

A report on the life of Kumarajiva and the towns associated with him
--Kashgar, Tumushuk, Kupa, Loulan, Dunhuang, Liangzchou and Chang'an-
Katsuhisa Yamada

In the middle of the fourth century, an excellent translator appeared in Silk Road. His father is from India and mother from Kucha. His first name is Jiva and family name is Kumar, He is a genius in languages. In addition he mastered philosophy and literature both ancient and his time. He devoted himself to translating Sanskrit Buddhist texts into Chinese in Chang'an during his later years. He is the last man who translated Buddhist words without misunderstanding, therefore, his superior works have been translated into 12 languages now. The writer who visited the towns and the villages associated with him would like to make a report with some photos.

Key words: Silk Road, Kumarajiva