection).

Cf. चण्डाधिःकाण्डदण्डं डुमरकरमतिकूरदारं विलोके ।

काण्णोद्वेकं नृशंसं प्रथममथ यमं दिश्य प्राच्यां यजामि ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

The conception of the Jaina Yama is almost identical to that of the Brāhmaṇic God of the same name. The only difference seems to be the Jaina Yama's wife being Chāyā, who, in Brāhmaṇism, is known to be the wife of the Sun-god Sūrya. There is some justification on the part of the Jainas to make Chāyā as the wife of Yama, who has been called Dharma-rāja, by which appellation the Sun-god is also known. In this connection, it is to be pointed out that Candraprabha's Yakṣa Vijaya or Śyāma has some radical identity by name and symbols, to this god of death. Vijaya literally means Yama and Shyāma's wife Jvālīnī actually rides a buffalo, the vehicle of the Dikpāla of the south.

Naiṛta

Naiṛta, the guardian-god of the south-west quarters, is made to ride a corps or a goblin according to the Śvetāmbara texts. In the view of the same, he wears a tiger's skin and holds a club or a sword and a bow (Pināka).¹ The Digambaras represent the god as riding a bear and holding the same attribute of a club.²

The general conception of this Lokapāla or Dikpāla is due to the Brāhmaṇic influence. There are points, however, which make the Jaina God in some ways distinct. The attribute of a bow, his vehicle of a bear and the tiger's skin are of clearly Jaina origin.

1. नैऋतिं हरितवर्णं शवबाहनं खड्गपाणिं

Nirvāṇakalikā (Agra MSS).

Cf. धूम्रवर्णाय व्याघ्रचर्मवृताय मुद्गरहस्ताय प्रेतबाहनाय

Ācārādīnakara (Ramaghaṭa MSS).

Further,

मृताङ्गबाहः द्विषदास्प(?) रक्षः आरूढवानुद्गतमुद्गरास्त्रः । पिनाक-
मायच्छन्तु तैलमिश्रम् । ओं नैऋत्यबास्तुदेवाय स्वाहा । Ibid.

2. नैऋत्यं दृढमुद्गरप्रहरणं भीमं कलावृक्षगम् ।

Devapūjā (Arrah MSS).

आरूढः... यो द्रुमाङ्ग (?) मृक्षम् ।

Cf. क्रूरप्रव्यात्परीतं तिमिरचयस्त्रं मुद्गरक्षुण्णरौद्र-

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra.

Varuṇa

Divergence exists among even the Śvetāmbara texts with regard to the vehicle of Varuṇa, the guardian God of the west. Some texts assign to him the vehicle of a dolphin, others a fish. He is, however, unanimously represented as bearing a noose and figuratively wears the ocean. The other sect makes him appear in icons bedecked in pearls, corals, etc., riding a dolphin and bearing a noose.¹

The Jaina form of Varuṇa may be distinguished only by his symbol of a fish, as some texts render him. In all other respects, he is the same as the Brāhmaṇa guardian-god of the west. The symbols of a dolphin, noose, pearls etc., all originate from the god's connection with the west and the ocean. We find, among the Yakṣas, one named Varuṇa but he rides a bull. On the contrary, Pātāla Yakṣa of Ananta Jina, rides a dolphin and has among his attributes a noose. Either of them presumably has been influenced by the original idea of Varuṇa.

Vāyu

He rides a deer according to all Jaina authorities. Some Śvetāmbara texts give him the attribute of a Vajra, others give him a banner.² The Digambara account of him only differs

1. वरुणं धवलवर्णं मकरवाहनं पाशपाणिम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā.

Cf. श्रीवरुणाय पश्चिमदिग्धीशाय समुद्रवासाय मेघवर्णाय पीताम्बराय
पाशहस्ताय मत्स्यवाहनाय

Ācāradīnakara.

पश्चिन्मिश्रितदन्तिदन्तमकराखण्डं भुजङ्गायुधं मुक्ताविद्रुमभूषणं च वरुणं
काष्ठां प्रतीचीं श्रितम् ।

Devopāṇī.

Cf. प्रोत्फुल्लस्पर्शखेलत्करकरिमकरव्योमयानाधिखण्डं

प्रेङ्गन्मुक्ताप्रवालाभरणमुपस्थावुदाराहताक्षं (?)

स्फूर्जद्भीमाहिपाशं वरुणमपरदिप्रक्षणं प्रीणयामि ॥

Pratigṛhāḍādhāra.

2. ओं नमः श्रीवायवे वायव्यदिग्धीशाय धूसराङ्गाय रक्ताम्बराय हरिणवाहनाय
ध्वजप्रहरणाय. . .

Ācāradīnakara.

from this in the substitute of a wooden weapon.¹ Vāyu is the guardian or Lord of the North-west quarters.

The Jaina Vāyu differs not essentially from the Brāhmaṇic Vāyu. The assignment of the attribute of a Vajra seems to be a new idea. Similarly, the symbol of a wooden weapon attributed by the Digambaras is another peculiar feature unknown to Brāhmaṇism. The Yakṣa, who presents some identity of Vāyu, is Kusuma, who likewise rides a deer, according to the view of both the sects.

Kubera

Kubera, the Protector of the northern regions, has been conceived of by the Śvetāmbara Jains, as a deity, who rides a man, bears gems and a club. According to the authorities of the same sect, he is the treasurer of Indra, King of Yakṣas, having his control over Kailāsa. He, also, rides the chariot by the name of Puṣpaka.² The Digambara view gives not more than the last symbol for the representation of Kubera.³

Cf. वायुं सितवर्णं मृगवाहनं वज्रालङ्कृतपाणिम् ।

Nirōḍapākalikā (MSS. Agra).

1. एकस्यापि पश्चिमोत्तरदिशि हारावलीभूषणं वायुं तुङ्गकुरङ्गपृष्ठगमनं हस्त-स्थवृक्षायुधम् ।

Devapāṇḍ.

Cf. खुरकवितकुलं श्रावसारङ्गयुग्मम् । व्यालोलद्गान्धर्वन्त्रं त्रिजगदनुवृत्ति-
व्यग्रमुग्रद्रुमास्वम् ।

Pratigṛhāṣṭroddhāra.

2. कुबेरमनेकवर्णं निधिनवकाधिरुडं निचुलकहस्तं गदापाणिम् ।

Nirōḍapākalikā (Agra MSS).

Cf. श्रौं नमः श्रीघनदाय उत्तरदिगधीशाय सर्वयक्षेश्वराय कैलाशस्थाय
अलकापुरीप्रतिष्ठाय शक्रकोशाध्यक्षाय नरवाहनाय रत्नहस्ताय ।

Āśvādinakara (Rāmāgṛhāṣṭa, MSS).

Further, श्रौं ह्रीं ... पुष्पितपुष्पिकाभ्रयानाधिरुडं स्फुरितातिशक्ति ...

ः प्रजयक्षराजपूत मया स्वीकुरु पायसान्नम् । Ibid.

3. प्रेङ्खद्विमानध्वजैराखण्डपृथुपुष्पकं धनपतिं प्रोच्यैस्त्रीचीदिशि ...

Devapāṇḍ (Arrah)

Cf. हंसाधोनाह्यमानं पवननरीनृतकेतुपङ्क्तिं विमानं

स्वारुडः पुष्पकाख्यं क्रमसखरसनादाममुक्ताकलापः ।

Pratigṛhāṣṭroddhāra.

Some single figures of the deity may be noticed rarely. The corpulent belly, club and purse guide us to identify such figures. The number of hands is irregular but it is either two or four. The miniature figure of a Jina on the head-dress makes any such figure a Jaina one.¹

Except in one feature namely being the treasurer of Indra instead of Śiva, the Jaina Kubera varies nowise from the Brāhmaṇic Kubera. The symbols of gems, club and the vehicle of a man are common to the conception of the two religions. The fact of his being the treasurer of Indra or Śakra instead of Śiva is due to the superiority, which the former god receives both in Jainism and Buddhism to the latter. We find a Kubera Yakṣa among the attendant spirits of the Jinas but he rides an elephant although he holds a club and citrus as becoming of the king of Yakṣas. There is another Yakṣa named Gomedha, who, like Kubera, rides on a man and bears one or two of his attributes as met with in the Buddhist Kubera. It may be interesting to note here that to ride on a man or a Vimāna (Puṣpaka) a kind of palanquin is a custom much in vogue in the Himālayan regions, of which Kailāsa was a part.

Isāna

He, the Guardian-god of the North-east quarters is to be represented according to the Śvetāmbara texts as riding a bull (joined by Umā), holding a bow and trident. He also bears matted hair and snakes on his person.² The Digambara books

1. The standing image of Kubera from Ghosna Khara in the Mathura Museum has two hands with a club and a purse. A figure from Nimthur, Gwalior State, No. 40/1974 is by appearance of Kubera. It has a Jina miniature above the head-dress.

2. ईशानं धवलवर्णं वृषभवाहनं त्रिशूलं शूलपाणिं ।

Nirvāṇakalikā (Agra. MSS).

ओं उमासमेतो वृषभाधिरूढो जटाकिरीटी फणिभूषिताङ्गः । त्रिशूलहस्तः
प्रमथाधिनाथो गृह्णातु दुग्धाभिमदं ससर्पि । ओं ईशानवास्तुदेवाय...

Ācārādīnakara, Pāṇāśāhi.

Again, श्वेतवर्णो वृषभवाहनो नीललोहितवस्त्रः चतुर्भुजः जयभूतशूलचापभूत-करद्वयेनाञ्जलिकश्च....

Ācārādīnakara, Pratiṣṭhākalpa.

mention only the symbols of a skull over and above the above-named characteristics.¹

Īśāna, otherwise designated as Śiva in Brāhmanism, has been directly imported into the Jaina Pantheon. Skull, bow, properly known as Pināka and snakes are all well-known symbols of Śiva. As there is every likelihood to believe that in Pre-historical times the Śiva-cult had much prevalence in the north-eastern regions, roughly coterminous with the present area of Tibet, Sikkim and Bhutan, still holding the same faith, the north-eastern direction received the name of Īśāna Dik. It is to be noted in this connection that Īśvara Yakṣa of Śreyamaśa-nātha has been influenced by Īśāna, in his vehicle of bull and symbols of three eyes, trident etc.

Brahmā and Nāga

As in Brāhmanism, so in Jainism, too, the Dikpāla Brahmā has been given the charge of the upper regions. The Śvetāmbara texts describe him as four-headed, riding on a swan and holding a book and lotus.² The Digambaras do not seem to have accepted not more than eight guardian gods. Brahmā and Nāga being left out from their descriptive list.

Nāga is to be imaged as a figure seated on a lotus and having a snake in his hand.³ He rules over nether world or Pātāla, the region of the snakes.

The representation of Brahmā and Nāga as Dikpālas evince no further improvement on those of Brāhmanism. The symbols of both the deities tally exactly with what we notice in

1. ईशानं वृषपृष्ठं हस्तोदस्तकपालशूलभयदं पूर्वोत्तरस्यां दिशि नागैराभर-
णैरलङ्कृतं... देवपूजा ।

Cf. भास्वद्भूषामुजङ्गमुजगसितजटाकेतकार्धेन्दुचूलं

विभ्रद् शूलं कपालं सगणवरमिहार्चामि पूर्वोत्तरेक्षम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

2. ओं नमो ब्रह्मणे ऊर्ध्वलोकाधीश्वराय सर्वसुरप्रतिपन्नाय पितामहाय नाभि-
सम्भवाय चतुर्मुखाय हंसवाहनाय कमलसंस्थानाय पुस्तककमलहस्ताय ।

Ācāradīnakara (Rāmāghāṣa, MSS).

3. नागं श्यामवर्णं पद्मवाहनमुरगपाणिं चेति ।

Nirvāṇakalikā (MSS Agra).

their Brāhmaṇic originals. Brahmā, in one of his four hands, has been given a book, evidently the Vedas. It seems to be a most interesting inadvertance on the part of Jainas to admit this symbol of Brahmā, as against their avowed antipathy for the Brāhmaṇic Vedas.

CHAPTER V

THE NAVAGRAHAS

The Jains following the earlier Brāhmaṇic tradition reduced the Planetary system to a group of iconic representations, which constitute an important class of gods known as Jyotiṣka Devas. The features of these Gods in sculpture are mostly of the kind of their originals though, as in other cases, there are distinct characteristics by which we recognise them showing them as purely Jaina creations. From the ritualism attached to these gods we may well infer that individually and collectively their worship had much vogue among the Jains. It is likely, therefore, that images of the planets used to be constructed either separately or in a group like the panel of Brāhmaṇic art representing the Navagrahas. In the discoveries of Jaina scriptures, we have had very little instance of meeting with the separate figures of their nine planets. Nevertheless, it is necessary to deal with their descriptions in our book for we are not devoid of hope of finding out examples of Jaina Grahas as we have found their other images, all equally receiving the treatment in the Jaina iconographical literature. In this topic, it is noticeable that stress has been given to the supremacy of the planets over the different quarters (Dik) calling them "ruler of east" etc., and this seems to be a new feature in the Jaina iconology of the astronomical deities.

Sūrya

The sun-god has been described in Śvetāmbara Jainism as riding on a chariot, drawn by seven steeds and holding in his hands two lotuses. He is known there as the deity of the East and the husband of Ratnā Devī.¹ The Digambara description

1. श्रीसूर्याय सहस्रकिरणाय रत्नदेवीकान्ताय गङ्गाय यमुनाय नकार-
जगत्साक्षिणे कर्मसाक्षिणे । पूर्वदिगधीशाय कमलहस्ताय सप्तास्वर-
वाहनाय ।

Ācārādīnakara, Pūjāvidhi (Rāmaghāṭa MSS).

of the God is simpler.¹

Candra

Candra or the Moon-god of the Śvetāmbaras drives a chariot of ten white horses and holds an urn of nectar.² He is the master of the stars and rules over the north-western quarters. The Digambara description of the planet has no mention of his symbols.³

Maṅgala

Maṅgala or the Planet Mars, as described in the Śvetāmbara texts holds a shovel and stands upon the earth in one type and in another, he has four hands, holding Varada, Śakti (spear), trident and club. He is known as the son of the earth and the ruler of the South.⁴ The Digambara text gives the planet no more attribute than a spear.⁵

1. एवं तोष्टा तापसेष्टघा कमलकरहृदिहानेता ग्रहाणां
नैवेद्यैः सानुगाङ्गं धनशतपरमान्मोक्षसिर्गुडाद्यैः ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

2. चन्द्रश्चित्रे विधातव्यः श्वेतश्चेताम्बरावृतः ।
दशश्चेताश्वसंयुक्त आरुढः स्यन्दनं शुभम् ॥

Nirvāṇakalikā (MSS. Agra Library).

Cf. ग्रौं चं चं चं ··· नमश्चन्द्राय शम्भुशिल्लराय ··· तारागणाधीशाय बायव्य-
दिगधीशाय ··· सर्वजगत्पोषणाय श्वेतदशबाजिवाहनाय सुधा- कुम्भहस्ताय ।

Ācāradīnakara.

3. Vide Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra, p. 28

4. श्रीमङ्गलाय दक्षिणदिगधीशाय विद्रुमवर्णाय रक्ताम्बराय भूमिस्थिताय
कुङ्कुमहस्ताय ।

Ācāradīnakara (MSS, Rāmāghāṣa).

Cf. धरापुत्रस्य वक्ष्यामि लक्षणं चित्रकर्मणः । जतुर्भुजो मेघगामी दक्षिण-
बुधनगं हस्तवरदं परिकल्पयेत् । ऊर्ध्वशशितसमायुक्तं वामौ शूलगदाधरो ।
भौम ।

Nirvāṇakalikā (Agra MSS):

5. श्रूने बिम्बमिताकुयोजनशते श्लेशार्धमात्रं क्षिते-
र्बाह्यं द्विद्विसहस्रकेसरिमुलैर्भिक्षुप्रियः शूलभृत् ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

Budha

Two different types of description occur in the Śvetāmbara books for the image of Budha. According to one he should be represented as riding on a swan and holding a book in his hand.¹ The other type makes the figure riding a lion and having the attributes of a sword, shield, club and Varada.² Budha is known as the son of the Moon and the ruler of the north. The Digambara account informs us merely of a book for the planet.³

Bṛhaspati

In this case, too, the Śvetāmbara literature furnishes two different accounts. Conforming to the one, the image should bear a book and ride a swan, to the other, he should hold the attributes, in his four hands, of a rosary, staff, Kamaṇḍalu and Varada.⁴ He is the ruler of the north-eastern quarters. The Digambara Bṛhaspatīsits on a lotus and holds a book, Kamaṇḍalu and a rosary.⁵

1. प्रियङ्गुप्रख्याङ्गो गलदमलपीयूषनिकषस्फुरद्दारीत्राणि (?) कृतसकलशा-
स्त्रोपचयधीः ... शशिसुतः ... ओं नमः श्रीबुधाय ... उत्तरदिगधीशाय ...
कलहंसबाहनाय पुस्तकहस्ताय ।

(Ācārādinakara MSS. Rāmāghāṭa).

2. सिंहाख्यो बुधः पीतमाल्याम्बरधरः । वरदं सङ्गयुक्तञ्च खेटकेन समन्वितं
गदया च समायुक्तं । ...

Nirodākalikā (Agra).

3. विम्बं खं शशिनोऽष्टयोजनमतीत्योर्ध्वं व्रजद्भ्रूजवात् ।
क्रोशार्धप्रमितं कृजस्थितिरितो वर्णीष्टिमुत्पुस्तकम् ॥

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra.

4. शास्त्रप्रस्तारसारः श्रीगुरवे बृहस्पतये ईशानदिगधीशाय पीतवस्त्राय
पुस्तकहस्ताय हंसबाहनाय ।

Ācārādinakara.

Cf. पीतो देवगुल्लेख्यः शुभ्रश्च भृगुनन्दनः । चतुर्भिर्बाहुभिर्युक्तदिचक्रकर्म-विशारदैः ।

वरदः साक्षसूत्रैश्च कमण्डलुधरो तथा । दण्डिनो च तथा बाहू विभ्राणः
परिकल्पयेत् ।

Nirodākalikā.

5. तच्चाराद्रसयोजनैरुपरि या तद्विमानं मना-
गूनक्रोशमितः सपुस्तककमण्डलवत्सूत्रोऽज्जगः ।

Pratigṛhāsāroddhāra.

Sukra

He is described in the Śvetāmbara texts as having the vehicle of a snake and bearing the symbol of an urn. He is known as the teacher of the demons and ruler of the Southeast regions.¹ The Digambara canon makes him hold a three-fold thread, snake, noose and rosary.²

Sani

The Saturn-god has the Śvetāmbara figure, which canonically should ride a tortoise and bear the attribute of an axe.³ The attribute of the Digambara is only mentioned as a three-fold thread.⁴ According to the former view, the planet is the ruler of the west

Rāhu

Rāhu is represented by the Śvetāmbara as a rider of lion and bearer of an axe. He has the charge of the South-western quarters.⁵ The Digambara Rāhu seems to have the symbol of a flag.⁶

Ketu

Ketu, as imaged by the Śvetāmbara, is a snake deity. He rides on a cobra and bears the attribute of a cobra.⁷ He

1. श्रीशुक्राय वैत्याचार्याय आग्नेयदिगधीशाय स्फटिकोज्ज्वलाय श्वेतवस्त्राय कुम्भहस्ताय उरगवाहनाय. . .

Ācāradīnakara.

2. प्रेर्यं क्रोशततं विसूत्रफणभृत् पाशाक्षसूत्रैः स्फुरन् ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. ओं शनैश्चराय पश्चिमदिगधीशाय नीलदेहाय परशुहस्ताय कमठवाहनाय ।

Ācāradīnakara.

4. तद्वदगन्तुगतोर्ध्वपत्न्यपरमाणुष्कैस्त्रिसूत्रीयुतः ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

5. श्रीराहवे नैऋतदिगधीशाय परशुहस्ताय सिंहवाहनाय ।

Ācāradīnakara.

6. त्यक्तारिष्टदरोनयोजनततस्वव्योमपानध्वजम् ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

7. ओं नमः श्रीकेतवे बाहुप्रतिच्छन्दाय श्यामाङ्गाय . . . पन्नगवाहनाय पन्नग-हस्ताय ॥ has no direction to rule over. The Digambara description of the planet's attribute is unavailable.¹

x. Since I wrote out the above chapter I have been able to find out examples of Jaina Planets. See the pedestal of the Tirthankara image, No 52, Fyzabad Museum. Cf. Fig. B: 75, Mathura Museum also, Catalogue p. 81.

CHAPTER VI

ŚRUTA-DEVĪ AND VIDYĀDEVĪS

Of all the conceptions found in the Jain Iconography, none is so original as the conception of the Vidyādevīs or the Goddesses of learning. They are sixteen in number. In no other Indian religion are the goddesses of knowledge so numerous. Besides the sixteen Vidyādevīs, the Jains of both sects admit into their pantheon, one Śruta-devī or Sarasvatī approximating very closely the Brahmanical conception of the same goddess. She seems to be at the head of the collective body of the sixteen Vidyādevīs and her worship is prior to that of other subordinate deities. Her name as Śruta-devī meaning 'Goddess of Śruti' originally refers to the Vedas or revealed literature preserved through hearing. There is some hidden meaning behind this name. The description of Śruta-devī as afforded by the Jain books makes it on a par with Brahmāṇī's (wife of Brahmā) description.¹ And Brahmā is known to hold, the Vedas or the Ancient Scripture. The Jains, like the Brāhmaṇas, make a special ceremony of her worship on the Śukla Pañcamī day of the Kārttika month, which they call 'Jñāna Pañcamī'. On that special anniversary day of knowledge, the devout people fast, worship the books and instal them carefully dusted. The conceptions and imageries of the other sixteen goddesses of learning, if analysed disclose clear points of identity in respect of names, attributes, etc., with those of the Jain Yakṣiṇīs. This leads us to assume reasonably that the Vidyādevīs in conception were modelled after the Yakṣiṇīs. The reverse would have been assumed as well but is inadmissible on the ground of the priority of the Yakṣiṇīs as connected in mythology and ritual with the Tīrthaṅkaras in Jainism. The sixteen divinities under the name of the Vidyādevīs may be prima facie supposed to sway the sixteen

1. ओं ह्रीं नमो भगवति ब्रह्माणि वीणापुस्तकपाक्षसूत्रे हंसबाह्वे श्वेतवर्णे
इह पृथ्वीपूजने आगच्छ ।

Ācāradīnakara Pratīṣṭhāvidhī (MS.R.B.).

Cf. the description of Śrutadevī infra.

arts and sciences but the texts of Jainism give a different clue namely that through their worship the devotee gets knowledge, character, religion, effort and mental qualities of many kinds.¹ Really speaking, in point of fact, these qualities lie at the bottom of all education, whether literary, artistic or scientific.

Sarasvatī or Śruta-devī

The goddess, as viewed by the Śvetāmbaras rides a swan, has four hands bearing a lotus or Varada book and rosary.² The Digambara texts seem to give the vehicle of a peacock to Sarasvatī.³

A number of images of Śruta-devī have been compared by me. In all cases, the symbols of a book, lotus or a swan are to be noticed. But a strict observance with the canon has not been observed in any case.⁴

Śruta-devī, the main goddess of learning, seems to be identical with the consort of Brahmā, a Dikpāla, as described in this book.⁵ The attributes of a lute, book and rosary are common. The vehicle of swan is also characteristic of Brahmā. The substitute of peacock for swan, as made by the Digambara sect, agrees with the conception of Sarasvatī, who is also the river-goddess in Brāhmanism. The Jain literature, so extensive even as it exists at present, has been presided over by this goddess.

1. दुग्गज्ञानचारित्र्यपरेषु सूरिपुरस्सरेष्वप्यकृतादरो यः ।

Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

2. श्वेतवर्णा श्वेतवस्त्रधारिणी हंसवाहना श्वेतसिंहासनासीना चतुर्भुजा
श्वेताञ्जलीनालङ्कृतवामकरा पुस्तकमुक्ताक्षमालालङ्कृतदक्षिणकरा ।

Ācāroddinakara, Pratīṣṭhākalpa, p. 146.

(MS, Rāmāghāṭa Collection, Benares)

Cf. Niroddinakalīkā Ms. (Jñānamandira, Agra).

3. वाग्वादिनि भगवति सरस्वति ह्रीं नमः इत्यनेन मूलमन्त्रेण वेष्टयेत् ।
ओं ह्रीं मयूरवाहिन्यै नम इति वाग्धिदेवतां स्थापयेत् ।

Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

4. A two-handed image at the Lucknow Museum No. 8-9/507 is the earliest. Cf. A four-handed image from Pallu, Bikaner. Another at Deogarh Fort, Serial. No. 2262.
5. See "Indian Images", Part I, pp. 43, 44.

Rohiṇī, the Vidyādevī

The description of this goddess, as in other cases, varies, with the two sects. With the Śvetāmbara, she rides a cow and holds in her hands a conch, rosary, bow and arrow.¹ With the other sect, she appears bearing the attributes of an urn, conch, lotus and fruit.²

We shall gradually see that most of the names of the Vidyādevīs are in common with those of Yakṣiṇīs, specially of the Digambara sect. In this case, Rohiṇī is also the name of the consort of Mahāyakṣa, who attends upon Ajitanātha. From the text of the Śvetāmbaras, it appears that she specially presides over the art of music. The Digambaras believe that by her worship, the devotee attains right insight.

Prajñapti

In her Śvetāmbara aspect, she rides on a peacock and holds a lotus and a Śakti.³ According to one text of the same school, she holds varada, Śakti, citrus and Śakti again.⁴ The Digambara image should be represented as bearing a sword and a disc.⁵

Prajñapti is identical in name with the Digambara Yakṣiṇī of Sambhavanātha. Thus, we find she has borrowed the

1. शङ्खाक्षमाला सरबापशालिचतुष्करा कुन्दतुषारगौरा ।

गोगामिनी गीतचरप्रभावा श्रीरोहिणी सिद्धिमिमां ददातु ॥

Ācārādinakara.

Gf. Nirvāṇakalikā (MS Agra Library).

2. विशोध्य यः स्वेष्टमुणैः सरागां दुष्टिं विरागश्च परां प्रचक्रे ।

तं कुम्भशङ्खाब्जफलाम्बुजस्या श्रितार्घ्यंसे रोहिणी स्वमहत् त्वम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra (Rāmaghāṭa MS).

3. शक्तिसरोजहस्ता मयूरकृतयानलीलया कलिता ।

प्रज्ञप्तिविज्ञप्ति शृणोतु नः कमलपद्माभा ॥

Ācārādinakara (Rāmaghāṭa MS),

4. प्रज्ञप्ति श्वेतवर्णा मयूरवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदशक्तियुक्तदक्षिणकरां मातुलिङ्गा- शक्तियुक्तवामहस्ताम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā

5. दृशानचारित्रतपस्तु सूरिपुरस्सरेष्वप्यकृतादरो यः ।

तद्भक्तिकां त्वाश्रयगतिनितीनां प्रज्ञप्तिकेऽर्चामि सचक्रजङ्गाम् ॥ vehicle of peacock from Yakṣa Trimukha, Prajñāpti's husband. The peacock symbol with lotus should be Vidyādevī's characteristic. The name might have been derived either from Prajñāpti, meaning 'intellect' or Prajñā, meaning 'Sarasvatī'.

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

Vajra-Śṛṅghalā

Two forms of this goddess are known to the Śvetāmbara scripture. In one form she is seated on a lotus and carries a chain and club.¹ In another form, she is also seated on a lotus but has four hands adorned with varada mudrā, chain, lotus and chain again.² The Digambara text mentions only a chain for the deity.³

We meet with the goddess of the like name in connection with the Yakṣiṇī of Abhinandana. But, in no point, the two deities seem to agree with one another. The Śvetāmbara form, however, of the Yakṣiṇī has a lotus seat like Vajra Śṛṅghalā. According to the Digambara text used, she grants to her worshippers good boons and habits.

Vajrāmṛtā

She, too, has two forms according to Śvetāmbara texts. In one, she rides an elephant and bears as symbols a sword, vajra, shield and spear.⁴ In another, she is riding an elephant in varada-mudrā, Vajra, citrus and goad.⁵ The Digambaras represent

1. सशृङ्खलगदाहस्ता कनकप्रभविग्रहा ।

पद्मासनस्था श्रीवज्रशृङ्खला ॥

Ācāradīnakara.

2. वज्रशृङ्खलां शङ्खावदातां पद्मवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदशृङ्खलान्वितदक्षिणकरी
पद्मशृङ्खलाधिष्ठितवामकराम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā.

3. भ्रतानि शीलानि च जातु योजन्तवृत्त्यामनग्नौ बहिरीहया वा ।

तद्भङ्गिमास्थाय विशृङ्खलास्त्रा पीता च तूर्पित् परिशृङ्खलेऽस्मिन् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

4. निस्त्रिशवज्रफलकोत्तमकुन्तयुक्तहस्ता सुतप्तविलसत्कलघोतकान्तिः ।

उन्मत्तदन्तिगमना भुवनस्य विघ्नं वज्राङ्कुशी हरतु ॥

Ācāradīnakara.

5. Nirvāṇakalikā.

the deity as driving in an aerial car and holding in her hands a goad and a lute.¹

The Vidyādevī of the present description bears the same name as the Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī of Anantanātha. Some symbols of the Śvetāmbara form and others of the Digambara form, such as sword, spear and goad come to be equal to those of the Yakṣiṇī. The symbol of an elephant, the name Vajrāṅkuṣā meaning 'one adorned with vajra and goad' leads us to suppose some mysterious connection between this Vidyādevī and Indra. Her lute, as given by the Digambaras, is only a symbol of Sarasvatī.

Apraticakrā or Jambunadā

According to the Śvetāmbara books, she rides a Garuḍa and all her four hands are armed with discs.² She is called Jambunadā by the Digambaras, who represent her as riding a peacock and bearing a sword and a spear.³

Apraticakrā by name and symbols bears equality with the Yakṣiṇī of Rṣabhanātha. This Vidyādevī may have some innate relation to Vaiṣṇavī, the wife of Viṣṇu, as Jambunadā seems to have relation with Kaumārī, the wife of Kārttikeya. Peacock and spear are in this form the common characteristics.

Puruṣadattā

In Śvetāmbara literature, she is differently described. In one aspect, she holds a sword and shield,⁴ in another,⁵ she rides on a buffalo and carries in her four palms Varada, sword,

1. ज्ञानोपयोगं व्यदधादभीक्ष्णं यस्तं भजन्तं श्रितपुष्पयानाम् ।
वज्राङ्कुशे त्वां सृणिपाणिमुद्यद्वीणारसां मञ्जु यजेऽञ्जनाभाम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

2. गरुत्मत्पृष्ठ आसीना भूयाद् प्रतिचक्रान्तसिद्धये चक्रधारिणी । श्री
प्रप्रतिचक्रायै ... ।

Ācārādīnakara.

Cf. Niraṇṇakalīkā.

3. धर्मे रजद्रमफलेक्षणे च यो जन्मभीस्तस्य मखे शिखिस्था ।
जाम्बूनदाभा घृतखङ्गकुन्ता जाम्बूनदे स्वीकुरु यज्ञभागम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

4. Ācārādīnakara.

citrus and shield.¹ The Digambara text makes her ride a peacock and hold as symbols vajra and a lotus.²

We meet with the Yakṣiṇī of the same description as the wife of Tumburu, the attendant of Sumati. The buffalo vehicle indicates strongly the Vidyādevī's original relation with the wife of Yama, who characteristically moves on the back of the same animal.

Kālī

The Digambara image of this Vidyādevī should ride a deer and should be furnished in its hands with the symbols of a staff and sword.³ There are two Śvetāmbara forms to be marked. She is seated on a lotus and holds either in two hands a club and varada or in four hands rosary, club, vajra and Abhaya.⁴

She has similarity in name and certain symbols with the Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī of Abhinandana. The Digambara goddess, though having denominational similarity with the Yakṣiṇī of Supārśvanātha of the same sect seems to have been modelled after the type of the wife of Vāyu. This is strongly suggested by the common characteristic symbol of a deer as vehicle.

Mahākālī

The Śvetāmbaras have two descriptions for the goddess. According to one, she rides on a man and holds a rosary, fruit, bell and Varada mudrā.⁵ According to another, she equally rides

1. पुरुषदत्तां कनकावदातां महिषीवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदासियुक्तदक्षिणकरां मातुलिङ्गखेटकयुतवामहस्ताम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā.

2. कोकाशितां वज्रसरोजहस्तां यजे सितां पुरुषदत्तिके त्वाम् ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. यस्तन्नतार्चा भज कालि सूर्यप्रभा मृगस्या मुसलासिहस्ता । Ibid.

4. विकचकमलवाहना गदाभूतकुलशमलङ्कृता सदैव काली ।

Ācārādinakara.

Cf Nirvāṇakalikā for the description of the same

5. नरवाहना क्षणधरोपलोज्ज्वला रुचिराक्षसूत्रफलविस्फुरत्करा शुभषण्टिका पविरेष्यधारिणी . . . महाकाली ।

Ācārādinakara.

a man but holds a rosary, vajra, Abhaya mudrā and bell.¹

The Digambara form of Mahākālī is to be represented as standing on a corpse and bearing in her hands a bow, sword, fruit and weapon.²

Though the Yakṣiṇī of the like name, the Śvetāmbara one of Sumatinātha and Digambara one of Suvidhinātha, exists in Jain Iconography, the Vidyādevī named Mahākālī partakes more of the nature of Kālī of Brāhmaṇism than of the same Yakṣiṇī. The symbols of sword, bell, rosary, etc., are sufficiently tāntrik in character, the corpse at the feet of the goddess being a true mark of Kālī. The Digambara book states that the goddess grants religious trance (Samādhi) to her worshippers.

Gaurī

She of the Śvetāmbara type rides on an alligator (गोघा) and bears four hands equipped with Varada, club, rosary and water-lily.³ In Digambara form, too, Gaurī has an alligator as her vehicle and holds lotus as her symbol.⁴ There is also Gaurī, the Digambara Yakṣiṇī of Śreyāṃśanātha. Some of her symbols, such as lotus, Varada, are identical with those of this Vidyādevī. As an alligator is mythologically associated with a form of Brahmanī, Gaurī or Durgā, we have reason enough to infer that the goddess, model came after her. The alligator and some of the symbols such as water-lily and urn indicate her connection with the goddess Gaṅgā of Brāhmaṇism.⁵

1. महाकालीं देवीं पुरुषवाहनां चतुर्भुजामक्षसूत्रवचनितदक्षिणकराम् अभयघण्टा- लङ्कृतवामभुजाम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā.

2. चक्रैऽधिकां साधुषु यः समाधिं तं सेवमाना शरमाधिरूढा ।
श्यामा धनुःसङ्गफलाञ्ज्वहस्ता बलिं महाकालि जुपस्व शान्तये ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsūroddhāra.

3. गोघासनसमासीना कुन्दकपूरनिर्मला ।
4. गौरीं देवीं गोघावाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदमुसलयुतदक्षिणकरामक्षमालालङ्कृत-वामहस्ताम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā.

5. गोधागता हेमरुग्ज्वहस्ता गौरि प्रमोदस्व तदर्चनांशैः ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsūroddhāra.

Gāndhārī

The Śvetāmbara Gāndhārī is to be represented either as seated on a lotus and holding a staff and vajra or Varada, staff, Abhaya and Vajra.¹ Digambara goddess rides a tortoise and holds a disc and sword.²

We meet with the Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī of the like name, who belonged to Nami. Her swan vehicle gave her the character of Sarasvatī. The Yakṣiṇī Gāndhārī of the Digambaras rides a crocodile but the Vidyādevī Gāndhārī rides a tortoise. This latter point leads us to connect her with Yamunā, as the preceding Vidyādevī was suggested to be associated with Gaṅgā.

Mahājvālā or Jvālāmālīnī

The text called the Ācārādinakara of the Śvetāmbaras describes this goddess as riding a cat but mentions no attributes. The Nīrōḍṣakalikā another text of the same sect describes her as riding a boar and holding many weapons without description.³ Images of Digambara type should ride a buffalo and bear such weapons as a bow, shield, sword and disc.⁴ The Yakṣiṇī of similar name we find as attached to Candraprabha. The Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī has a cat as her vehicle like the present goddess and the Digambaras' also has the common vehicle of a buffalo. The underlying idea of the Jvālāmālīnī representation seems to have been derived from the consort of Yama, whose symbol is a buffalo. The cat symbol is also held by a Brāhmaṇical deity named Śaṣṭhī. It is, indeed, difficult to say which idea is older, the Jain or the Brāhmaṇic.

Mānavī

According to one text, she has blue colour and sits on a

1. शवपत्रस्थितचरणा मुसलं वज्रं च हस्तयोर्दधती ।

कमनीयाञ्जनकान्तिगन्धारी गां शुभां दद्यात् ॥

Ācārādinakara.

2. चक्रासिभृत्कूर्मगनीलमूर्ते गृहाण गान्धारि तदङ्घ्रिगन्धम् ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. महाज्वालां धवलवर्णां वराहवाहनामसंख्यप्रहरणयुतहस्ताम् ॥

Nīrōḍṣakalikā.

4. शुभां धनुःखेटकजङ्घचक्राद्युपाष्टबाहुं महिषाधिस्ताम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

blue lotus and a twig.¹ According to another of the same Śvetāmbara school, she sits on a lotus and is four-handed showing Varada,² rosary and a bough of a tree.³ The Digambara text also describes her as of blue colour and as riding a boar and bearing a trident. The Vidyādevī has a parallel in name to the Śvetāmbara Yakṣiṇī of Śreyāṃśanātha and in the Digambara Yakṣiṇī of Śīṭalanātha. The former parallel does not seem to be of form but of mere name. Śīṭalanātha's Yakṣiṇī as admitted by the Digambara school presents a similarity of name and vehicle. Stress has been laid on the Vidyādevī's colour being blue and in this connection, one is led to trace some faint relation between her and the Nīlasarasvatī of Brāhmaṇism. The boar symbol would connect the female deity with Vārāhī having the same vehicle.

Vairoṣṭi

The Śvetāmbara text represents the goddess as riding on a snake and carrying in her hands a sword, snake, shield and snake⁴. The Digambaras' Vidyādevī rides a lion and has a snake symbol⁵. The Yakṣiṇī of the identical name occurs in the Digambara Iconography and belongs to Vimalanātha. Her vehicle and symbol in both the instances consist of snakes. That there exists a sure cognateness between the conception of the Vidyādevī and the Yakṣiṇī is clearly indicated by a Digambara text which in an invocation calls the latter a Vidyādevī.⁶

1. नीलाङ्गी नीलसरोजवाहना वृक्षभासमानकरा मानवस्य सर्वस्य मङ्गलं मानवी दद्यात् ॥

Ācārādīnakara.

2. Nirvṇṇakalikā.

3. स्वं धिन्वतो मानवी केकिकण्ठनीला किटिस्था सभयप्रिणूला ।

Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

4. वैरोटीं श्यामवर्णामज्जरवाहनां चतुर्भुजां खङ्गोरगालङ्कृतदक्षिणकरां खेटकाहिमुत्तवामकराम् ।

Nirvṇṇakalikā.

5. त्वां सिंहामालप्रदर्पसर्पा यज्ञेऽस्य वैरोटि यजेऽन्ननीलाम् ॥

Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

6. वैरोटी हरिताच्यंते । ओं ह्रीं विद्यादेवि इदम् ॥

Pratīṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

Acyutā

She is called in the Śvetāmbara literature Acyutā and described as riding a horse and holding a bow, sword, shield and arrow¹. Acyutā as represented by the Digambaras equally rides a horse and holds the symbol of a sword².

Mānasī

Mānasī of Śvetāmbara conception has two types in iconography. According to one, she rides a swan and bears the attributes of Varada and *Vajra*³. According to another, she sits on a lion and has four hands carrying Varada mudrā, Vajra, rosary and again *Vajra*⁴. The Digambara Mānasī seats herself on a snake vehicle⁵.

Mānasī by name and by the symbol of swan, Vajra and lion seems to be based upon a mixture of ideas. The swan symbol is very apt and is in keeping with the traditional emblem of the goddess of learning. The Buddhist deity of learning called *Vāgīśvarī*⁶, who has a famous temple in Benares rides on a lion. Thus, there must be some undercurrent of interrelation in the symbolism. She rides a tiger. In this case, the Digambara Vidyādevī rides a snake. This appears to be due to the fact of Mānasī and Manasā having the same literal sense.

1. सव्यपाणि-धृतकर्मुकवराऽन्यस्फुरद्विशिखसङ्गधारिणी । विद्युद्दामतनुरस्व-वाहनाऽच्युतिका भगवती ।

Ācārādinakara.

2. धौतासिहस्तां ह्यगेऽच्युते त्वां हेमप्रभां त्वां प्रणतां प्रणौमि ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

3. हंसासनासीना वरदेन्द्रायुधान्विता । मानसी मानसीं पीडां हन्तुं जाम्बुनद-च्छविः ।

Ācārādinakara.

4. मानसीं धवलवर्णां सिंहवाहनां चतुर्भुजां वरदवज्रालङ्कृतदक्षिणकरा-
मक्षवलयाशनियुक्तवामकराम् ।

Nirāṇkalikā.

रक्ताहिना तत्प्रगतप्रणाममुद्रान्विता मानसि ।

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra.

5. वागीश्वरी=सरस्वती ।

Trikoṣaṣṭya.

Mahāmānāsī

The Śvetāmbaras describe the sixteenth Vidyādevī as riding on a lion and bearing, in her four hands, varada, sword, kamaṇḍalu and lance¹. The Digambara representation of the goddess sits on a swan and holds a rosary, Varadamudrā, goad and garland².

Again, the conception of this Vidyādevī is presumably based upon that of Vāgīśvarī. The sword symbol specially corresponding to the Digambara Yakṣiṇī of like name is Nirvāṇī of Jina Śāntinātha. As noticed before, her symbols of book, kamaṇḍalu and lotus befit more a Vidyādevī than a Yakṣiṇī. The Digambara conception of Mahāmānāsī either as a Yakṣiṇī or Vidyādevī has symbols such as, peacock, swan, rosary, which fit in with the characteristics of the goddess of learning.

1. महामानसीं घवलवर्णां सिंहवाहनाम् । चतुर्भुजां वरदासिमुक्तदक्षिणकरां
कुण्डिकाफालकयुतवामहस्ताम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā.

२. रक्ता महाहंसगताक्षसूत्रवराङ्कुसुमसहिताय ज्ञेयाय स्वाहा ॥

Pratigṛhāṣṭroddhāra.

CHAPTER VII

MISCELLANEOUS JAINA DIVINITIES

Under this head, we propose to treat of certain other deities of Jainism, who do not prove to be constituent of a distinct class of importance but still figure promiscuously in Jaina temples and rock sculpture. The models of their representations except in the case of Naigameṣa or Nameso, and Śāntidevī must have been originally Brāhmanic, though, of course, as they are in Jainism, much modified and made renascent. It is very interesting as we shall notice in this topic, that Jainism with its absolute doctrine of Ahiṃsā or non-killing should have, alongside with the later Buddhism adopted even minor goddesses of Tāntricism. Nor should it be less interesting to observe that exactly like the Brāhmanic custom of giving a prior worship to Gaṇeśa and Lakṣmī, the Jainas, including their merchant class, attach a high importance to the veneration of these deities.

Harinegameṣī or Naigameṣa

He is represented in Jaina religious art, as a male figure, either with the head of a ram or antelope or a goat. We have the noteworthy example of the god's icon in the Jaina antiquities of Mathurā¹. In this, Naigameṣa is represented as bearing a goat's head.

The god with his variant names is mentioned in the Kalpa-sūtra, Nemināthacarita and Antagaḍadasāo. He is primarily the captain of the foot forces of Indra, at whose command, he transferred the embryo of Mahāvīra from the body of the Brāhmaṇī Devanandā to the womb of Kṣatriyāṇī Trisālā. Hence, he acquired the power of granting the boon of child-birth. Thus, we find him, in later literature, connected with the procreation of children.¹ He is known to have two aspects, one beneficent another malevolent.

1. The Jaina Stupa and other antiquities of Mathura by V.A. Smith, Pl. XVIII (obverse and reverse) "The Obverse shows five figures. The principal figure is a goat-headed deity seated in an easy attitude. The deity is labelled Bhagaṇ Nemeso, dating from about the beginning of the Christian era or earlier. To the right are three standing females, and a male infant stands by the left knee of the deity.

The conception of the god does not seem to us to be wholly original as Prof. Keith has supposed.² The three ideas connected with the deity, namely, the deer-face, goat-face and power of procreation, we conjecture were derived from the mythology of Dakṣa Prajāpati. As Prajāpati, he is fundamentally associated with work of creation and procreation. The Brāhmaṇic mythology refers to the incident in which Śiva at the self-immolation of his wife, Sati, being enraged, pursued Dakṣa, who assumed the form of a deer and at last decapitated him. But Śiva is said to have afterwards restored him to life. According to another account, a demon came out from a torn hair of Śiva in rage, who beheaded Dakṣa and put a goat's head on his neck.

Kṣetrapāla

In the Śvetāmbara books, we meet with two descriptions of this god. From one, we gather he has twenty hands with many weapons, matted hair, a snake as his holy thread and rides a dog. He is surrounded by Ānanda and other Bhairavas and leads the sixty-four Yoginīs.³ The other description makes him six-handed, the attributes being a club, noose, Damaru, bow, goad and Geḍika?⁴

Images of this divinity have been discovered in many places but lie unidentified. The figures that I have studied,

1. "Now Sulasā was from childhood a worshipper of the god Harinegameṣi. She caused to be made an image of Harinegameṣi and every morning she bathed. So in compassion for the lady Sulasā, the god Harinegameṣi made both her and thee to become pregnant at the same time." The Antagoḍa-Desāo (Oriental Translation Fund), pp. 36, 37.
2. Indian Mythology (Mythology of all races series) by A.B. Keith.

Mythology of the Jains.

3. श्रीक्षेत्रपालाय · विंशतिभुजदण्डाय बर्बरकेशाय जटाजूटमण्डिताय वामुक्ती-
कृतजिनोपवीताय · प्रेतासनाय कुक्कुरवाहनाय त्रिलोचनाय आनन्द-
भैरवाद्यष्टभैरवपरिवृताय अतुषष्टियोगिनीमध्यगताय ।

Ācārādinakara.

4. क्षेत्रपालं बर्बरकेशं षट्भुजं मुद्गरपाशदमस्कान्वितदक्षिणपाणिं चापाङ्कुश-
गेढिकायुक्तवामपाणिम्. . . .

Nirvāṇakalikā.

agree with the description in its most essential features.¹

Kṣetrapāla is a Bhairava and seems to be the master of the Yoginīs. As the name suggests, he is the deity whose function is to protect the field. Hence, probably, he has the dog, who might watch the field and help his master by guarding it against any aggressor. The Bhairavas of Brāhmaṇism, such as the Kālabhairava and Vāṭukabhairava are always associated with a dog. In fact, the relation of Kṣetrapāla with Vāṭukabhairava has been clearly mentioned of in the Jaina texts.²

Gaṇeśa

His hands vary from two, four, six, nine, eighteen to one hundred and eight. According to the description of the Ācāradinakara, Gaṇapati should be pot-bellied and should hold, in his hands, an axe, Varada, Modaka (Sweet-meat ball), and Abhaya. His vehicle is a mouse.³

The form of Gaṇapati with four hands seems to be standard. The symbols of axe, Modaka and mouse are exactly the same with those of the Brāhmaṇic Gaṇeśa. Hence, we may reasonably conclude that the icon of this god is the result of one of the many assimilations which Jainism made from Brāhmaṇism.

1. A fig. from Gandhāwal Gwalior no. 1974/211 rides a dog and has four hands. It seems to be a Digambara image. Another fig. may be seen on the right wall in a group of rock-cut sculptures on the left of the road, inside the Gwalior Fort. It has also four hands with the canonical symbols.

2. क्षेत्रपालप्रतिष्ठायां बटुकनाथहनुमन्नारसिंहादिपुरपूजितदेशपूजितप्रतिष्ठा ।

Ācāradinakara.

Gr. भोः क्षेत्रपाल तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्र महाकाय भैरवाय नमस्तुभ्यम् ।

Pratiṣṭhākalpa.

3. गणपतिप्रतिष्ठाविधिः । स चायं द्विभुज-चतुर्भुज-पद्भुज-नवभुजाष्ट-दशभुजाष्टोत्तरशतभुजरूपा गुरुपदेशविशेषेण बहुविधा भवन्ति । . . . जय लम्बोदर परशुवरदयुक्तापसव्यहस्तयुग । सव्यकरमोदकाभयघर यावकवर्णपीतलासिक मूषिकवाहन पीवरजङ्घामुजवस्तिलम्बिगुरुजठर । वारजमुखैकरद । वरदसौम्य । जयदेव गणनाथ ।

Vardhamānasūri's Ācāradinakara pratiṣṭhāvidhi.

Śrī or Lakṣmī

Śrī or goddess of wealth has been described in a Digambara MS. as a four-handed figure holding a flower and lotus.¹ The same goddess in a Śvetāmbara MS. is represented as riding on an elephant and holding, as symbol, lotuses.²

The worship of Lakṣmī has a great hold upon the orthodox Jains of both communities. The special day on which honour is done to the goddess of wealth is called Dhanaterasa. On the same occasion, the Śvetāmbara women polish their jewellery and ornaments in honour of Lakṣmī. The description of Jaina Lakṣmī, given above, does not far differ from that of the Brāhmaṇic Śrī or Kamalā. Only in one point, it appears, namely in the riding on an elephant, the Jaina image presents an originality. It must be noted here that the conception of Lakṣmī even in Jainism is very old as the goddess is mentioned in the Kalpasūtra as one of the objects of Trifalā's dream.

Sāntidevi

She may be found described in Śvetāmbara accounts as a goddess seated in a lotus and bearing in her four hands Varada, rosary, Kamaṇḍalu and a pitcher.³

The idea of this female deity seems to be quite new to us. No deity of Brāhmaṇism or Buddhism affords even a nearer parallel to this. She is believed by the Jains to have the function of improving the origination of the four-fold Jaina church.⁴

1. ओं ह्रीं सुवर्णवर्णे चतुर्भुजे पुष्पकमलमुखहस्ते श्रीदेवि अत्रागच्छ ।

Mandira-pratiṣṭhāvidhāna.

(MSS. No. 6/2 Jaina S. Library, Arrah)

2. महात्म्यै नमः । पतिवस्त्रां सुवर्णाङ्गीं पद्महस्तां गजाङ्कितां . . क्षीरोदतनयां
देवीं कामधार्त्रीं हरिप्रियां . . गजासुतां नमाम्यहम् ।

(A MSS. from Rāmaghāṭa Library).

3. शान्तिदेवतां धवलवर्णां कमलासनां चतुर्भुजां वरदाक्षसूत्रमुक्तदक्षिणकरां
कुण्डिकाकमण्डल्वन्वितवामकराम् ।

Nirvāṇakalikā.

4. श्रीचतुर्विधसङ्घस्य शासनोन्नतिकारिणी ।

शिवशान्तिकरी भूयात् श्रीमती शान्तिदेवता ॥

Pratiṣṭhākalpa.

In several Jaina MSS., I have noticed the names of the Yoginīs and their number is mentioned to be six-four. Some of the names may be mentioned here : Mahāyoginī, Siddhayoginī, Yugeśvarī, Pretākṣī, Dākinī, Kālī, Kālarātrī, Nisācarī, Klīṅkārī, Baṭṭālī, Bhūtaḍāmārī, Kumārikā, Caṇḍikā, Vārāhī, Kaṅkālī, Bhuvaneśvarī, Kuṇḍalī, Lakṣmī, Karālī, Visatī, and so on.¹ Another MS. gives a list of names with some alterations. They are Divyayogī, Mahāyogī, Siddhiyogī, Gaṇeśvarī, Pretākṣī, Dākinī, Kālī, Kālarātrī, Nisācarī, Hrīṅkārī, Siddhī, Vaitālā, Klīṅkārī, Bhūtaḍāmārī, Urdhvakesī, Mahākālī, Śuṣkāṅgī, Narabhojinī, Phūtkārī, Virabhadraśī, Dhūmrākṣī, Kalahapriyā, Rājasī, Ghoraraktākṣī, Virūpākṣī, Bhayaṅkarī, Bairī, Kaumārikī, Caṇḍī, Kaṅkālī, Bhuvaneśvarī Kuṇḍalā, Jālakī (?) Lakṣmī, Yamadūtī, Karatāpanī, Kośakī-bhakṣaṇī, Yakṣa Kaumārī, Yantra-vāhinī, Viśālā, Kāmakī, Yakṣiṇī, Pretabhakṣiṇī, Dhūrjaṭī, Kiṅkarī, Kapālā, Viśaṁśulī.² The list, though long and sometimes obscure, does not exhaust the number of sixty-four. Some of the names are in common with the Brāhmaṇic names of Yoginīs but majority of them are quite original to Jainism. How the cult of the Tāntrik Yoginīs originated among the vegetarian Jains is unknown. The Yoginīs are known as attendants on Śiva or Pārvatī. But in the case of Jainism, we may suppose, as seen before that they are subordinates to Kṣetrapāla, the chief of the Bhairavas.

1. चतुष्पष्टियोगिनीनामानि

(MSS. from the Rāmaghāṭa Jain Library)

2. चतुष्पष्टियोगिनी ।

(MSS. No. 306, Harṣa Vijaya Collection, Jain Mandir, Baroda).

CHAPTER VIII

THE ĀSANAS AND MUDRĀS

Among all great religions of India, certain symbolic positions of hands and legs form prominent parts of poses in spiritual contemplation. They are believed to be aids to mental concentration. The Haṭha Yoga or the primary culture of the body combined with will-force has as its subject these Mudrās and Āsanas in a general sense. It is well-known that the Indian Yogis practise the various Āsanas to gain some control of the body, proceeding as they do, towards the Rāja Yoga or Higher mental culture. The Jaina Tirthaṅkaras were also essentially Yogis on one hand and teachers of religion on the other. Hence, the explanation of the Yogic Āsanas and Mudrās, as found in the sculptures of the Jainas, their followers and attendants. In this respect, however, the Jaina Iconography presents some novel features. For some of the Āsanas, for example, the Kāyotsarga, are distinctly of Jaina origin.

Five kinds of Āsanas may be differentiated. These are the Paryāṅka, Ardhāparyāṅka, Vajra, Khaḍgāsana and Vīra.¹ They are also known as Mokṣāsana or the postures assumed by a Jina at the time of the salvation or on the way to attaining it. There is, further, another Āsana called the Bandhurāsana, which has been defined as the easy posture, the assumption of which makes the mind motionless.² Now, let us describe the Āsanas individually.

Paryāṅkāsana or Samparyāṅkāsana

Glossed as Padmāsana, which, in the Jaina Yogic texts, is

1. Vide the text

पर्यङ्कमर्षपर्यङ्कं वज्रं वीरासनं तथा ।
सुखारविन्दपूर्वं च कायोत्सर्गश्च सम्मतः ॥

Jñānārṇava (Nirṇayaśāgara Press), p. 278

2. येन येन सुखासीना विदध्यानिश्चलं मनः ।

तत्र देव विधेयं स्थान्मुनिभिर्बन्धुरासनम् ॥

Ibid., p. 278.

described as a posture in which the Jaina or any devotee squats on a seat with legs folded, the right leg being on the left thigh and the left leg on the right thigh, while the eyes are fixed upon the tip of the nose. The position of the arms varies.¹

There is a religious prescription to the effect that the image of Mahāvira, Ṛṣabhanātha and Neminātha should be constructed in this posture or Āsana.² The extant sculptures of the Tirthaṅkaras mentioned do not always support the injunction.³

Ardhaparyāṅkāsana

While the Paryāṅkāsana is sitting on the hams, the Ardhaparyāṅkāsana is half sitting on hams. In the latter posture, one leg hangs angularly, the other remains folded. The same Āsana is also called Paryāṅkāsana māna, which has been defined as the position in which the Yogī lessens the weight of his body by one-third.⁴ This posture is not common to the images of the Jinās. We get, however, instances of this in the case of the Yakṣas and Yakṣiṇīs. The figures of Cakreśvarī from Gandhawal in Gwalior State and Nirvāṇī Yakṣiṇī explored by me are represented in this posture.

Khaḍgāsana

The standing posture with feet at a distance of about two inches from each other, the hands resting naturally by the sides,

1. Cf. The Antagaḍa-Darśa (Oriental Translation Fund) p. 59, footnote.
2. For an illustration of this posture refer to the image of Ṛṣabhanātha, from Maheth, Distt. Gonda.
3. The injunction runs like this—

वीर, ऋषभः, नेमिः, एतेषां जिनानां पर्यङ्कासनम् । शेषजिनानामुत्सर्ग आसनम् ।

Sattvaśāroddhāra, 151 dvāra

4. पर्यङ्कासनमानन्तु स्वदेहमानासृतीयभागोनं यदा करोति तदा पर्यङ्कासनमानं
भवतीति । Ibid.

Cf. उर्ध्वतस्तस्य मानार्थमुत्सेधं परिकल्पयेत् ।

पर्यङ्कमपि तावन्तं तिर्यगायामसंस्थितम् ॥

Pratiṣṭhāsāroddhāra (MSS Jaina S. Library—Arrah).

but not so as to touch the body.¹ All the standing Jina figures are represented in this posture.² It is, however, enjoined that the figures of Ajitanātha, Sambhavanātha and Abhinandana should be especially sculptured in the Khaḍgāsana.

Mudrās

Whereas Āsanās refer to particular mystic positions of legs, the Mudrās relate to positions of hands as well as feet. In the Jaina pantheon, the Tīrthaṅkaras have not many Mudrās in their representations but their attendants, viz., the Yakṣa and Yakṣiṇīs assume different Mudrās in their hands analogous to those, generally met with in the Hindu and Buddhist images. We find mentioned in the Jaina literature quite a number of Mudrās with their descriptions, some of which it is not possible to trace in the actual sculptures. Consequently, we would describe below those which we find in actual sculptures and also those which though not seen already are very likely to be found in figures of future discovery.

Jina-Mudrā

The position, so called, when the ascetic stands in Kāyotsarga keeping the feet at four fingers breadth between the toes and lesser width between the heels.³ Kāyotsarga literally means 'letting loose the body'.

1. पर्यङ्कमपि तावत्तु तिर्यगायामसंस्थितम् ।
बाहुयुग्मान्तरं देशे हासयेच्चतुरङ्गुलम् ॥
प्रकोष्ठात्कुर्पूरं यावद् द्व्यङ्गुलं वर्धयेत्सदा ।
कायोत्सर्गस्थितस्यैतल्लक्षणं भाषितं बुधैः ॥

Vasunandi's Vāstusāra & Pratiṣṭhāsamgraha
(MSS. 68 Jñānamandir, Baroda)

2. See for illustration, the fig. 9. Candraprabha, Devagarh Fort.
3. चत्वारि अंगुलाहं पुराणो ङुणाहजत्य पच्छिमग्नौ ।
पायाजं उस्सग्गो एसा पुण होइ जिणमुद्दा ॥

Pañca, 3 Vivā.

cf. चतुरङ्गुलमग्रतः पादयोस्ततरं किञ्चिन्न्यूनं च पृष्ठतः कृत्वा समकायोत्सर्गेण जिनमुद्रा ।

Ācārādinakara.

Yoga-Mudrā

The position of sitting in which the palms of the hands in the form of lotus-buds [should be laid upon one another beside the belly.¹

Vīra Mudrā

Same as Varada-Mudrā—('giving a boon'). The posture, in which one sits at ease and keeps one's hands opening outwards.² Many of the figures of the Yakṣiṇīs and Vidyādevīs already described bear this Mudrā.

1. अणोन्तरि अंगुलिको साकारेहि दोहि हृत्पेहि ।
पिठोवरि कोणरयं द्विपेहि तह जोगमुछति ॥

Pañca, Viva.

2. सुज्ञासनस्यस्य वरदाकारी हस्तो वीरमुद्रा सर्वरक्षाकरी ।

Ādīśādinakara.

APPENDIX A

NOTES ON JAINA SYMBOLS AND TECHNICAL TERMS

Aṣṭamāṅgalika—	to wit, a Svastika , Śrīvatsa , Nandyāvarta , Vardhamānaka , state-seat, pitcher, fish and a mirror.
Āyāgapāṭa	or tablet of homage. It is an ornamental slab bearing the representation of a Jina or of some other object of worship and the term may be appropriately rendered by 'tablet of homage or of worship'. Since such slabs were put up in temples as the numerous inscriptions on them say 'for the worship of the Arhats'.
Āvaśyakas	are singing hymns to the 24 Jinas Śiavana , Vandanā , Pratikramana , Kāyotsarga .
Dharmacakra	(wheel of law)—It seems to have been borrowed from Buddhism to indicate the preaching of the Dharma in connection with the Tīrthaṅkaras.
Dundubhi	The Heavenly Dundubhis consist of five musical instruments. These are the Pañca-mahāśabda viz. (1) Śringa , the horn. (2) Tammata , the drum. (3) Śaṅkha , the conch-shell. (4) Bherī , the trumpet. (5) Jaya-ghāta , the cymbal. (Cf. Prof. Bhandarkar's "Jaina Iconography" Ind. Ant., 1911, June.)
Hāra	is a combination of 18 strings of jewels (The Antagaḍa-Ḍasāo and Aguttarovavāīya-Ḍasāo Oriental Translation Fund, p. 21).
Nandyāvarta	It is defined as a Svastika with nine corners. It is a peculiar geometrical pattern. (See Colebrooke's Mis. Essays , Ed. by Cowell Vol. II p. 190). ¹

1. A sort of building in the form of a quadrangle without a western gate—Apte's dictionary.

- Palamva 'Pendant jewels'. Some commentators explain it as 'long' applied to silks.
- Sāmāyika-Pāṭha The hymns which the Jainas recite in the beginning of their meditation.
- Samavasaraṇa It is believed that the Tīrthaṅkaras rise upto 5000 man's height and Indra constructs the famous Samavasaraṇa consisting of 12 Sabhās.
(Cf. Prof. Bhandarkar's note on the subject, Ind. Ant. 1911 June).
- Śrīvatsa a diagram resembling a flower of four petals arranged at right angles one to another or a curl of hair.
- Svastika 'A mystical cross which is believed to bring good fortune to the wearer thereof and which resembles a Greek cross with ends turned in at right angles. This symbol is probably very ancient, as it was one of the chief marks on the feet of Buddha. Prof. Burnouf (see Schliemann's Troy p. 103) holds that it is intended to denote the invention of the fire drill. The Svastika has been observed on greek pottery of antiquity, on innumerable ornaments in the catacombs of Rome, on ancient personal ornaments in Scandinavia, on ancient urns and weapons in Britain, in devices in Japan and Britain, on coffins in China and on Church bells in England'¹.

1. Anderson, catalogue Part II, p. 197, for an interesting article of this subject, see Ind. Ant. Vol. VII, p. 176, also Thomas, Ind. Ant. Vol. IX p. 65, Beal Ibid., p. 67.

APPENDIX B

- 5 Ševidu=1 Ālāku
- 2 Ālāku=1 Ulakku
- 2 Ulāku=1 Uri
- 2 Uri=1 Nāli or Paḍi
- 8 Nāli or Padi=1 Kuṛuṇi or Marakkāl
- 2 Kuṛuṇi=1 Padakku
- 2 Padakku=1 Tūṇi
- 3 Tūṇi=1 Kalam
=3 Maunds

SII., II, p. 48, note 5.

- 1 Veli=6½ Acres.

Ancient India (Iyengar), pp. 182-3.

BIBLIOGRAPHY*

- Ācārya Jinasena Ādi Purāṇa, tr. Pt. Panna Lal, Delhi, 1968.
 Harivaṃśa Purāṇa, ed. B. Ch. Chhabra and S. S. Narayan, Delhi, 1968.
- Agrawala, R.C. A Unique Image of Jīvantasyāmī from Rajasthan, Brahma Vidya, Adyar, XXII, 1 & 2, pp. 32-34.
 A Unique Sculpture of Jaina Goddess Saccikā, Artibus Asiae, Ascona, XVIII, 3-4, pp. 232-34; JBBRAS, XXIX, 2, pp. 63-66; Jaina Siddhānta Bhāskara, Arrah, XXI, 1, pp. 1-5.
 Some Early Jaina Icons from Jodhpur Division, JA, XX, 2, pp. 15-17.
 Some Interesting Sculptures of Jaina Goddess Ambikā from Marwar, IHQ, XXXII, 4, pp. 434-38.
- Agrawala, V. S. A Jaina Cloth Painting or Citrapaṭa of Taraṇa Prabhā Sūri, JUPHS, XXII, pp. 214-15.

*ABBREVIATIONS IN BIBLIOGRAPHY

- ASIAR*=Archaeological Survey of India, Annual Report.
BPWM=Bulletin of the Prince of Wales Museum, Bombay.
BMA=Bulletin of Museums and Archaeology in U.P., Lucknow.
EI=Epigraphia Indica.
IA=Indian Antiquary.
IHQ=Indian Historical Quarterly, Calcutta.
JA=Jaina Antiquary, Arrah.
JBBRAS=Journal of the Bombay Branch of Royal Asiatic Society, Bombay.
JBR=Journal of the Bihar Research Society, Patna.
JBORS=Journal of the Bihar and Orissa Research Society, Patna.
JIM=Journal of Indian Museums, Bombay.
JISOA=Journal of the Indian Society of Oriental Art, Calcutta.
JJ=Jaina Journal, Calcutta.
JOI=Journal of the Oriental Institute, Baroda.
JUPHS=Journal of the U.P. Historical Society, Lucknow.
OA=Oriental Art, London.

- A New Stone Umbrella from Mathura, JUPHS, XXIII.
 Catalogue of the Mathura Museum, JUPHS, XXIII.
Indian Art, Varanasi, 1965.
- Jaina Art of Mathura, Babu Chhotay Lal Jain Smriti Grantha, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 87-92.
- Jaina Vidyā, Śrī Mahāvīra Smriti Grantha, 1948-49.
- Mathurā Āyāgapaṭṭas, JUPHS, XVI, 1.
- Mathurā Kī Jaina Kalā, Mahāvīra Jayanti Smārikā, Jaipur, April, 1962.
- Studies in Indian Art*, Varanasi, 1965.
- The nativity scene of a Jaina relief from Mathura, JA, X.
- Kālī Talāi Kī Jaina Mūrtiyān (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, February, 1968.
- Patīyān Dāi—Eka Gupta-Kālīna Jaina Mandira (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XIX, 6, pp. 340-46.
- Āśādhara, Pratiṣṭhāsūroddhāra, ed. Pt. Manohar Sastri, Bombay, V. S. 1974.
- Ashton, Sir A. (ed.) The Art of India and Pakistan (Commemorative catalogue of the Royal Academy Exhibition, 1947-48), London, 1950.
- Atri, C. M. A collection of Some Jaina Stone Images from Mount Girnar, Bulletin of the Museum & Picture Gallery, Baroda, XX, pp. 51-59.
- Bajpai, K.D. A New Inscribed Image of a Yakṣa, India Antiqua, Leiden, 1947.
- Deogarh Kī Jaina Pratimāyen (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, April, 1962.
- Evolution of Jaina Art in Madhya Pradesh, Bulletin of the Deptt. of Ancient Indian History & Archaeology, University of Saugar, Saugar, No. 3, pp. 75-79.

- Epigraphical Evidences bearing on the Śvetāmbara and Digambara Divisions, JA, 1946.
- Jaina Image of Sarasvatī in the Lucknow Museum, JA, XI, II, pp. 4ff.
- Madhya Pradesh Ki Prāchīna Jaina Kalā (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, August, 1964.
- Supārśvanātha in Indian Archaeology, Voice of Ahimsā, Etah, 1963.
- New Jaina Images in the Mathura Museum, JA, July, 1948.
- New Reading of the inscription on Jina Image J. 20 in the Lucknow Museum, JUPHS, 1958.
- New Jaina Mathura Finds, JUPHS, XIX.
- Banerji, Adris A Jaina Cameo at Cittorgarh, Babu Chhotey Lal Jain Smriti Grantha, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 71-76.
- Jaina Antiquities in Rajgir, IHQ, XXV, 3, pp. 205-10.
- Two Jaina Images, JBRs, XXVIII, 1, p. 43.
- Banerjia, J. N. The Development of Hindu Iconography, Calcutta, 1956.
- Banerjee, P. A Note on the Worship of Images in Jainism, c. 200 B.C. to A.D. 200, JBRs, XXXVI, I-II, pp. 57ff.
- Early History of Jainism, Indo-Asian Culture, New Delhi, January, 1970, pp. 5-23.
- Early Indian Religions*, New Delhi, 1973.
- Barrett, D. E. A Jaina Bronze from the Deccan, OA (N. S.), V, 4, pp. 162-65.
- Bhandarkar, D. R. Caumukha Temple at Ranakpur, ASIAR, 1907-08.
- Jaina Iconography, ASIAR, 1905-06.
- Jaina Iconography, IA, XL.

- Bhattacharyya, A. K. An Introduction to the Iconography of Jaina Goddess Padmāvati, Muni Jina Vijaya Abhinandana Grantha, Jaipur, 1971, pp. 219-29; Babu Chhotey Lal Jain Smriti Grantha, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 77-86. Iconography of Some Minor Deities in Jainism, IHQ, XXXIX, 4, pp. 332-39. Lord Ariṣṭanemi, Delhi, 1929.
- Bhattacharyya, H. S. Brahmā Cult and Jainism, JBRs, XLII, I, pp. 82 ff.
- Bhattacharyya, Tara-pada. Samarāṅgaṇa-Sūtradhāra, Lucknow, 1965.
- Bhoja. The Image of Heaven in the Ceiling of the Ādinātha Temple at Ranakpur, Babu Chhotey Lal Jain Smriti Grantha, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 93-98.
- Bonn, K. F. Indian Sculpture—A Travelling Exhibition, London, 1971.
- Booth, Mark H. Indian Architecture, I, Bombay, 1956.
- Brown, Percy. Manuscript Illustrations of the Uttarādhyaṇa Sūtra, New Haven, 1941.
- Brown, W. N. Stylistic Varieties of Early Western Paintings about 1400 A.D., JISOA, V, pp. 2-12. The Jaina temple room in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, JISOA, XVII, pp. 6-21. The Story of Kālaka, Washington, 1933. The Svastika—A Pamphlet, Emerson Books, Inc. 1933.
- Bruhn, Klaus. The Figures of the two lower reliefs on the Pārśvanātha Temple at Khajuraho, Ācārya Vijaya Vallabha Sūri Smāraka Grantha, Bombay, 1956 (English Section), pp. 7ff. The Jaina Images of Deogarh, Leiden, 1969.
- Bühler, G. Specimens of Jaina Sculptures from Mathura, EI, II.
- Burgess, J. Digambara Jaina Iconography, IA,

- XXXII, pp. 459ff; ibid., XXXIII, pp. 330 ff.
 The Origin and Decline of Buddhism and Jainism in South India, IA, XL, pp. 209 ff.
- Chakravarti, S. N. Note on an Inscribed Jaina Image, BPWM, No. 3, pp. 40-42.
- Chanda, R.P. Jaina Remains at Rajgir, ASIAR, 1925-26.
 Note on Pre-Historic Antiquities from Mohenjo-daro, Modern Review, Calcutta, 1924.
 Svetāmbara and Digambara Images, ASIAR, 1925-26, pp. 186 ff.
- Chandra, Pramod, A Unique Kālakācūrya MS. in the Style of the Mandu Kalpasūtra, Bulletin of the American Academy of Benaras, Varanasi, I, pp. 1-10.
Stone Sculptures in the Allahabad Museum, Bombay, 1971.
- Chaudhary, G. C. Political History of Northern India from Jaina Sources (c. 650 A.D. to 1300 A.D.), Amritsar, 1963.
- Coomaraswamy, A.K. Catalogue of Jaina Paintings and Manuscripts, Boston, 1924.
Catalogue of Indian collections in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Boston, 1923.
History of Indian & Indonesian Art, London, 1927.
 Life of Mahāvīra, JJ, I, 4, pp. 142-48.
 Notes on Jaina Art, Journal of Indian Art, London, 1914, Vol. XVI.
 "The Conqueror's life" in Jaina painting: explicitur reductio Haec Artis ad Theologiam, JISOA, III, pp. 127-44.
Takṣas, 2 parts, Washington, 1928, 1931.
 Jaina Sculpture (Recent Acquisition), Bulletin : Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, August, 1922, p. 53.

- Dash, M.P. Jaina Antiquities from Charampā (Orissa), Orissa Historical Research Journal, Bhubaneswar, XI, 1, pp. 50-53.
- De, Sudhin Caumukha, a Symbol of Jaina Art, JJ, VI, 1, pp. 27-30.
Two Unique inscribed Jaina Sculptures, JJ, V, 1, pp. 24-26.
- Del Bonta, Robert J. An Image of Pārśvanātha from Varuṇa, OA (N.S.), XVIII, 2, pp. 174-75.
- Deo, S. B. History of Jaina Monochism from Inscriptions and Literature, Poona, 1956.
Jainism in Indian History, JJ, VI, 4, pp. 175-208.
- Desai, P. B. Jainism in South India and Some Jaina Epigraphs, Sholapur, 1957.
- Deva, Krishna Mālādevī Temple at Gyaraspur, Śrī Mahāvīra Jaina Vidyālaya Golden Jubilee Volume, Bombay, 1968, pp. 262 ff.
- Śāntara Sculpture, Dhaky, M. A. JISOA (N.S.), IV, I, pp. 78-96.
The Chronology of the Solankī Temples of Gujarat, Journal of the M. P. Itihāsa Pariṣad, Bhopal, No. 3.
The Iconography of Sacciyā Devī, Chhotey Lal Jain Smṛiti Grantha, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 63-70.
The Influence of Samarāṅgaṇa-Sūtra-dhāra on Aparājitapṛcchā, JOI, X, 3, pp. 3ff.
The Temple of Mahāvīra at Ahar, Muni Jina Vijaya Abhinandana Grantha, Jaipur, 1967, pp. 230-32. ✓
- Dhaky, M. A. & Bapna, P. Śrīcitrakūṭa Kumāravihāram (Gujarati), Svādhyāya, V, 4, pp. 561 ff.
- Dhaky, M. A. & Vora, M. P. The Date of Aparājitapṛcchā, JOI, IX, 4.
- Dikshit, R. K. Jainism Under the Candellas, JA, XXII, 1, pp. 7-13.

- Dikshitar, V. R. R. Origin and early history of Caityas, IHQ, XIV.
- Fergusson, James History of Indian and Eastern Architecture, Delhi, 1967.
- Gai, G. S. Three Inscriptions of Rāmagupta, JOI, XVIII, 3, pp. 247-51.
- Gairola, Vachaspati Bhāratiya Citrakalā—Jaina Śāilī, pp. 129-44, Allahabad, 1963.
- Ganguly, K. K. Jaina Images in Bengal, Indian Culture, VI, 2.
Some Symbolic Representations in Early Jaina Art, JJ, I, pp. 31-36.
- Ganguly, O. C. A Hindu relief from a Jaina temple, Rūpam, Calcutta, 13-14, p. 1.
A Jaina Relief from South Kensington Museum, Rūpam, Calcutta, 37, p. 1.
- Gupta, P. C. D. A Note on the Nirgranthas mentioned in the Delhi-Topra Pillar, JJ, III, 3, pp. 119-21.
A Rare Jaina Icon from Sat-Deuliya, JJ, VII, 3, pp. 130-32.
Pakbirra's Shrines of the Emancipated, JJ, V, 3, pp. 121-25.
- Gupta, P. L. Patna Museum Catalogue of Antiquities, Patna, 1965.
- Gupta, S. P. Gandhawala—A Rare Jaina Site of Malwa, Chhotey Lal Jain Smriti Grantha, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 99-102.
- Gupta, S.P. and Sharma, B.N. Gandhawala aur Jaina murtiyān, Anekāṣṭa—Chhotey Lal Jaina Commemoration Volume, Delhi, XIX, 1-2, pp. 129-30.
- Gupte, R. S. Iconography of the Hindus, Buddhists and Jains, Bombay, 1972.
- Hadaway, W. S. Note on two Jaina Images, Rūpam, Calcutta, 17, pp. 48 ff.
- Haribhadra Sūri Daśavaikālika Sūtra.
- Hastimallīṣeṇācārya Pūrva-Purāṇam, ed. K. G. Kundanagar, Kolhapur, 1942.

- Jacobi, Herman Jaina Sūtras, Delhi, 1964.
 Studies in Jainism, Ahmedabad, 1946.
- Jain, B. C. Dhubela Sangrahālaya Men Jaina Mūrtiyān (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, October, 1966.
 Jaina Bronzes from Rajnapur-Kinkini, JIM, XI, pp. 15-33.
 Jainism in Buddhist Literature (Hindi), Nagpur, 1972.
 Jaina Pratimā Lakṣaṇa (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XIX, pp. 204-13.
 Jaina Sādhu Kī Pratimāyen (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, December, 1963.
- Jain, C. L. Jaina Bibliography, Calcutta, 1945.
- Jain, C. R. Rṣabhadeva, the Founder of Jainism, Allahabad, 1929.
- Jain, H. L. Contribution of Jainism to Indian Culture, JBRs, XLIV, I-II, pp. 1ff.
- Jain, H. L. & Jaina Śilālekhasaṅgraha, Bombay, 1928, 1952, 1957.
- Vijayamūrti
- Jain, J. P. Jainism, the Oldest Living Religion, Banaras, 1951.
 Revival of Śramaṇa Dharma in Later Vedic Age, JJ, VI, 3, pp. 109-13.
 The Contribution of Jainas to Indian Culture, JJ, VI, 4, pp. 209-22.
 The Jaina Sources of the History of Ancient India (100 B. C.-900 A.D.), Delhi, 1964.
 Jainism in Rājasthān, Sholapur, 1963.
- Jain, K. C. A Further Note on the Śvetāmbara and Digambara Sects of the Jainas, IHQ, VI, 2, pp. 378-83.
- Jain, K. P. Digambara Jaina Stūpa at Mathura, IHQ, VI, 2, pp. 376-77.
 Sankisa as a Jaina Tīrtha, IHQ, V, I, pp. 142-43.
- Jain, Niraj Gwalior ke Purātattva Saṅgrahālaya kī Jaina Mūrtiyān, Anekānta, Delhi, XVI, 5, pp. 214-16.

- Kundalapura, Satna, 1974.
 Navāgarh, Satna, 1964.
 Patiyande Mandir ki Mūrti aur Chaubīs Jina Śāsana Deviyān, Anekānta, Delhi, XVI, 3, pp. 99-103.
 Rājghaṭ ki Jaina Pratimāyen, Anekānta, Delhi, XIX, 1-2, pp. 49-50.
 Tin Vilakṣaṇa Jina Bimba, Anekānta, Delhi, XV, 3, pp. 121-22.
 Jain, Niraj & Jain, Dasharatha
 Jayaswal, K. P. Jaina Monuments at Khajurāho, Satna, 1968.
 Jain Images of Maurya Period, JBORS, XXIII, pp. 130-32.
 Jayantavijaya, Muni
 Jindal, K. B. Holy Āśā, Bhavanagar, 1954.
 The Doctrines of Jainism, JJ, VI, pp. 153-74.
 Jain worship and formula of Initiation, JJ, VIII, 2, pp. 45-53.
 Johnson, H. M. Śvetāmbara Jaina Iconography, IA, February, 1927.
 Joshi, N. P. Lucknow Museum Collection of Jaina Metal Images, BMA, IX, pp. 34-37.
 Kapadia, H. R. The Jaina System of Education, Journal of the University of Bombay, Bombay, VII, 4.
 Kramrisch, Stella
 Law, B.C. The Art of India, London, 1965.
Mahāvīra : His Life and Teachings, London, 1937.
Pārśvanātha : His Life and Doctrines, Journal of Indian History, XXXI, 1.
Some Jaina Canonical Sūtras, Bombay.
 Lee, S. E. Ancient Sculptures from India, Cleveland, 1964.
 Mankad, P. A. (ed.) Aparājita-pricchā of Bhuvanadeva, Baroda, 1950.
 Majumdar, R. C. & Pusalkar, A. D. (ed.) The History and Culture of the Indian People, Bombay, I-V.
 Marshal, Sir John Mohen-jo-Daro and the Indus Valley Civilization, I-III, London, 1931.

- Mehta, M. L. Outlines of Jaina Philosophy, Bangalore, 1954.
- Meister, M. W. Āma, Amrol, and Jainism in Gwalior Fort, JOI, XXII, 3, pp. 354-58.
A Plea for the Restoration of Aesthetics to the consideration of Jaina art, BMA, IX, pp. 19-22.
- Mishra, Yogendra The Date of Mahāvīra, JJ, I, 4, pp. 149-66.
- Mitra, K. P. Note on Two Images, JBORS, XXVIII, II, pp. 193ff.
- Mitra, Debala Some Jaina Antiquities from Bankura, West Bengal, Journal of the Asiatic Society. Letters, Calcutta, XXIV, 2, 131-34.
- Mode, Heinz The Study of Jaina Art, JJ, I, pp. 7-12.
Moti Chandra Jaina Miniature Paintings from Western India, Ahmedabad, 1949.
An Illustrated Ms. of the Kalpasūtra and Kālakācāryakathā, BPWM, 4, pp. 40-48.
Architectural Data in Jaina Canonical Literature, JUPHS, XXII, pp. 64-80. ~ ♪
- Moti Chandra & Gorakshkar, Sadasiva Jaina Bronzes from Western India from the late Smt. Amoravati Gupta Collection, BPWM, No. 11, pp. 13-25.
- Mukhopadhyaya, S. Place of Rajagriha in the History of Early Jainism, IHQ, XXXVII, 2-3, pp. 105-10.
- Muni Kanti Sagar Khaṇḍaharaṇ Kā Vaibhava (Hindi), Delhi, 1969.
Khoja Ki Pagadaṇḍiyān, Delhi, 1969.
- Mookerjee, Satkari Jaina Philosophy of non-absolutism : A Critical Study of Anekāntavāda, Calcutta, 1944.
- Murthy, S. G. Jaina Vestiges in Andhra, Hyderabad 1963.

- Nawab S. M. Jaina Citra-Kalpādruma (Gujarati), 2 parts, Ahmedabad, 1936, 1938.
Jaina Tīrthas in India and their Architecture, Ahmedabad, 1944.
The Collection of Kālaka Story, 2 parts, Ahmedabad, 1958.
- Nahar, P. C. Rajgir Jaina Inscription, JBRs, V, III, pp. 331ff.
- Nahṭa, A. C. Bhāratiya Vāstuśāstra men Jaina Pratimā Sambandhī Jñātavya (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XX, 5, pp. 207-15.
 Sūtradhāra Maṇḍana virachita Rūpamaṇḍana men Jaina Mūrti Lakṣaṇa, Anekānta, Delhi, XIX, 5, pp. 294-98.
- Nair, V. G. Indus Valley Civilisation, JJ, VI, 4, pp. 225-26.
 Ranakpur Temple, JJ, II, 1, pp. 38-39.
The Ceilings in the temples of Gujarat, Baroda, 1963.
- Nanavati, J. M. & Dhaky, M. A. The Jaina Rāmāyaṇa, IHQ, XV, 4, pp. 575-94.
- Narasimhachar, D. L. Pratiṣṭhā-Tilaka, Sholapur, 1951.
Pravacanasāroddhāra, 2 vols., Bombay, 1915.
- Pādaliptācārya Sūri Nirvāṇakalikā, ed. B. M. Zaveri, Indore, 1926.
- Pai, M. G. Why are the Bāhubali Colossai called Gommata? IHQ, VI, 2, pp. 270-86.
- Parmar, B.M.S. Jaina Pratimāyen : Bharatpur Saṅgrahālaya (Hindi), Rājasthān Bhārati, Bikaner, X, 3, pp. 15-17.
- Prasad, H. K. Jaina Bronzes in the Patna Museum, Śrī Mahāvīra Jaina Viśvālaya Golden Jubilee Volume, Bombay, 1968, I, pp. 275 ff.
- Premi, N. R. Jaina Sāhitya aur Itihāsa (Hindi), Bombay, 1956.
- Punya Vijaya Jesalmer Citrāvalī, (Hindi), Ahmedabad, 1951.

- Ramchandran, T. N. Jaina Monuments and Places of First Class Importance, Calcutta.
- Ramachandran, T.N. Khandagiri-Udaigiri Caves, Calcutta, & Jain, C. L. 1951.
- Ramesan, N. Jaina Bronzes from Bapatla, Lalit Kalā, New Delhi, 13, pp. 28-30.
- Rao, S. K. R. Jainism in South India, Madras, 1970.
- Rao, S. R. Jaina Bronzes from Lilvadeva, JIM, XI, pp. 30-34.
- Ravisena, Ācārya Padma Purāṇa, tr. Pt. Panna Lal, Delhi, 1968.
- Rea, A., Buried Jaina Remains at Danavulpad, ASIAR, 1905-06.
- Roy Choudhary, H.C. Political History of Ancient India, Calcutta, 1972.
- The Vajjis—The Clan of Mahāvira, JJ*, I, 4, pp. 167-72.
- Roy Choudhury, P.C. Jainism in Bihar, Patna, 1956.
- Sahu, L. N. Orissa Men Jaina Dharma (Hindi), Ali-garh, 1959.
- Saletore, B.A. Mediaeval Jainism with Special Reference to the Vijayanagar Empire, Bombay, 1938.
- Samsookha, P. C. Lord Mahāvira : His Life and Doctrines, Calcutta, 1957.
- Sankalia, H. D. Archaeology of Gujarāt, Bombay, 1941.
- Earliest Jaina Sculpture in Kathiawar, Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society*, Calcutta, July, 1938, pp. 426 ff.
- Jaina Monuments from Deogarh, JISOA*, IX, pp. 97-104.
- The Story in stone of the Great Renunciation of Neminātha, IHQ*, XVI, 2, pp. 314-17.
- Schubring, Walter The Doctrine of the Jainas, Delhi, 1962.
- Sen, A. C. Schools and Sects in Jaina Literature, Santi Niketan, 1931.
- Sengupta, R. The Jaina Āyāga-platforms at Mathura: An Interpretation, BMA, IX, pp. 23-29.

Settar, S.

Shah, Priyabala
(ed.)

Shah, U. P.

Cakreśvarī in Karmāṭak Literature and Art, OA (N.S.), XVII, 1, pp. 63-69.

Viṣṇudharmottara Purāṇa, Baroda, 1958 and 1961.

Akoṭā Bronzes, Bombay, 1959.

A Brass incense-burner from Akota, JISOA, XIX, pp. 6-10.

A Jaina Metal image from Surat, JISOA, Spl. No. on Western Art, 1955-66, p. 3.

A Jaina Bronze in Virginia Museum, OA (N. S.), XVIII, 3, pp. 253-54.

A Female Chauri-bearer from Aṅkoṭṭaka and the School of the Ancient West, BPWM, I, pp. 43-46.

A Further Note on Rāmagupta inscription, JOI, XVIII, 3, pp. 254-55.

A Further Note on Stone Umbrellas from Mathura, JUPHS, XIV.

A Jaina Bronze from Jesalmer, Rajasthan, JISOA, Spl. No. on Western Art, 1965-66, pp. 25-26.

A Note on Stone Umbrellas from Mathura, JUPHS, XXIV-XXV, pp. 205-208.

A Pañca-Tīrthikā Metal Image with a Torāṇa from Patan, JISOA, Spl. No. on Western Art, (1965-66), pp. 23-24.

A Pārśvanātha Sculpture in Cleveland, The Bulletin of the Cleveland Museum of Art for December, 1970, pp. 303-11.

A Peep into the History of Tantra in Early Jaina Literature, Bhārata Kaumudī, II, pp. 839 ff.

A Unique Jaina Image of Jīvantasvāmī, JOI, I, pp. 72-79.

An Old Jaina Image from Khed-Brahma (North Gujarat), JOI, X, 1, pp. 61-63.

An Early Image of Pārśvanātha, BPWM, No. 3, pp. 63 ff.

Age of Differentiation of Digambara and Śvetāmbara image and the earliest known Śvetāmbara Bronzes, BPWM, I, pp. 34 ff.

Bāhubali, BPWM, No. 4, pp. 32 ff.

Beginnings of Jaina Iconography, BMA, IX, pp. 1-14.

Brahma Śānti and Kapardi Yakṣa, Journal of the M. S. University, Baroda, VII, pp. 59-72.

Bronze Hoard from Vasantaḡaḡḡ, Lalita-Kalā, New Delhi, 1-2, pp. 55-65.

Foreign Elements in Jaina Literature, IHQ, XXIX, 3, pp. 260-65.

Harineḡameṣin, JISOA, XIX, pp. 19-41.

Iconography of Cakreśvari, the Yakṣi of Rṣabhanātha, JOI, XX, 3, pp. 280-313.

Iconography of the Jaina Goddess Ambikā, Journal of the University of Bombay, IX, 2.

Iconography of the Jaina Goddess Sarasvatī, Journal of the University of Bombay, X, 2.

Iconography of the Sixteen Jaina Mahāvidyās, JISOA, XV, pp. 114-77.

Jaina Iconography—A Brief Survey, Muni Jina Vijaya Abhinandana Grantha, Jaipur, 1971, p. 184-218.

Jaina Bronzes from Cambay, Lalita Kalā, New Delhi, 13, pp. 31-34.

Jaina Bronzes and Sculptures in the Salarjung Museum, SJM-Bi-Annual Research Journal, Hyderabad, I & II, pp. 11-14.

Jayā group of Goddesses, Vidyā-Vallabha Sūri Smṛiti Grantha, pp. 124-27.

Muni Vairadeva of the Son-Bhaṇḍāra Jaina Cave, Rajgir, JBSR, XXXIX, pp. 410-12.

Parents of the Jinas, BPWM, No. 5, pp. 24-32.

Sidelights on the life-time Sandalwood image of Mahāvira, JOI, I, 4, pp. 358-68.

Seven Bronzes from Lilvā-Devā (Pañch-Mahāls), Bulletin of the Baroda Museum & Picture Gallery, Baroda, IX, I-II, pp. 43-52.

Some more images of Jivantasvāmī, JIM, XI, pp. 49-50.

Studies in Jaina Art, Varanasi, 1955.

Supernatural Beings in the Jaina Tantras, Ācārya Dhruva Commemoration Volume, III, pp. 67 ff.

The so-called Mauryan Polish in Jaina Literature, Journal of the University of Baroda, Baroda, June, 1955.

Two Jaina Bronzes from Ahmedabad, JOI, XXX, 1-4, pp. 463 ff.

Vardhamāna-Vidyā-Paṭa, JISOA, VI, pp. 52-87. ff

Yakṣa Worship in Early Jaina Literature, JOI, III, 1, pp. 55 ff.

Yakṣiṇī of the Twenty-fourth Jina, Mahāvira, JOI, XXII, 1-2, pp. 70-78.

A few early sculptures from Gujarat, JOI, I, 1, pp. 160 ff.

An Image of Pārśvanātha from Rajasthan, The Researcher, Jaipur, VII-IX, pp. 31-32.

Jaina Pratimāon Ke Vikās men Nahaḍa Ki Mūrtiyān (Hindi), Maru Bhārati, Pilani, January 1962, pp. 14-20.

Shah, U. P. &
Mehta, R. N.
Sharma, B. N.

Rāṣṭriya Saṅgrahālaya men Madhya-Kālīna Jaina Prastara Pratimāyen (Hindi), Chhotey Lal Jain Smriti Grantha, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 183-86.

Sarasvatī Pratimāyon Ke Vikās men Pallu Ki Jaina Sarasvatī Pratimāyen (Hindi), Maru Bhārati, Pilani, October, 1963, pp. 83-94.

Social & Cultural History of Northern India (c. 1000-1200 A.D.), New Delhi, 1972.

Some Interesting Temple Sculptures at Osian, Roopa-Lekhā, New Delhi, XL, pp. 95 ff.

Some Mediaeval Sculptures from Rajasthan in the National Museum, New Delhi, Roopa-Lekhā, New Delhi, XXXV, 1-2, pp. 30 ff.

The Art Institute of Chicago men Jaina Mūrtiyām, Mahāvīra Jayanti Smārikā, Jaipur, 1974, pp. 5-6.

Tri-Tīrthika of Pārśvanātha (in the National Museum, New Delhi), JIM, New Delhi, XXV-XXVI, pp. 131-32.

Unpublished Jaina Bronzes in the National Museum, New Delhi, JOI, XIX, 3, pp. 275-78.

Videśī Saṅgrahālayon men Jaina Pratimāyen, Mahāvīra Jayanti Smārikā, Jaipur, 1972, pp. 124-28.

Sharma, B. N. &
Jain, S. K.

Rāṣṭriya Saṅgrahālaya men Jaina Murtiyān, Dilli Jaina Directory, Delhi, 1970, pp. 318-20.

Sharma, Dasharatha

Gleanings from the Kharataragaccha-Paṭṭāvalī (A History of Jaina Ācāryas of the Kharataragaccha Branch, 1010-1336 A.D.), IHQ, III, pp. 223-31.

The Kharataragaccha Paṭṭāvalī compiled by Jinapāla, IHQ, XI, 4, pp. 779-81.

- Sharma, R. C. Art Data in Rāyapaṣeniya, BMA, IX, pp. 38-44.
The Early Phase of Jaina Iconography, Babu Chhotey Lal Jain Smriti Granthā, Calcutta, 1967, pp. 57-62.
Jaina Mūrti-Kalā Kā Ārambhika Sva-rūpa (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, June, 1966, pp. 142 ff.
- Shastri, A. M. Varāhamihira and Bhadrabāhu in the Religion and Culture of the Jainas, ed. D. C. Sircar, Calcutta, 1973, pp. 71-95.
- Sheth, C. B. Jainism in Gujarat (A. D. 1100 to 1600), Bombay, 1953.
- Shukla, D. N. Bhāratiya Vastuśāstra—Pratimā Vigyāna (Hindi), Lucknow, 1956.
- Sinha, B. P. Bhāratiya Kalā Ko Bihār Ki Dena (Hindi), Patna, 1958.
- Sircar, D. C. Barli fragmentary stone inscription, JBSR, XXXVII, I-II, pp. 34 ff; XL, I, 8 ff.
Vidiśā Jaina image inscriptions of the time of Rāmagupta, Journal of Ancient Indian History, Calcutta, III, 1-2, pp. 145-51.
- Sivaramamurti, C. Geographical and Chronological Factors in Indian Iconography, Ancient India, New Delhi, No. 6, pp. 44-45.
Indian Bronzes, Bombay, 1962.
Indian Sculpture, New Delhi, 1961.
South Indian Bronzes, New Delhi, 1963.
The Royal Conquests and Cultural Migrations in South India and the Deccan, Calcutta, 1954.
- Smith, Vincent The Jaina Stūpa and other Antiquities of Mathura, Allāhabad, 1901.
- Srivastava, Balram (ed.) Rūpamaṇḍana, Varanasi, 1964.
- Srivastava, V. N. Some Interesting Jaina Sculptures in the - State Museum, Lucknow, BMA, IX, pp. 45-52.

- Stevenson, Sinclair, The Heart of Jainism, London, 1915.
- Stein, Otto, Itinerary of Māhāvīra, JJ, I, 4, pp. 186-97.
- Tatia, Nathmal, Studies in Jaina Philosophy, Varanasi, 1951.
- Tawney, C. H., The Kathā-Kośa, London, 1895.
- Thakur, Upendra, A Historical Survey of Jainism in North Bihar, JBRs, XLV, I-IV, pp. 186 ff.
- Studies in Jainism and Buddhism in Mithilā*, Varanasi, 1964.
- Tiwari, M.N.P., A brief survey of the iconographic data at Kumbharia, North Gujarat, Sambodhi, Ahmedabad, April, 1973, pp. 7-14.
- A note on the identification of a Tirthankara image at Bharat Kalā Bhawan, Varanasi, JJ, VI, 1, pp. 41-43.
- An unpublished image of Ādinātha in the Bharat Kalā Bhawan, Varanasi, JJ, VI, 3, pp. 122-123.
- An unpublished image of Neminātha from Deogarh, JJ, VIII, 2, pp. 84-85.
- Bharat Kalā Bhawan Kā Jaina Purātattva (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXIV, 2, pp. 51 ff.
- Candrāvatī Kā Jaina Purātattva (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXV, 4, pp. 145-47.
- Dakṣiṇa Bhārata Se Prāpta Mahāvīra Pratimāyen (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXIII, 5-6, pp. 242-45.
- Jaina Śilpa Men Bāhubali (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXIV, 1, pp. 8-11.
- Khajurāho Ke Ādinātha Mandira Ke Pāśvadvāra Ki mūrtiyān (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXIV, 5, pp. 218-21.
- Khajurāho Ke Pāśvanātha Mandira Ki

- Rathikāon Men Jaina Devīyān (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXIV, 4, pp. 183 ff.
 Khajurāho Ke Jaina Mandiron Ke door-lintels Par Utkirṇa Jaina Devīyān (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXIV, 6, pp. 251-54.
 Kumbharia Kā Jaina Purātattva (Hindi), Anekānta, XXV, 3, pp. 101-103.
 Representation of Sarasvatī in Jaina Sculptures of Khajurāho, Journal of the Gujarat Research Society, Bombay, XXXIV, 4, pp. 307-12.
 Sarasvatī in Jaina Sculptures, Śramaṇa, Varanasi, January, 1971, pp. 27-34; and February, 1971, pp. 25-28.
 Some Unpublished Jaina Bronzes in the Bharat Kalā Bhawan, Varanasi, Journal of the Gujarat Research Society, Bombay, XXXIII, 4, pp. 230-35.
 Uttara Bhārata Men Jaina Yakṣiṇī Cakreśvarī Ke Mūrtigat Avataraṇa (Hindi), Anekānta, Delhi, XXV, 1, pp. 35-40.
 Uttara Bhāratiya Śilpa Men Tirthaṅkara Mahāvīra (Hindi), Śramaṇa, Varanasi, October, 1970, pp. 18-23.
 Tiwari R. P. Bhāratiya Citrakalā aur Uske Mūla-Tattva (Hindi), Delhi, 1973.
Survey of Drawing in Ancient India, Delhi, 1973.
 Trott, W. G. An Introduction to True Religion, 37, VI, 4, pp. 137-57.
 Upadhyaya, S. C. Jaina Iconography Mainly in Svetāmbaras, Bombay, 1969.
 Vaidya, P. L. (ed.) Āryamañjūrīmūlakalpa (Mahāyāna Sūtra-saṅgraha, Part II), Darbhanga, 1964.
 Vardhamāna Sūri Ācārādīnakara, 2 vols., Bombay, 1922 and 1923.
 Vasunandi Pratiṣṭhāsārasaṅgraha, Sholapur, 1925.

- Veṅkatasubbiah, A. When was the Gommaṭa image at Śrāvaṇa Belgola set up? IHQ, VI, 2, pp. 290-302.
Catalogue of the Archaeological Museum at Mathura, Allahabad, 1910. The Mathura School of Sculpture, ASIAR, 1906-07 and 1909-10.
- Vogel, J. Ph. La Sculpture de Mathura, Arts Asiatica, Paris, XV.
- Winjernitz, Maurice Jainas in the History of Indian Literature, Ahmedabad, 1936.
- Yativṛṣabha Tiloyapaṇṇatti, 2 vols., ed. A. N. Upadhye and H. L. Jain, Sholapur, 1943, 1951.
- Zimmer, Heinrich The Art of Indian Asia, 2 vols., New York, 1955.

INDEX

A

Abhaya 72, 91-92, 97, 127
 Abhaya-Mudrā 69, 72
 Abhidhāna-cintāmaṇi 27, 31, 53
 Abhinandana 40, 70, 89, 126, 127,
 140
 Abhinandanānātha 39
 Ācāra Dīpakara 15, 88, 129, 135
 Ācāryas 10
 Acyupatā 131
 Acyut 91, 100
 Adharma 3, 4
 Ādīnātha 34, 35, 68
 Ādipurāṇa 12, 35
 Agni 36, 89, 109, 110
 Agni-Purāṇa 65
 Ahicchatrā 22
 Ahimsā 3, 6, 8, 133
 Airāvata 109
 Ajita 38, 45, 58, 73, 88
 Ajitanātha 36, 69, 88, 124, 140
 Ajitarāja 58
 Ajitavalā 37
 Ajita 3, 4, 37
 Ajita Dravyas 3
 Ākāśa 3, 4
 Akṣamaṇi 76
 Akṣata Pāṇi 8
 Aloka 3, 65
 Alokākāśa 3
 Ambā 16
 Ambālikā 104
 Ambikā 57, 86, 103
 Amkūṭa 97
 Amogha 65
 Āmrā 103
 Ānanda 134
 Āṅgas 2, 10, 11
 Anta 2, 3
 Ananta 77, 112
 Anantamati 97
 Anantanātha 50, 126
 Antagaḍadāśa 23
 Anuttaravimāna 17
 Aparājita 17, 29, 101
 Apraticakrā 35, 126
 Arandīha 15
 Arati 8, 15
 Āratis 14
 Aradhāparyankāśana 139
 Aradhāparyankāśana Māna 139
 Arhat 62
 Ariṣṭanemi 58, 82

Ariṣṭa-nemīcarita 12
 Arthālāstra 23
 Ārya 1
 Āryan 2
 Āryavati 24
 Āsanas 138
 Āsmata 65
 Āśoka 19, 46, 54, 74, 94
 Āstrava 4
 Āṣṭamaṅgala 33, 54, 55
 Āṣṭamaṅgalika 142
 Āsthigrāma 63
 Āṣṭamāṅgikā 17
 Āṣṭapada 21
 Āśvasena 54
 Āśvattha 46, 50
 Āura 20
 Aurorā 74
 Āvadhī 5
 Āvāśyakas 142
 Āvatāras 12
 Āyāgapāṭa 33, 142
 Āyāgapāṭas 24, 33, 142
 Āyodhyā 33, 40, 41, 50

B

Bāhubali 35
 Bahurūpīni 55, 102
 Bakula 56
 Balā 53, 99
 Baladeva 58
 Bandha 4
 Badhurāsana 138
 Bahulā 106
 Bhadrabāhu 9, 10
 Bhadrāsana 102
 Bhadrikapur 46
 Bhāgarata 36
 Bhairava 135
 Bhandarkar (Prof. D.R.) 1
 Bhānu Rāja 51
 Bharata 35
 Bhāvajīva 12
 Bhavanapati 17
 Bheri 142
 Bhotikas 10
 Bhṛgupattana 22
 Bhṛkūṭi 44, 56, 82, 92
 Bhuvaneśvarī 27, 137
 Bhūtaḍāmārī 137
 Bimbisāra 60
 Brahma Yajña 74
 Brahmā 46, 74, 108, 115, 123

Brāhmaṇa Pūjaka 2
Brahmacāris 15
Brahmanemidatta 13
Brhaspati 119
Buddha 119
Buddhism 1, 3
Burgess (Dr.) 1
Burnouf (Prof.) 143

C

Cakra 41
Cakreśvari 35, 86, 87, 139
Cāmundā 16, 102-103
Campāpurī 21
Caṇḍā 48, 95, 96, 103
Caṇḍikā 137
Candana Pūjā 8
Candra 118
Carita 12, 106
Cetaka 63
Chakreśvara 87
Champā 21, 63
Champakā 55
Champāpurī 49
Chanderi 22
Chaṇḍī 16
Chand Merchant 106
Chandra 118
Chandrapurī 44
Chandraprabha 22, 42, 44, 73, 111, 129
Chandrāvatī 22
Charita Books 13
Chaturmukha 76
Chaturayji Yoginī 16
Chaturmukhī 34
Chhatrābha 42
Chhāyā 110, 111
Chinha 20
Chowries 15, 29

D

Dakṣa 134
Dakṣa-Prajāpati 134
Dakṣiṇā-mūrti 28
Dāna-Vira 44
Darpiṣṭa-Vāsudeva 48
Dakṣa 8
Deogarh-Fort 37, 78, 85, 88
Devadāru 58
Devādideva 27, 31
Devipūjā 14
Devanandā 61, 138
Dharma 3, 4, 11
Dharma-Cakra 21, 31, 52, 58, 68,
Dharmānātha 50
Dharmavirja 43

Dharma Priyā 54
Dharma-rāja 111
Dhanaterasa 8-136
Dhārāṇī 100
Dhārāṇī Devī 54
Dharaṇendra 23, 67, 83, 85
Dhātaki 58
Dhūṇḍhi-devas 66
Dhūṇḍhi 11
Dikpālas 18, 83, 108, 115
Digambaras 9, 10, 15, 16
Divali 8
Diya-dhoani 20
Dravyas 3
Dravya-Jyā 12
Dṛḍharāja 38
Dṛḍharatha 38, 46
Drughāṇa 82
Dundhubhi 142
Durga 16, 96, 102, 128
Duritārī 89
Duritārī Devī 38
Dvija 2
Dvārakā 57

F

Führer (Dr.) 25

G

Gaja-Kachhapa 78
Gaṇapati 135
Gaṇadhara-Sāradhā-Śataka 60
Gaṇadharas 29, 79
Gāndhārī 56, 95, 102, 103, 129
Ganadharva 53, 79
Gaṇeśa 14, 135
Gaṇeśvari 16
Gaṇeśa 68
Gandhawal 139
Garbha 20
Garuḍa 71, 78, 87, 126
Gaurī 75, 95, 128
Girnār, 21
Gomateśvar 22
Gomedha 31, 57
Gomedha or Gomeśa 82
Gomukha 35, 67, 85
Goṇaśa 135
Gotama Indrabhūti 63
Guru-Pūjā 14
Gupta 20
Gwalior Fort 85, 93

H

Hala 100
Hāra 142
Harinegameṣa 133

Harinegamaṣi 24, 133
Harivamśa 56, 57
Hastināpur 52-54
Haṭhayoga 138
Hāthigumpha Inscription 23
Hemachandra 27, 37
Hinayāna 9
Hunter (Mr.) 2

I

Ikṣvāku 48, 55
Indra 9, 14, 108, 113
Indian Sectarian Religion 1
Ilāna 108, 114
Ilvara 40, 74, 95
Ilvara Yajña 74

J

Jacobi (Prof.) 3, 13
Jagannath Sabhā 21
Jaina Mandir 16
Jaina Pantheon 1
Jala-Pāṇḍ 8
Jambhala 71, 81
Jambuvaddā 126
Janma 20
Jaratkāru 106
Jaya-ghāta 142
Jayanta 16, 17
Jayaśyāmā 50
Jayāvati 49
Jina-Mudrā 140
Jina 3, 11, 12, 62
Jina 3, 5, 12
Jñāna Pañcamī 8, 22
Jñāna 20
Jñānabikāgrāma 62
Jvālāmālīnī 22, 92, 129
Jvālāmukhi 16
Jvālīnī 92, 111
Jyotiṣi 17
Jyotiṣka Devas 117

K

Kadamba 48
Kailāsa 113
Kākaśālinagara 45, 46
Kāla 3, 4
Kālabhairava 135
Kālī 16, 89, 92, 127, 137
Kalpas 17
Kalpasūtra 14, 29, 34, 61, 136
Kalyāṇas 21
Kalyāṇakas 1, 6, 13, 14, 61
Kāma 65, 98, 103
Kamaṇḍalu 99, 119, 132
Kamālā 136
Kamaṭha 84
Kāmpilya 49
Kāñcana-valānaka 22

Kandarpa 51, 78, 97
Kaṅkāli 16, 29
Kaṅkāli Tīlā 31
Kaṅtheśvari 16
Karma 2, 4, 6, 62
Kārttikeya 76, 80, 110, 126
Kārttikeya Pūrṇimā 8
Kāśhī 43
Kauśāmbī 42, 59, 63
Kaṭha 59, 106
Kaumārī 126
Kaumārīka 137
Kauṭilya 23
Kāyotsarga 20, 28, 59, 138, 140, 142
Kāyotsarga Asana 84
Keith (Prof.) 134
Ketu 120
Kevala 5
Kevalajñāna 62
Kevalajñānin 11
Khaḍgāsana 37, 139
Kheṭaka 70
Khāravēla 23
Khendra 79
Kimpuruṣa 51
Kimilāra 78
Kiṇṇara 50, 77, 78, 98
Kiṣkindhā 46
Klimkāri 137
Koyādvāra 22
Krauñcha 40
Kṛṣṇadāsa 13
Kṛṣṇavarman 49
Kṣetrapāla 18, 134, 135
Kubera 14, 65, 66, 80, 113
Kuladevī 15, 16
Kumāra 48, 75
Kumāras 18, 49, 108
Kumbhā 55
Kuṇḍāla 53
Kuṇḍapura 61
Kuṇḍika 63
Kuṇḍī 110
Kuṇḍinī 53
Kuṣmāṇḍī 103
Kusuma 43, 71, 72
Kusuma-mālīnī 103
Kusumamālī 103
Kuṣmāṇḍīnī 57, 103
Kuvera 66

L

Lakkuṇḍī 21
Lakṣarākṣa 65
Lakṣmī 136
Lakṣmī Pāṇḍ 8
Lāṭhāna 28, 29, 31, 32
Loka 3
Lokapāla 112
Lokapālas 108

Lucknow Museum 99
Lunkār 11

M

Maghavatarāja 45
Mahākālī 16, 41, 90, 91, 94, 127
Mahāmānasi 32, 51, 99
Mahājvalā 129
Mahāveśā 57
Mahāvīra 9, 10, 60, 64, 106, 107, 139
Mahāyakṣa 37, 68, 124
Mahāyāna 9
Mahā Yoginī 137
Mahindra 109
Makara-ketana 103
Makarasaṁkrānti 8
Mallī 45, 55
Mallinātha 11, 54, 80
Mollindūtha carita, 32
Maluluṅga 85
Manaḥpariyāya 5
Manas 4
Manasā 98, 106
Mānasi 97, 131
Mānavī 47, 75, 94, 95, 129
Maṅgala 41, 118
Maṇibhadra 65
Manovegā 72, 91
Mantras 15
Mārīcī 50, 100
Marudevi 18
Mātāṅga 43, 60, 72, 84, 92, 109
Mathurā 21, 76
Mati 5
Meghamālīn 59, 84
Megharatha 41
Metta 3
Minavāhana 98
Mithilā 57
Mitrāsena 54
Mitravīrya 41
Mokṣa 2, 4, 5, 36
Mokṣasana 138
Mudrās, 138, 140
Muhūrta 7
Muni Suvrata 31, 55, 81

N

Nāga 44, 45, 78, 115
Nāgakeśara 44
Naigameśa 133
Nairīta 111
Naivedya 15
Naivedya Pūjā 8
Nālandā 63
Nāms 12
Nemeso 133
Nami 133
Naminātha 139

Nandi 82
Nandiga 82
Nandi Vrkṣa 51
Nandyā 142
Nandyācarita 53, 54, 142
Naradattā 55, 102
Narandhāna 83, 91
Nāta 61
Navavidhāna 18
Navagrahas 117
Neminātha 51, 82, 103
Neminātha carita 133
Neminātha Purāṇa 13
Nilasarasvatī 130
Nirjara 4, 5
Nirvāṇa 2, 63
Nirvāṇī 98, 132, 137
Nirvāṇī devī 86
Nirvāṇa-kalikā 88, 124, 129
Nisācari 137
Nirgrantha 12
Nirgranthās 9
Nyagrodha 35
Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika 2

P

Padārthas 4
Padmaprabha 42, 56, 91
Padmapurāṇa 106
Padmāsana 28, 138
Padmāvatī 104
Paṭijusana Saṁvatsari 8
Palamva 143
Pañcamahāśabda 142
Pañcāstikāya 4
Pañcāmṛita 16
Paṇṇagādevī 97
Pāpa 4, 63
Pāpāmata 22
Parimatāla 21
Pariniṣkramaṇa 20
Pārīva 58, 60, 83
Pārīvanātha 43
Pārīvanāthacarita 12, 13, 60
Pārīvanātha 43, 58, 83
Pātāla 50, 59, 76, 105, 112, 115
Pātālīputra 9
Pārvaṭī 137
Paryāṅka 138
Paryāṅkāśana 138, 139
Pindā 111
Piyāla 39
Pāvāpuri 21
Prabhā 44
Pracaṇḍa 95
Prajāpati 134
Prajāpati 70, 89, 124

Prajāvatī 55
 Prāśāda 15
 Prasenañjit 59
 Pratimā 7
 Prātihāryas 19
 Pratikramaya 142
 Pratiṣṭhā 30
 Pratiṣṭhā-vidhi 17
 Pravacanāśroddhāra 34
 Prāyaścitta 8
 Pretākṣi 137
 Prsthacampā 63
 Priyanga 40
 Prithivī 43
 Pūḍala 3, 4
 Pūjakas 2
 Puṇḍarika Vāsudeva 51
 Pūya 3, 4
 Purāṇa 12
 Pūrṇabhadra 47, 65
 Pūrṇarākṣa 65
 Puruṣa 71
 Puruṣa-carita 61
 Puruṣadattā 71, 90, 91, 102, 126
 Puṣpa 71, 83
 Puṣpadanta 45
 Puṣpaka 114
 Puṣpayāna 83
 Puṣpakam 83
 Puruṣottama Vāsudeva 50

Q

Quadruple 34

R

Rājgriha 56, 63
 Rāhu 120
 Rājā Puruṣa Datta 51
 Rājayoga 138
 Ratnā Devī 117
 Ratnapura 51
 Rāvaṇa 83
 Rjувālika 62
 Rṣis 26, 31
 Rjupālika 21
 Rtuvalika 62
 Rohiṇī 88, 124
 Rṣabha 12, 20
 Rṣabha Datta 61
 Rṣabhanātha 12, 26, 27, 35, 126, 134

S

Śaci 109
 Śaḍānana 80
 Śādhū 11
 Śādhvi 11
 Sagaracakri 37
 Sahet Mahet 41

Śakala Kīrti 12
 Śakra 114
 Śāla 60
 Śāla tree 38
 Śālibhadra 65
 Śaṁkṣāras 2
 Śaṁkṣa 3
 Śāmyika 7, 8
 Śāmyika-pāṭha 7, 143
 Śamanasaraṇa 12, 15, 143
 Śambhava 38
 Śambhananātha 30, 69, 70, 124, 140
 Śamṛddha 65
 Śāṁkhya 3, 142
 Śāṁkhini 17
 Śametaśikhara 21, 45
 Śamṛyāṁkṣana 62
 Śamṛadḍya 15
 Śamṛdra 4, 11
 Śamudravijaya 57
 Śaṁsara 4
 Śamyak caritra 5
 Śamyak Darśana 5
 Śamyak Jñāna 5
 Śāṁkarācārya 2
 Śani 120
 Śaṁmukha 49, 76
 Śaṁmukha Yekṣa 80
 Śāntā 91
 Śānti 43
 Śāntidevī 137
 Śāntinātha 12, 51, 78
 Śāntināthacaritra 12
 Śaptabhaṅginaya 5
 Śapta-cchada 51
 Śapta-paṇḍa 36
 Śaradā Pūjā 8
 Śārṇāth 47, 48, 52
 Sarasvatī 16, 99, 100, 122, 128
 Sarvabhadra 39
 Sarvabhadra-Pratimā 34
 Sarvakāma 65
 Sarvārtha Siddha 17
 Sarvayajnas 65
 Śāsana-devatā 20, 30, 32, 54, 65
 Śāsanadevī 46, 86, 92
 Saṁsthā 129
 Śātālika 63
 Śatrap Śoḍāsa 24
 Śatruñjaya Hill 21
 Saturn-god 120
 Satyavīrya 38
 Saurīpurī 57
 Śvayamvara 40
 Śeṣa 106
 Siddhacakra 9
 Siddhārtha 40, 59
 Siddhāyikā 60, 64, 106, 107
 Siddhayoginī 137
 Śilpa Śāstra 34

Sindhapurī 48
Sinhāsana 48
 Sinhāsana 50
 Sīmandhara 40
Sīlūṅga 23
 Sīrīṣa 42
 Śiva 75, 115, 134, 137
 Śivabhūti 10
 Śivadevī 57
 Śivapūjā 14
 Śivarāja 53
Śīlā Pāṇḍ 8
Śīlāndīthā 46, 95, 130, 133
 Soma 56
 Spr̥ṣati 32
Śraddhā 2, 14
Śrāvaka 7, 11
Śrāvakas 7
 Śravaṇa 65
 Śravaṇa Belagola 21
 Śrāvastī 38
 Śreṇika 12, 60
 Śreyāśmānātha 27, 47, 95, 115, 128, 130
 Śrī 14, 136
 Śrī-Parvata 27
 Śrīdevī 53
 Śrīkāntā 53
 Śrīkṛiṣṇa 58
 Śrīvatsa 19, 28, 47, 95, 142, 143
 Śrīvatsa Devī 95
 Śrīṅga 142
 Śrī 69
Śrute-devī 122
Śruti 4, 122
 Stavāna 142
Sthāpāṇa Jina 12
Sthānaka-cāsis 11
 Sthālabhadra 9, 10
 Suvidhinātha 74
 Sudarīana 54
 Sugrīva 45
 Śukla Pañcamī 122
 Śukra 120
 Suluma 54
 Sulasā 24
 Sumanabhadra 65
 Sumati 40, 127
 Sumatinātha 40, 71, 102, 128
 Sumitrā 58
 Sunanda 46
 Sun-God 117
 Sundavana 62
 Supārīva 43
 Supārīvanātha 24, 40, 43, 73, 85, 142, 143
 Supratīṣṭhā 43
 Suramyā 49
 Śōrasena 53
 Sōris 15

Sūrya 53, 111, 117
 Suṣeṇā 38
 Susīmā 42
 Sustāri Devī 63
 Sūtra devī 123
Sūtras 2
 Suvidhinātha 45, 46
 Suvrata 51
 Svāhā 109, 110
 Svastika 20, 43, 44, 72
Svetāmbaras 9, 10, 15, 16, 37
Syādvaśa 5, 12
 Śyāmā 42, 91, 111
 Śyāma Yakṣa 73

T

Tammata 142
 Tapas 21
 Tārā 16, 20, 100
 Tarpapa 14
 Tattvas 4
 Tilaka taru 53
Tirthas 20, 21
 Tirtha 11
Tirthakalpa 21
Tirthankaras 1, 2, 8, 11, 12, 35, 42
Trilinear 20
 Trimukha 38, 69, 125
 Trimūrti 34
 Tripiṣṭa 47
 Tripurā 16
Triratna 5
 Trīṭalā 61, 74, 133
Tri-Sandhā 14
 Triṣaṣṭi-Śalākāpuruṣa-Garita 35
 Triṣaṣṭi-Sataka 61
 Tumbara 47, 71
 Tumbaru 41, 127

U

Ugrasena 57
 Ujjain 22
Uttarapurāṇa 12 37, 41, 42, 48, 61

V

Vāgīśvarī 98, 132
 Vaijayanta 72, 23
 Vaimānika 17
 Vaira 138
 Vairoṭī 49, 96, 101, 130
 Vairavaṇa 65
 Vaiṣṇavī 87, 126
 Vaitālī 16
 Vajra 78, 82, 101, 108, 112, 125
Vajra-dagda 51
 Vajrāṁkuṣā 125
Vajra-śrīkhaḍḍā 89, 90, 114, 125
 Vāmā 59
 Vāmana 58
 Vandana 142

- Vanamālā 31
 Vāṇijyagrāma 63
 Vappilā 57
 Varada 68, 71, 81, 88, 96
 Varada mudrā 38, 72, 77, 84, 87, 88, 89, 91, 96, 99, 141
 Varāha 36
 Vārāhi 16, 100, 137
 Varanandī 72
 Vardhamāna 61, 63
 Vardhamānacaritra 61
 Vardhamānaka 142
 Varhivāhana 89
 Varuṇa 55, 81, 89, 112
 Vāsuki 84
 Vāsudeva 31, 48, 49
 Vāsudēya 48, 49, 103
 Vāstu Devas 18
 Vāstu-Devatās 108
 Vāstupāla 21
 Vāṭukabhairava 135
 Vāyu 112, 127
 Vēdānti 39
 Vedas 116, 122
 Viditā 96
 Vidyādevī 86, 91-95, 124, 130.
 Vidyādevīs 17, 89, 90, 122
 Vijapūraka 85
 Vijayā 18, 44, 73, 74, 93, 96, 102, 111
 Vijaya Rāja 56
 Vilva 46
 Vilva fruit 72
 Vimalanātha 49, 79, 80, 130
 Vimalanātha-Purāṇa 13
 Vimalatā 49
 Vimalashāh Tejapāla 21
 Vimānavāsi 17
 Viṣṇu 91, 107
 Vira 138
 Virādevas 17
 Vira Mudrā 141
 Virasvāmī 63
 Virūpākṣī 16
 Viṣṇu 48, 126
 Viṣṇudevī 48
 Viṣṇudeva 48
 Viṣṇūdri 48
 Viśvasena 52, 81
 Vogel (Mr.) 43
 Vrata-Pūjā 14
 Vṛṣabhanātha 36
 Vyantara God 17
 Vyāghrarājī 16

Y

- Yajñas 14
 Yakṣa 20, 30, 35
 Yakṣas 65
 Yakṣinī 29, 46, 65, 129
 Yakṣeta 47
 Yakṣendra 53, 79
 Yakṣeśvara 70
 Yakṣinīs 65, 86, 135
 Yamaghantā 16
 Yama 51, 110, 111, 129
 Yamadūtī 16, 42
 Yamunā 129
 Yatis 15
 Yoga 138
 Yoga-Mudrā 141
 Yogesvarī 137
 Yoginīs 134

PLATE I

Torso of a naked Jaina Tirthaṅkara, Maurya, 3rd century B.C., Lohanipur, Patna, Bihar, Patna Museum.

PLATE II

Āyāgapaṭṭa, Kuṣāṇa, 1st century A.D., Kañkāli Ṭilā, Mathurā, U.P., State Museum, Lucknow.

PLATE III

Āyāgapatṭa, Kuṣāṇa, 2nd century A.D., Mathurā, U.P., State Museum, Lucknow.

PLATE IV

Rṣabhanātha, Gāhaḍavāla, 12th century A.D., Mahet, Gonda,
U. P.

PLATE V

Rṣabhanātha, Cedi, 11th century A. D., Tripurī, M.P., Indian Museum, Calcutta.

PLATE VI

Ajitanātha, Cedi, 10th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh, Nagpur Museum.

PLATE VII

Sambhavanātha, 12th-13th century A.D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE VIII

Abhinandanānātha, 12th-13th century A.D.,
Khandagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE IX

Sumatinātha, 12th-13th century A.D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE X

Padmaprabha, 12th-13th century A.D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XI

Supārśvanātha, Cedi, 10th-11th century A.D.,
Tripuri, M. P., Nagpur Museum.

PLATE XII

Supārśvanātha, Rāṣṭrakūṭa, 9th-10th century A.D.,
Katolī, Candā, Mahārāṣṭra.

PLATE XIII

Candraprabha, Candella, 12th century A. D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, U. P.

PLATE XIV

Suvidhjnātha (or Puṣpadanta), 12th-13th century A.D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XV

Śitalanātha, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XVI

Śreyāṁśanātha, Cedi, 10th-11th century A. D.,
Madhya Pradesh, Nagpur Museum.

PLATE XVII

Vāsupūjya, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XVIII

Vimalanātha, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XIX

Anantanātha, 12th-13th century A.D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

Dharmanātha, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Orissa.

PLATE XXI

Śāntinātha, Rāṣṭrakūṭa, c. 10th century A. D.,
Rajnapur-Kinkini, Akolā, Mahārāṣṭra, Nagpur Museum.

PLATE XXII

Kunthanātha, Tomara, 15th-16th century A. D.,
Gwalior Fort, M. P.

PLATE XXIII

Aranātha, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XXIV

Mallinātha, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

Munisuvrata, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XXVI

Naminātha, 12th-13th century A. D.,
Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XXVII

Neminātha, Cauhān, 12th century A. D.,
Narhaḍ, Pilānī, Rajasthan, National Museum, New Delhi.

PLATE XXVIII

Pārśvanātha attacked by Kamaṭha, Vardhana,
7th century A. D., Bihar, Indian Museum, Calcutta.

PLATE XXIX

Mahāvīra, Cedi, 10th-11th century A. D., Jabalpur,
Madhya Pradesh, Nagpur Museum.

PLATE XXX

Iśvara Yakṣa, Candella, c. 10th century A.D.,
Madhya Pradesh (Author's Collection).

PLATE XXXI

Kubera, Pratihāra, 8th century A. D.,
Bansi, Rajasthan, Udaipur Museum.

PLATE XXXII

Kṣetrapāla, Pratihāra, 10th century A. D.,
Candapur, Jhansi, U. P.

PLATE XXXIII

Cakresvari, Candella, 12th century A. D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, U.P.

PLATE XXXIV

Mahāmānasī, Candella, 12th century A. D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, U. P.

Rohinī, Candella, 12th century A. D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, U. P.

Ambikā, Candella, c. 11th century A.D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, U. P.

Gomedha and Ambikā, Candella, 12th century A. D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, Uttara Pradesh.

PLATE XXXVIII

Dharmendra and Padmavati, Candella, 10th-11th century
A. D., Śāntinātha temple, Khajurāho, M. P.

PLATE XXXIX

Nirvāṇīdevī, Candella, 10th century A. D.,
Madhya Pradesh (Author's collection).

PLATE XL

Sarasvatī, Kuṣāṇa, 2nd century A. D.,
Mathurā, U. P., State Museum, Lucknow.

Śrutadevī, Candella, c. 12th century A. D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, U. P.

PLATE XLII

Sarasvatī, Cauhān, 12th century A. D.,
Pallu, Bikaner, Rajasthan, National Museum, New Delhi.

Sarvatobhadra-pratimā (Caumukha sculpture),
Pratihāra, c. 10th century A. D., Jaghina, Rajasthan,
State Museum, Bharatpur.

PLATE XLIV

1. Ajitanātha, 2. Ajitādevī, 3. Sambhavanātha,
4. Duritāri or Prajūapti; 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XLV

1. Abhinandanānātha 2. Śreyāṃśānātha, 3. not identifiable, 4. Gaurī or Mānavī, 12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

1. Pārśvanātha

2. Neminātha

3. Padmāvatī

4. Ambikā,

12th-13th century A.D., Khaṇḍagiri, Puri, Orissa.

PLATE XLVII

Bāhubali, Cedi, 9th century A.D., Madhya Pradesh.

PLATE XLVIII

Jivantasvāmī, Cauhān, 12th century A. D.,
Khinvasar, Rajasthan, Sardar Museum, Jodhpur.

Cakravarti Bharata, Candellā, 11th century A. D.,
Deogarh, Jhansi, U. P.

Navagrahas, Candella, 10th century A.D., Deogarh, Jhansi, U. P.

PLATE LI

Nandīśvara-dvīpa, c. 14th century A. D.,
Rāṇākapur, Rajasthan.

Samavaśaraṇa, Pataudī c. 19th century A.D., Kā Mandir, Jaipur, Rajasthan.

LATE LIII

The Weapons of Jaina Deities.

Central Archaeological Library,
NEW DELHI.

57452
Call No. 704.940954 I

Author—

B. C. Bhattacharya.

Title— Jaina gow — grapeys.

Borrower No.

Date of Issue

"A book that is shut is but a block"

CENTRAL ARCHAEOLOGICAL LIBRARY
GOVT. OF INDIA
Department of Archaeology
NEW DELHI

Please help us to keep the book clean and moving.